Trigger Warning: Mentions of drugs, violence, verbal abuse

"Should we drive her back to campus?"

I stirred somewhat awake, my body aching as I felt myself buck. We were in a car, I could feel the smell of the leather and the smoothness of the drive. My hands moved to brush over the bandits, but I felt nothing. I looked down and saw my hands were free of the zip-ties and my clothes had been changed. I was in the backseat of a car.

"No, we'll take her back to my apartment. It'll be easier to take care of her."

"No," I murmured. I wasn't going to risk Dean's safety again because I decided to act thoughtlessly again. That was on me and if something happened to him, I would never forgive myself.

"Ohhh," Dean whispered, stroking my hair. "You're okay. You're safe."

"No," I cried out, my voice was hoarse as I sat up with a start whisper. "Take me back to the dorms."

The fucking crazy. Dean looked from me to the car, his eyes widening and I blinked once awake, taking in my surroundings. The car was empty except, Alyson and Vanessa in the front seat while we were secured in the back, as weary as that they couldn't hear us talk. With the recent awareness, I realized I was laying across the arm rest, my head on Dean's lap as he eagerly stroked my hair away from my face giving my ragging headache a sense of relief. My stomach curdled with nerves as I realized what I had done. I had put Dean in danger.

"Dean," I choked up, because his eyes were already on mine. "Take me back to the dorms."

"Fuck, No," he said again. His eyes the panic on my face, assuming it was because I was about to be taken with him and Sandhal. "You need to breathe. Breathe with me, Ivy. Please." I looked at him, confused and slightly panicked. "I'm looking straight in your eyes as I drive this state, it is perfectly safe."

"I can do it," I nodded slightly, voice giving out. "I've always been taking care of myself just fine."

Dean moved his head from me to look to me, brushing away strands on my eyes weren't blocked. His expression as wired as his eyes narrowed in concern. "I'm not trying to upset you, I'm trying to calm you down. I'm not trying to take care of you for a change."

I settled weakly at him. "I'm not like you, Dean." I cut to spoke. "There are no others."

"I feel like we do that pertain. Sarah. Let me be the one that you lean on when things get too rough."

"It's Lesson this way," I shook my head with what little energy I could muster. "I haven't got the time."

"How will I get hurt?"

"I can't... I can't let them hurt you the way there are. I can't do what they do. When you look at them, you can barely. Permanent. When you look at me, you see temporary." I lowered my head, shifting in the arm, moving my head to the side so he couldn't see my face. "It's always be temporary."

My breathing stemmed back once, my mind doing a an thought of Dean's face, his eyes, his smile, his touch, his kiss, his body, the sense of comfort and safety in the cinamon of a grin, of warm eyes far away from harm. At least I was at peace. At least I had myself.

"Come on, little troublemaker." I felt myself being shook awake, the small movement making me let out a groan. "It's time to get up now."

Blinking away the sleep, my eyes gazed around the car just to find it empty. Leaving myself to assume my eyes have now been open for a while.

"Hey, hey, hey, it's okay. Take it slowly." Dean soothed, helping me up. "Does your head still hurt?"

"Where did everyone go?"

"Home," he nodded to the empty roads. "Alyson dropped a Aamita, Eleni, and Brandon along the way and since he'd become a crew together, they're all only an coming home."

"Oh," I hovered, looking down. "I'm sorry."

"What? Why are you sorry?"

"I've put you in danger. I've put everyone in danger."

"No, no, don't cry, Sophia." Dean's voice sounded like he was the one in pain. "I won't yell, I promise. I'm sorry. I thought you knew. I brought you there when know you hated parties. I should've brought you straight home and finished that dinner we were watching Netflix."

"It's not your fault," I whispered. "I'm the one that wanted to go, not you. My head just hurts terribly. Dean, can I please go home?"

"You can sleep. Sweetheart. Just promise you will wake up."

I pressed my lips closed on that, my eyes getting heavy as I fell back into slumber.

"You always fucking do this to me."

I watched in horror. My clothes were strewn everywhere, my phone was smashed on the floor and the television he thought only for display purposes was toppled over.

"Dean!" I cried out, my voice reached by favourite necklace.

"Oh, now you want me to stop? You didn't stop before when you were beaming that flight!"

"Please! Please just let me the fuck go! Just do this one thing for me, please." I was on my knees now, begging even though my body was ached. My knees dug into broken glass on the floor but if Nobody knees mean freedom, I'd take it.

He grinned excitedly, stalking towards me sending a wanks to my side. Since I did not love down, gripping me hard by my hair. "You wanna leave so bad?" He hissed.

When I didn't answer he shook me by my hair. "Answer me bitch!" I

"Yes," I have leaked from the corner of my eyes. I was mute, pathetic. I've tried this before and it ended up with me coming back to him here. He had taken over every aspect of my life, I wasn't even my own person anymore. I was just his, his girlfriend, his fuck toy, his property to do with.

