

Physician Wife 1761

Chapter 1761: Shi Yalin's Bad Attitude

When Shi Zhonglei first found out that his sister had been severely bullied by that slut Nangong Nuannuan, he had been so angry that he had to resist doing something to Nuannuan. Thinking about his family's long-term plans helped him resist the urge,

It was clear how much he loved his sister, Shi Yalin.

However, his sister, whom he loved so much, was now treating him the way a cruel boss treats a colleague... No, she was treating him the way a cruel boss treats a lackey!

At this moment, if it was not for the fact that Shi Yalin was his sister, Shi Zhonglei would have thought that the person standing in front of him was an imposter.

That was because right now, besides her appearance, the look in Shi Yalin's eyes, her movements, and her aura were completely unrecognizable from her usual self.

Seeing that Shi Zhonglei was stunned, Shi Yalin's eyes widened. Realizing that she had just revealed her true nature, she immediately changed her temperament. She looked dazed, afraid, and very remorseful—a shocked expression even flashed across her face.

When Shi Maicheng walked over from the corner, she hurriedly reached out and caressed Shi Zhonglei's face. With an extremely remorseful expression, she said, "I'm sorry, I'm sorry, I'm sorry! Brother, I'm sorry! I was just studying inside when I turned on the news, and it gave me a great shock. When you ran over, I didn't even recognize you. You have to forgive me!"

Shi Yalin caressed Shi Zhonglei's face, and then she quickly put her hands together in a way that would appease him. He had just recovered from the shock and was about to fly into a rage, but Shi Yalin's new attitude stunned him again. She had instantly reverted to her usual cute self.

"What's wrong?"

Shi Maicheng walked over and saw that his son's face was a little red and swollen. There were five distinct finger marks on his face—it was obvious that he had been hit very hard. He looked at Shi Yalin in shock and was about to speak, but Shi Yalin began speaking first. With an even more aggrieved tone, she said, "I was just studying inside when I turned on the news. Then, I suddenly heard someone on the live broadcast stupidly telling everyone about the Medic Association. I rushed out of the room in a rage and just happened to run into my brother. I was completely dumbfounded. I thought that he was someone else, so I raised my hand and slapped him."

Shi Maicheng, "..."

Shi Zhonglei was utterly stunned. "..."

"Are you alright?" Shi Maicheng was a very protective person. Although the interests of the family were very important and would affect all their fates, his two children were clearly more important to him.

Therefore, even though Shi Yalin had already explained, Shi Maicheng was still very concerned and had to check on his son.

"I'm fine." Although Shi Zhonglei had been hit, leaving him furious and shocked, he still believed Shi Yalin's explanation. He could not see any other reason for why she had just slapped him.

Seeing Shi Zhonglei say that he was fine even though he was clearly still in a daze, Shi Maicheng said to Shi Yalin unhappily, "Yalin, ever since you suffered that brain injury and lost a lot of your memories, we have been spoiling you. We've been spoiling you not only because you received your master's inheritance and were able to develop an experimental drug, but also because you're a part of our family—a junior in our family. We all felt sorry for you when you were hurt. However, that isn't enough reason to indulge your unending bad attitude. Do you understand?"

Chapter 1762: Second Uncle Scolds Shi Yalin

Although Shi Yalin felt disdain in her heart, she obediently admitted her mistake before the entire Shi family could get angry at her.

"Second Uncle, I know I was wrong. I was really so angry that I felt dizzy. Why else would I hit Third Brother? Am I crazy?"

Upon saying that, she looked at Shi Zhonglei and coquettishly said, "Brother, I'm sorry! I really didn't recognize you."

Under normal circumstances, Shi Zhonglei would immediately speak up for Shi Yalin when he heard her speak in such a voice.

However, Shi Yalin's attitude just now had been frightening. Thus, even when he heard her cry out for help now, he was still dumbfounded. He could not discern which of the Shi Yalins he had just met was the real one. He just looked at her in surprise.

Seeing that Shi Yalin had hurt his son like this, Shi Maicheng continued to scold her. "Yalin, how did your elders educate you? As the daughter of a first-class wealthy family, you must maintain your elegance and nobility at all times. Even if you really did mistake your brother for someone else today, even if the person who appeared in front of you was really someone else, you have to understand that this is the Medic Association Hospital, and the building you are in is its core research base. If you are not a trusted member of your own family, you will simply no longer have permission to enter this building. The staff of this building is made up of talent that the Shi family hired with a large sum of money. No matter who they are, you can't just beat them up or lose your temper as you please. I've already advised you on this the last time you lost your temper. However, this time, you not only lost your temper, but you also hit someone. If you continue this attitude, I'm afraid I won't be able to allow you to remain in the Medic Association."

