

Pampered by My Ex-husband (Penny and Orlando)

Chapter 4 Hi, Mr. Fletcher

Chapter 4 Hi, Mr. Fletcher

The car door was opened.

Keely raised her foot and was about to step forward, but the young man who got out of the car was not Orlando, but his assistant, Zane.

"Mrs. Moran, Mr. Fletcher suddenly has a business talk and cannot come back for dinner tonight. Here is a gift for you."

When Keely called Orlando, she only asked him to come back for dinner and didn't say that Penny was also there.

The reason was that she thought Orlando would refuse to go home after learning that Penny was there. After all, when he was asked to marry Penny three years ago, he went straight abroad.

Keely waved her hand for a servant to take the flowers from Zane's hand. With an expression of disappointment, she sighed, "I know he's busy. Forget it, let him pay attention to his health."

Zane nodded and got back into the car.

When she returned to the living room and saw Penny, she felt unhappy again. She simply waved her hand and said, "You can go now. I'll call you when he's free."

"Okay."

Penny nodded. She didn't want to stay for dinner either.

She did not see Zane's face, only dimly the back of a man, but she knew, too, that it was certainly not Orlando.

"Actually, it doesn't matter whether he shows up today. Anyway, the divorce agreement is ready," she said in her heart.

Penny drove back to her apartment. While it was a red light, she glanced at the work group chat.

Since it was off work, her colleagues were chatting happily.

[I heard that Orlando is planning to get married this time. He spent a huge amount of money buying Royal Green as soon as it opened. He is going to decorate it, right?]

[Mr. Pratt is actually a high school classmate of Orlando. Will he get the design opportunity this time?]

[If we can design a wedding house for Orlando, the value of our studio will directly increase by more than a hundred times. His own properties are already at the top of overseas wealth lists. As a top international capital operator, coupled with the wealthy background of the Fletcher family, it is already a big fortune to be able to talk to him up close...]

Except for a few in the circle, few outsiders knew Orlando was married.

Even the media hadn't mentioned a single word.

Penny was not interested in this topic. Just as she was about to hit the gas, she got a text message from her boss, Kale Pratt.

[Kale: Come to Moonlight. The boss who was interested in the few villas you designed before is here and would like to have a personal chat with you.]

Penny took the path to interior design entirely by accident. She majored in painting, but in her freshman year, she accidentally designed a villa for one of her classmates. The villa was then fancied by a rich man and sold for ten times its original price. It was this incident that made her famous.

She then accepted an offer from her senior Kale to work as a part-time interior designer in his studio.

As for why it was a part-time job, that was a long story.

After reading the message, she turned the steering wheel.

Moonlight was the favorite entertainment venue for the wealthy young people in Chatville, and the people having fun there were all from noble families.

When Penny arrived at the Moonlight door, Kale sent her another text message.

[Kale: I can't go to pick you up. Mr. Levine asked a friend to bring you in. Wait a moment at the door.]

Moonlight had a membership rule, and Penny wasn't a member, so she could only wait for someone to bring her in.

Meanwhile, Orlando got a call from Collin. "Orlando, I have a friend I want to introduce to you at the door. Bring her in with you when you come in. It's a good chance for you two to know each other."

Colin glanced at the design in his hand and thought that Orlando would like it. After all, the decoration of Royal Green was about to begin, and his cousin Orlando was not lacking in anything but a satisfactory interior designer.

"You'll definitely like my gift this time."

Before Orlando could say anything, the music on the other end of the phone suddenly increased, and he could not hear what Colin was saying.

Colin had always been the best-known dandy in Chatville.

Therefore, Orlando had no reason not to think too much about the so-called "gift" in his mouth.

When he got out of his car, he saw a woman standing in the most prominent position, and he frowned, for the figure of the woman was somewhat familiar.

As he got closer, he recognized that the woman was Penny.

The two of them had just met in bed this morning.

When Penny was about to call Kale again, she saw Orlando coming over.

With his outstanding physique and noble demeanor, even in Moonlight where wealthy people were everywhere, he was still very eye-catching.

He was wearing a custom-made black suit, and with his cold face, he looked like a distant mountain in the dusk while walking, deep and dignified.

Orlando had been wondering why Penny had left so soon this morning, but now he was sure that Colin had paid her in advance.

"Is it you who Colin Levine wants to introduce to me?"

Penny was surprised that Orlando would offer to talk to her, but when she heard him mention Colin Levine, she thought, "Colin Levine should be the boss in Kale's mouth."

So, Mr. Levine's friend is Orlando? Is Mr. Levine going to introduce me to Orlando?

Am I really about to design a wedding house for him?"

Penny felt funny for a moment, and she said in her heart, "We haven't divorced yet, but I'm going to design a house for his next wife. Isn't it funny?"

However, I'm a designer, and there is no reason for me not to accept the opportunity to make money."

Thinking of this, she nodded. "It seems so. Hi, Mr. Fletcher."
