

Overwhelmed 162

Chapter 162 Trauma

Candice's grip on the wheel tightened and she began to feel suffocated.

In a dire situation, she had reasoned, she could do it.

She was surprised that she still couldn't move the car an inch!

She was having vivid flashbacks to the moment of the car crash from three years earlier.

There were screams and cries as the car stopped moving, and then the sound of ambulance sirens.

It felt as though the sounds were just next to her head. She covered her ears in misery and slammed her forehead on the steering wheel!

Her breath was becoming very short at this point.