Shi Yalin was shocked and hurriedly admitted her mistakes. "Second Uncle, I was wrong. I really understand my mistake now. Please don't keep scolding me. Haven't I already admitted to it?"

Shi Maicheng knew well about Shi Yalin's temperament of being cute and then brutal. However, he always felt like that was not a very appropriate description. This was because from time to time, he would feel a ruthless and bloodthirsty coldness from his niece. She was like an unforgiving venomous snake, silently stretching herself up to stand beside him.

"I hope that you really understand your mistake. I hope that this will be the first and last time this happens."

"Yes." Shi Yalin lowered her head, looking submissive. This made Shi Maicheng stop pursuing the matter.

"Since you got so angry you hit your brother, you must know what happened at the military hospital. The president has been alerted to the situation by Chi Yang. If he doesn't allow any medical institutions to intervene, there's no way we're going to be able to get that antidote. Moreover, after our people were captured, one of them specifically stated the name of the Medic Association. With Chi Yang's quick reaction, I'm afraid that once this live broadcast ends, the people from the Eagle Special Forces will immediately make their way here."

"So you also know that they're likely to immediately come for us. Then why did you waste so much time scolding me just now? They are all f*cking idiots!"

"I really don't understand how the Shi family has been able to peacefully exist in this world for so long and still maintain the title of being a first-rate noble family."

"We have to find someone to take responsibility for this." Shi Yalin did not want to argue with her second uncle about what had happened just now. The most important issue now was facing the backlash they were about to receive.

"But who?" Shi Maicheng frowned. He did not quite agree with finding someone to take the blame. Was this situation something that can be blamed on one person?

Chapter 1763: The Patients' Families Want The Medicine

"In any case, we cannot allow it to seem like they are from our Medic Association. I will ask the master's people to think of a way to station them in other medical research institutions. As for us, as long as the few of you who know about the situation don't show any fear when facing the Eagle Special Forces, there won't be any problems."

Seeing that Shi Maicheng was not at ease, Shi Yalin said, "Don't worry. I guarantee that there won't be any problems."

Upon saying that, she immediately picked up her special cell phone and placed a call to Sab.

At the military hospital, the family members of the patients watched helplessly as Chi Yang interrogated each and every one of the previously rowdy people in the crowd. It now looked like the people who had caused the most trouble and seemed the most furious were actually not related to anyone ill at all.

Moreover, almost everyone who was arrested had said that they wanted Nangong Nuannuan to hand over the medicine.

These people had to have seriously hurt either Nangong Nuannuan or the Nangong family. Otherwise, the military hospital would not have gotten involved or encouraged the people to convince Nangong Nuannuan to hand over the medicine that she had developed to the Medic Association or other medical institutions.

Among these people, the name of the Medic Association seemed to be the most commonly uttered one. Even the family members of the patients and the silent onlookers could tell what was going on.

Everyone discussed it in low voices, wondering if the country's Medic Association would really do such a crazy thing.

After all, the Medic Association used to be under the control of the Military Medical University before it was separated. Now, the Medic Association was under the control of the Shi family and no longer an unbiased medical research base that belonged to the military.

This association had brought the nation many benefits. After all, it had allowed them to invite so many famous experts from all around the world.

Since the Medic Association was the institution that seemed to be mentioned the most, Chi Yang did not continue to individually interrogate everyone. After getting his men to arrest all these people as major suspects, the military hospital arranged for the real family members of the patients to enter the wards.

The family members of the patients had regained their senses and calmed down now. Only then did the director, Qin Muyang, tell everyone about the current situation regarding the development of the drug.

Before the widespread poisoning, roughly half a month ago, there was a patient who had also come to the hospital due to being poisoned.

At that time, it was not that Nangong Nuannuan could not save him—but that that person had come in too late.

Therefore, Qin Muyang had to explain the situation to everyone so they would understand.

With any disease, the efficacy of treatments varied based on whether it was administered during the early or late stages of the illness.

Even a normal flu or fever, if left unchecked for too long, could develop into pneumonia. If this illness was not quickly treated, it could easily lead to death.