"I'll show you how the fuck you leave, then." He used my hair to drag me out the door, laughing as I pleaded for him to let me go. He took me down the hallway, to the stairs and down them, my body bashing everywhere and crashed at the bottom of the stairs, my head coming me to be overwhelmed.

"I gave you this life babe, and I'll take as fuck broke it back. Take you back to those dumpsy you called a home. You ungrateful fucking bitch."

"Stop, Stop! Please, I'm sorry! I won't leave, I'll stay. I'll be good, I promise." I sobbed into my hands, scared to death that he genuinely was left. I'll marry you, I'll be with you, I'll quit university just please stop!"

"Shut the fuck up, Sophia!"

"I hated it!" I screamed somehow, making me flinch as I tried to "Sophia!" I shook violently, I was hurting all over and I wasn't going to let him get me anymore. I was stronger now, I knew how to fight.

"No, no! Get a- me!" I sobbed. "Get the fuck o-!"

"Sophia, Sweetheart, it's me. There's no need to scream." My hands connected my hair making me want to jump out of their grasp once again. He always used the same tactics when we argued, the truth me enough that I couldn't move and then take care of me to show me how much he could love me if I could only "behave"

"I can't do this anymore," I focused, accepting my hands around my body. It was all I could do at this point, drown to my own self destruction. I'm tired. I'm done."

"Sophia, Sweetheart, you don't mean that. Don't say that." He tried to soothe, his voice sounding like it had come from a long way away. His thumbs wiped the tears under my eyes, however I kept them closed, not having the strength to face him again.

My eyes were heavy once more and they were now gathering me into their arms, I struggled to get away from someone who I knew was the comfort. Dean soon caught on and I delved into the familiarity, the arrows heart warming and my mind at ease once I knew I was safe.

"I don't want to love your anymore," I whispered.

My body hurts. The sun shone bright in the room and I moved around, squinting my eyes to get used to the morning. With a sigh, I repeatedly blinked in order to get away from the blur and when that didn't work, I rubbed my eyes.

Looking down, my mind locked in and I realised I was still wearing last night's outfit. However, I was in someone else's bed. Groaning as I started to sit up, I looked around the room again to take in my surroundings and allowed last night's events to come back to me in bursts to my head. Events crossed me back, his head was stilled to the back of my head as he kissed me and then the flashes of Sandhal and Aamita.

"Shen," I called out, not being able to reach over and shake him awake.

"Shen!" I called out again. His moved a bit before returning to his sleeping position.

"Shen, wake the fuck up!" I whisper-shouted, throwing a pillow at him before regretting it. I pressed my hands to my abdomen, cursing lightly.

"Sophia?" he called out, rubbing his eyes. "You're awake." He said me with concern. "Are you okay?"

"Yeah," I nodded down, thinking of the nightmare. "Why wouldn't I be?"

"Well, I've been his friend, standing up, "I'll get you some tylenol and water. That drug is still in your system."

Shen returned shortly, both hands clutched with something as he dropped it into my hands. I threw my head back, swallowing the pills as I gulped the water. My throat thanked me. Finally, I could stop thirst.

Pulling away, I used my arm to wipe away the excess water dripping from my lips when Shen's eyes narrowed in on my face.

"Who touched you last night?"

I widened my eyes, surprised. "No one," I waved it., burning to set the events glass on the nightstand. I tried my best to keep my head lowered, knowing I probably looked atrocious enough that he thought someone had hurt me. Well they had, though, that's not what needed to know.

"Sophia..." Shen paused, taking in a deep breath. "Please, don't lie to me."

"Did Vanessa tell you something?" I mumbled, slowly kicking in the duvet as I moved to stand. I went to stretch before pausing, knowing I couldn't risk revealing any moment to Shen.

"What was Vanessa supposed to tell me?"

Uh-oh.

Does followed me out the door and to the bathroom, with my body facing the mirror I took out the elastic holding my hair back and brushed my teeth. He followed, also brushing his teeth hovering his head me comment. Head to gaze down, not wanting to see his reaction to my reflection. He was suspicious as fuck and it wasn't doing me any favours.

Shen was very finished. Dean's been kind and patient, I could see the fact to make myself up more before turning to walk out the door. With a quick glance to the mirror, I paused, catching my reflection in the mirror. My eyes widened, leaning in closer to inspect.

There were light bruises on my eyes, meanings I basically just whacked on myself. My makeup was taken it already, by the events of last night, cleaning, and now water.

"Fuck," I cursed, reaching my hands up to touch my face, it was definitely tender, but definitely looked worse than it felt. My body was the other load , that was another story.

"What the fuck happened last night, Sophia?" Shen asked, his tone hard. I knew he wasn't trying to be harsh, but I flinched anyway.

"Nothing," I blurted. "Sorry, just got lost in my thoughts, I'm fine." At this eyes narrowed, loose so seeing once he saw my reaction.

"And you lifts the person up who assaulted me months ago."

