Chapter 15 Felt Sorry for Madelyn for the First Time

The restaurant closed at ten.

Madelyn came out. It was raining outside.

Pitter-patter, the rain covered the gray road with a shiny layer.

Madelyn didn't bring an umbrella and used her handbag to cover her head. She ran 200 meters and took shelter under a bus stop.

She was completely soaked, shaking as she held her phone and tried to call a taxi. It was difficult to get a taxi in the rain, and Madelyn waited for a long time but didn't manage to catch one.

Across from the bus stop.

A golden Continental was parked by the roadside. Benjamin sat quietly inside, watching Madelyn.

He watched her run through the rain. Her clothes were wet... And she was shaking.

In the passenger seat, sit Eloise.

In the passenger seat sat Eloise.

She had been playing on her phone for an hour and yawned boredly. "Brother, didn't you say you were going to take me for a midnight snack? It's been an hour and you still haven't picked a place... Hey, isn't that David's girlfriend?"

Benjamin lazily wiped the steering wheel and asked, "David's girlfriend?"

Eloise tapped on the car window, saying, "Yes, the one who is pretty and hot! Brother, can we give her a ride?"

Benjamin looked reluctant and said, "David's girlfriend? Not really a good idea, is it?"

"She's got a cab!" Eloise said with regret suddenly.

Benjamin looked over.

Sure enough, a blue taxi turned around and passed his car.

Eloise found David's phone and dialed it.

"What did you do as Madelyn's boyfriend, David?"

"I saw Madelyn earlier."

"It's so late and you're not picking her up?"

...

David answered carelessly, "Ah... I'm a bad boyfriend!"

Benjamin smiled when he heard this.

David was so frank!

Eloise said a few more words to David and hung up the phone.

She held Benjamin's arm and acted coquettishly, "Brother, can I invite Madelyn to play the piano at my birthday party? She's having a hard time now, and I'll pay her 20,000 dollars."

Benjamin started the car and said lightly, "She may not agree."

Eloise didn't believe it.

After a while she remembered something. "Brother, aren't you going to buy me a midnight snack? Why are you driving home?"

Benjamin reached for a cigarette and lit it.

He glanced at his sister. "Aren't you on a diet? Still thinking of midnight snack?"

Eloise was immediately won over.

She took out her cell phone and chatted with Daniel, trying to fed herself with love.

The next afternoon, Benjamin went back to the Clarks' mansion to get a file.

As soon as he got downstairs, he heard that Eloise shouted. "Brother, that Ms. Green rejected me! That's strange. She gives up 20,000 dollars!"

Benjamin was dressed in a suit and hurrying to a meeting.

After hearing Eloise's complaint, he tapped his sister on the head with the file and snorted, "If she agrees, she's as mad as you are."

Eloise was angry with a wronged expression on her pretty face. "Mom, look at him!"

Brianna sat in the hall, demurely drinking tea.

She smiled and said to her eldest son, "Last time I saw Ms. Green, I knew she is a good girl. I don't know she is David's girlfriend. What a surprise!"

Benjamin did not explain the misunderstanding.

He smiled. "David is pursuing her."

Brianna put down the English bone China cup and casually said, "Ms. Green is a gentle girl. I think she suits you better."

Benjamin restrained his expression, nodded, and left.

As Eloise watched her brother leave, she leaned in close to her mother. "I think he is still waiting...that girl!"

Brianna gave a faint smile.

"Your brother and that girl are not meant to be together because of their characters." She said to her younger daughter. "I think he is more likely to be together with Ms. Green."

Eloise perked up after her surprise.

She kept it simple. She had a plan in her head.