This time, many people had been poisoned.

Some poisoned patients were only suffering mild symptoms while others were suffering severe symptoms. It varied depending on the strength of their immune systems. Some were resistant, while others were not.

Therefore, even though the drug had been researched by experts from the Angel Pharmaceuticals Research Base and improved after half a month of research, whether it could help a patient recover depended solely on the patient's own immune system.

In the presence of the president, the patients' families had nothing to say.

Only Nangong Nuannuan had access to the drug.

Furthermore, she had even looked for the help of experts from the Angel Pharmaceuticals Research Base to research it during the last half month.

Angel Pharmaceuticals Research Base was the most powerful research base Sab. If compared to the Medic Association, it was certainly more powerful.

Chapter 1764: Nuannuan Monitors The Patients

Since the drug had been given to the Angel Pharmaceuticals Research Base, there were no complaints.

After all, it was good enough to be used to produce an antidote.

By the time everyone was matched to their families, the poisoned patients had already been arranged into wards.

The military hospital had specially set up an extended ward to take in these 200 patients. Looking at the medical equipment in the ward, it was clear that the entire country had put in a lot of effort in helping to set it up.

Therefore, the dissatisfaction in the hearts of the patients' families had long disappeared.

Now, they were praying for Lady Luck to shine down upon their loved ones, hoping they would not die.

Simultaneously, they hoped that the soldiers of the Eagle Special Forces would be able to solve this terrible crime as quickly as possible.

Five days later, 32 of the 217 patients died from severe poisoning. 185 gradually recovered after continuous IV treatment.

At the time, Chi Yang was busy chasing the people responsible behind the scenes. Meanwhile, Nangong Nuannuan was busy monitoring the patients in the hospital.

Among the 185 patients who were gradually recovering, more than 10 of them seemed like they would not pull through.

Fortunately, Nangong Nuannuan had been in the hospital the whole time. She had noticed the deterioration of their conditions quickly and prescribed the right medicine to counter the effects.

Just like that, she pulled those people back from the jaws of death.

Nangong Nuannuan kept a low profile in the hospital. She usually wore a huge mask when she visited the ward.

After interacting with her, the patients and their families formed a deep understanding of this girl.

Even though she was not an official doctor, she had an angelic heart when it came to treating patients.

If she was capable of doing something, she would definitely do it to save someone's life.

Even for the 32 people who died, Nangong Nuannuan had tried all sorts of drugs to help them.

Five days later, the case that Chi Yang was in charge of investigating came to a close. When he found the time to visit the hospital, he realized that his wife had lost a lot of weight.

Even though his wife was wearing a mask, the clothes that had fit her before now seemed loose.

Chi Yang just stood silently by the side so he would not disturb her work. However, as he looked at his wife, who could no longer fill out her clothes, it felt as though he was being stabbed in the heart.

With his lips pursed, Chi Yang stood upright like a pine tree rooted deeply in the soil.

Nuannuan would monitor everyone's physical condition very carefully every day. When Chi Yang arrived, he happened to arrive while Nuannuan was doing her rounds around the ward. A professor of internal medicine, Dr. Cai, was following Nuannuan around like he was her student. He listened to Nuannuan's questions and observed everything she did.

Nuannuan and Dr. Cai stood side by side. Behind them was a group of doctors and nurses.

Many people in the military hospital knew Nuannuan. They knew that she was a girl who had a strong background. She would often watch surgeries performed by the various professors. Only a few doctors and nurses, including Dr. Cai, knew that she was the genius pharmacist from Sab. Therefore, when she first developed the drug, all the other doctors and nurses in the military hospital had chalked it down to luck.

However, now, the doctors and nurses from other departments often could not help but stare at what was happening in the ward. When they saw that Nangong Nuannuan was able to independently modify the drug for each patient depending on their unique condition, everyone's impression of her instantly changed from that of a young girl freeloading off the hospital to that of a medical genius.

Chapter 1765: Nuannuan Does Her Ward Rounds

Therefore, the doctors and nurses, even the ones from other departments, would run over to follow Nangong Nuannuan every day as she made her ward rounds.

In the past five days, the number of people following Nuannuan grew from an initial seven, including Dr. Cai and two nurses who recorded the patients' vitals, to a group of nearly 15 people.

No new and young nurses were included in this group of 15 people. Instead, head doctors and nurses from the Internal Medicine Department took their spots. As for the head nurse, she took on the role of supervising the young nurses.