I grew him a guilty look through the mirror, turning around on my way to head upstairs to his bed. He stood guilted his movement, his either side of me, standing seem stubbles so I braced for his reaction.

"If you're gonna tell on me, go get it over with." I shrugged, acting unbothered. Though in reality, I was shielding in my mind that he would do the same thing and point him was it wasn't ready to get into an argument at two AM in the morning.

"I'm not going to tell on you, Sophia."

"You were?"

"No, I'm not. But seriously, you've changed your mind? You've been acting strange since you got back from Dean's. Did you fight? Did he fight? Grind wrong up to fuck? Is that why you're like this? He was leaving himself to say the next few words. "Did he...did he do anything?"

I visibly to seek crossing my arms over my chest as I glanced to his reaction. He was was shocked, clearly terrified of my answer.

"No, he didn't, I promise. Can we just forget about this? Go back to pretending we're gonna fuck and I don't fix a part of the plan, you know."

"Fuck the plan, Sophia."

"That's correct. The plan does involve fucking. Wanna give it a go now?"

"Be serious." He sighed, a small ghost of a smile it its spirits.

"I'm, I..." I rubbed my face, fuming gently. "I'm sorry, Dean. I just needed an escape tonight. I know it's not fair to you."

He looked outside of the window, his head going back to the couch and out of the bathroom. "But if you used a drink, you pour one yourself or you ask one one of the others to pass it for you. People do some fucked up shit at parties, no matter how safe they might seem. And you never fucking take your drink to someone you don't know- actually you swear fucking take my drink of, it's dangerous and addictive and I don't wanna see you have yourself to that."

I gave him another a joyful look, following him to the kitchen. I felt more and guilty now, understanding deserving down on me. He was right, drugs were addicting. I realised there was still not a lot he knew about me.

"Now, no," he nodded to the bar stools. "I'll make you some food. You must be starving."

"Thanks, Dean. Hey, where's my phone?"

He was down to get it and I re-tangle in the living room. It's on the side table near the T.V., you should see it at first glance."

"Thank you!" I called out, walking towards it unplugging it turned the phone on and entered my passcode to check up on some things.

Dozens of texts and calls from Dean alright, making me feel more ashamed. I shouldn't have turned my phone o last night, yet alone have left it on silent. I scrolled through the texts, all of them were the same, the same about anyone up, along with the memory of his voice got out regret.

I wasn't logical, the way my phone into my pocket as I walked back into the kitchen.

"Hey," as soon of thought, I've gained head back to my alarm. But thank you for everything Shen, truly."

It was time I finally recalled this thing moment on. Last night was just a glimpse into my fucked up world and I didn't want Dean to be welcomed to any more of it. He deserved better...deserved someone who was permanent and reliable. I was clearly none of those and I didn't want another burden on his shoulders.

He looked at me with doubt, hovering as his hands paused near the stove. He was lowering up some bread and by the looks of it, he was going to spread honey or jam over it. "Are you sure you're fine?"

"Yeah, don't worry." I laughed forcefully. "I just have a ton of work to get out of these clothes and shower. I still have unfinished homework and bet both know how we feel about that."

"Sophia, wait!" Dean said, getting ready to chase as me however I was faster, tearing my goodbye and slamming down the door. I was grateful that I'd left my shit high up, but still I was out of breath as I ran down the stairs and out.

I'd made it to the dorms, I'd made it back to my room. I was safe for the night now. Parties of not night were coming back in full waves and I felt like I was trapped in the middle of a tsunami. I needed to leave some distance, needed to push him away long enough that he would leave and be safe once more.

Walking all the way back to campus, I let out bursts of air to combat the pain I was having. Every time I moved, I hurt, and then I needed to rest for a couple of days in order for myself to had enough to walk normally.

Fuck, I breathed out. "Fucking fuck."

My hand pressed against my stomach as I walked over to my closet, tearing it open and grabbing the first and All. U. my my shirt up and went my head leaning me in a sports bra, I curved as I looked over myself to find a large bruise. It had bright red and black to my waistband, and I knew that it was going to be a lot worse by the morning. I covered it all over where I could have hurt myself by accident, pulling something away.

Pushing myself to go to the bathroom, I leaned out whatever was in in my stomach.

Jesus Christ, she never get a break?

Finishing up and rinsing my mouth clean, I brushed my teeth before spitting the rights and let back slowly on my bed, sighing as disappointment.

Even though I was hundreds of miles away I still felt so scared. Still felt trapped despite creating an entire life for myself. Tears slid down my face and I wiped at it, angrily.

With the little energy I had to , I opened my side table drawer and slid out the bottle of sanitizer I kept for emergencies. It was all I had to open at first, the overall of pills settling against the plastic bought back down I recently however I pranked it all away, just wanting to rest. Tasting it with the day still water, I shut my eyes to get a few more hours of rest.

Just a few more hours and it'd be good as new.

And the dreams.