In light of this very unusual and unpleasant situation, the military hospital maintained the best attitude they could. Not only did they not charge the patients a single cent, but they also even moved the patients to a newly extended ward area. Usually, the military hospital wards were full of patients, with two people assigned to one room. Some would even be left in the corridors.

"How are you feeling today?" Nangong Nuannuan walked up to one of the patients and asked, observing his condition.

Nuannuan did not have to ask many questions as just by taking a closer look at the patients, she would already know all the details of their current condition. However, from the very start, Dr. Cai had insisted that she ask questions—so she abided and asked a casual question. Who would have thought that at the beginning, everyone's physical condition would be so different? When she realized that something was wrong, she would immediately suggest that the patient be examined—taking the initiative to prescribe them new medicine. This made many doctors mistakenly think that she had a different view on the idea of 'seeing, smelling, asking, and cutting'.

Just by looking at them, she was able to see the conditions of each individual patient. This led to an increasing number of doctors following her around during her ward rounds. They all wanted to learn something from how she examined the patients.

At first, the patients did not seem to be very cooperative during this doctor's rounds. However, when they realized how efficient and precise she was, their tunes changed. Now, every time they saw her, they would eagerly cooperate and tell her in great detail what they had done the previous day, how their bodies felt, and even the shape and appearance of their stool.

That was why Nuannuan had not been able to eat well the past few days and had lost weight.

It was all quite disgusting.

"Yesterday, I ate green leafy vegetables. I don't understand why my stool came out black and shaped like..."

"Stop!"

Nuannuan was so nauseated she almost vomited the food that she had eaten two days ago. She immediately stopped the patient.

"Don't worry. Based on your complexion and the degree of your pores, it does not matter what color your stool was. In the future, if I don't ask about it, you don't have to tell me."

The doctors behind her could not help but laugh when they saw how Nangong Nuannuan reacted.

Finally, their ears would not have to hear about this anymore either.

Each and every doctor had been through the same before. If they had been Western doctors, they would have simply used tools to diagnose the patients.

The patient smiled embarrassedly and moved onto a new topic. Then, he began to talk about his other problems. Nuannuan listened to him perfunctorily. After he spoke for a while, she had heard enough. She walked to the next patient.

She took a closer look and saw that the person's kidneys had changed over the past few days from the infusions they had been receiving.

Chapter 1766: A Patient's Swollen Leg

Just a few days ago, this man had been in critical condition. He had been so sick that he could barely speak, so Nuannuan had prescribed him new medication. Over the past two days, he had recovered rapidly. When she walked over to him, he pounded his chest and said, "Dr. Nangong, I feel like I'm well enough to be discharged from the hospital. My body can do anything now. You can go ahead and examine the next patient."

The man's mother pulled him aside and scolded him, telling him to speak politely and cherish the opportunity for Dr. Nangong to examine him. The man then said seriously, "Doctor Nangong, I really feel like I've improved greatly since the prescription. And not only do I feel better, but I can also see that I'm much stronger. Yesterday, they asked me to retrieve a carton of milk from a tall shelf. The carton ended up falling and almost landed on my head—I thought I was going to be seriously injured. However, I managed to react quickly enough to knock it away with just a wave of my hand. Not a hair on my head was touched. Aren't I awesome?"

After hearing him blab so much nonsense, Nangong Nuannuan walked toward him and lifted his blanket up without hesitation.

"Hey, hey, hey, Dr. Nangong, I..."

He had just finished cleaning himself that morning. Before he had the chance to put on his pants, he was told to be ready for the doctor's next round of examinations. All he had on at the moment was his underpants.

Before he could mentally prepare himself, Nuannuan lifted the blanket. He turned into a little child, trying to grip it with both hands. Eventually, Nuannuan managed to lift his blanket, revealing a pair of hairy legs. His face turned red, and he became very shy and no longer spoke.

Most of the people who had been hospitalized this time were men, and there were only a few women. Everyone knew that this Dr. Nangong was the daughter of a first-rate wealthy family. Even though she had used a mask to cover her face from the very beginning, just by looking at her fair and delicate skin and her large, watery, and beautiful eyes, one could tell that Miss Nangong was a very, very, very beautiful woman.

Although the group of men in the hospital did not say anything, they wanted to leave a good impression on Miss Nangong. Thus, even though it was a men's ward, there were no strange odors emanating from it.

When Miss Nangong removed the man's blanket, he felt like he had never felt so shy before in his entire life.

Nangong Nuannuan reached out and pressed on the man's leg.

When she pressed on it, she noticed that his leg was somewhat swollen.

The doctors were again shocked.

How was Nangong Nuannuan able to detect something that had been so well hidden?

Coincidentally, the Nephrology Department's head doctor had come that day to observe Nangong Nuannuan's ward rounds. He saw the patient's leg too.

Nangong Nuannuan asked, "How long has this been swelling up for?"

When the man saw that his leg's condition had been discovered, he was also shocked. After all, Miss Nangong discovering something you did not previously know about yourself was not generally a good thing. At this moment, he no longer felt shy or embarrassed; he was completely dumbfounded.

"I... I don't know. If you hadn't pressed on it, I wouldn't even have known that my leg was swollen."

"Has there been any change in your urination habits?"

The man thought about it nervously for a while.

“No, I don’t think so!”

“How many times have you urinated since the last ward round yesterday? What color was your urine?”

The man thought about it carefully and was actually shocked by what came to mind.

Chapter 1767: A Patient’s Failing Kidneys

“If I remember correctly, since yesterday morning, I’ve gone twice. Once yesterday afternoon, then again when I cleared my bowels this morning.”

Nangong Nuannuan knew that the head of the Nephrology Department was present. She said, “Dr. Guan, I’m afraid that this person will have to go for a kidney evaluation.”

All the doctors and nurses present were immediately convinced by her words.

She would not waste a minute talking nonsense to patients who were fine. However, no matter how much a patient beat around the bush, she would still be able to detect clues if anything was amiss.

“Okay, I will immediately arrange for someone to examine him.”

This man was very young, and his parents were sitting beside him. When they realized that their son seemed to be facing a health complication, they instantly felt very concerned.

“Dr. Nangong, will my son be okay? Is his condition very serious? Y-you have to save my son! I only have one. I-I’ll kneel before you!”

Upon saying that, the parents fell to their knees. Nangong Nuannuan was quick to react. She immediately helped his mother back up without a word.

Everyone wanted to assist Nangong Nuannuan in helping the woman up, but they realized that her strength was simply extraordinary. She lifted the fat woman up with just one hand.

“Thank you, thank you, Dr. Nangong. Then, will my son... will my son...”

After all, there were already more than 30 people who had not been able to handle the effects of the medicine. When the woman thought about the people who died, she could not help but cry.

“It won’t happen.”

It may have just been three simple words, but they gave everyone hope.

Now, everyone had a lot of trust in Nangong Nuannuan—they believed whatever she said.

When Nangong Nuannuan saw that the family was staring at her but did not dare to ask further questions, she knew that it was taking a lot of effort to hold themselves back. She could still give them some comfort by providing an accurate analysis of his situation. She could not help but say, “I may not know for certain why his kidneys suddenly deteriorated, but if I were to guess, it might be because his kidneys were unable to handle the stressful side effects of the drug. It may turn out to be very serious, but I will prescribe him some medicine to protect his kidneys right away. If his body can continue to fight until the infection clears up, and his kidneys don't completely fail, I will be able to save him. From today onwards, I will treat him with acupuncture for half an hour every day to help protect his kidney."

Hearing Nangong Nuannuan say that she would personally carry out acupuncture treatment, the man's face reddened. His family immediately thanked her profusely.

"Go for a check-up first. I'll conduct the acupuncture after completing my ward rounds. Then, I'll prescribe you some medication to help your kidneys."

His family thanked her profusely again.

After Nuannuan gave her instructions, a special nurse came over and brought the man to have his kidneys examined. Nuannuan left and prepared to go to the next ward in her rounds.

Just as she walked out, she saw Chi Yang standing in the corridor.

Nuannuan had not seen her Big Brother Chi Yang for many days. As the commander of the Eagle Special Forces, Chi Yang could only go home every day when there were no major events going on. Because he had had to investigate this case for the last few days, Chi Yang had been away from home.

When she saw Chi Yang now, this girl, who had such a powerful aura and whom had just impressed a group of doctors from the military hospital without missing a beat, instantly stopped in her tracks. She was as happy as a little bunny, jumping with joy.

Chapter 1768: Chi Yang Visits Nuannuan At Work

"Big Brother Chi Yang!"

He looked at the girl who had been expressionless behind her mask just a moment ago. She had turned into a little white bunny bouncing with joy upon seeing him. Chi Yang's cold and sharp eyes instantly softened.

Looking at his wife, who was only an intern but had already put on the hospital's white coat and looked holy and pure, Chi Yang could not help but reach out and place his hands on Nuannuan's shoulders. He took a few moments to look his wife up and down, not even realizing he had not noticed the large group of doctors and nurses behind her.

"Why have you lost so much weight? Have you not been eating and sleeping well these past few days?"

Thinking about the reason behind her not having eaten well, Nuannuan decided against mentioning it. She smiled and said, "I've been a little busy these past few days. Once everyone's recovered, I'll go home and focus on myself. Don't worry about me. But you! Look at your eyes... Your dark circles are so big! Have you not slept for the past few days?"

Nuannuan felt intense heartache whenever Big Brother Chi Yang could not rest well during his missions. She could not help but reach out to touch his tired eyes.

Just as her fingers were about to make contact with his face, she realized that she had been touching patients all day—she immediately withdrew her hand.

Chi Yang smiled. He understood the reason Nuannuan did not want to touch him right now. He pulled her into his arms and hugged her tightly. Then, he whispered in her ear in a low voice that only the two of them could hear.

“They are important, but you are more important. Don’t just focus on your work. You have to also take care of yourself. Don’t keep losing weight like this, or else my heart will ache.”

Nuannuan was embraced by Chi Yang. She leaned into his chest and listened to his strong heartbeat. The corners of her lips curled up.

She nodded into his arms. “Okay.”

Although her answer was short, it soothed Chi Yang’s heart.

Nuannuan glanced at the people around her, the doctors and nurses from the military hospital. When those women saw Chi Yang, their eyes would always focus on him. Nuannuan did not appreciate her man being stared at like this. Even if other people did not care, she did not want her husband to feel like he was constantly being watched. Thus, she said, “I’ll go finish checking on the wards first.”

“Okay.” Chi Yang did not stop her. He only gently rubbed her head as she left his embrace.

Nuannuan entered the next ward. Chi Yang also took a few steps forward and watched as she asked the patients questions. Only Chi Yang knew that Nuannuan did not really need to ask them anything—she only needed to look at these people to know everything about their conditions. However, to avoid raising the suspicion of the other doctors, she always asked some questions.

These doctors and nurses were impressed by Nuannuan’s ability to understand a patient’s condition so quickly. Therefore, almost every word Nuannuan said was recorded by the nurses. Some doctors even took audio recordings to listen back to and learn from.

Nuannuan’s small frame made Chi Yang laugh to himself.

On this occasion, he did not have much time to spare. The reason he had come here was to look for Qin Muyang. However, when Nuannuan came out of the second ward, Chi Yang was still there.

She thought that Chi Yang had finished his work, so Nuannuan wanted to hurry up with her rounds so she could go home with Big Brother Chi Yang. However, when she exited the third ward, she found that brother Chi Yang was gone.

Nuannuan stood at the entrance of the corridor in a daze and looked around. She still could not see Chi Yang. Suddenly, she felt her heart sink.

Chapter 1769: Nuannuan Completes Her Mission

Suddenly, Nuannuan felt the phone in her bag vibrate. She retrieved it and read the message she had received.

[I still have things to settle in the military. I’ll be busy for a while. You will be alone, so remember to eat well. If you manage to gain weight by the next time I see you, there will be a reward!]

Nuannuan, who was at first a little disappointed, instantly lit up when she read the word ‘reward’.

[What reward?]

She sent the message and waited for a while, but she did not get a reply. She figured that Big Brother Chi Yang was busy, so she put her phone back in her bag and continued her rounds.

After finishing her rounds, she saw that he had replied to her.

[It's confidential.]

It was only two words long, an obvious indication that he was busy. Nuannuan pouted slightly.

Hmph, he was actually keeping her in suspense!

It was too much!

Although Nuannuan did not lack anything, she looked forward to Big Brother Chi Yang's gift for her.

When she thought about it, she realized that despite having been with Big Brother Chi Yang for so long, this was the first time this blockheaded man had ever given her a gift.

Thinking about this, Nuannuan suddenly felt that it was not fair!

Other girls dating and getting engaged to their boyfriends would definitely have received many gifts.

She may not have lacked things, but that did not mean that she did not want more things gifted to her.

As the days passed, the condition of the patient with kidney problems deteriorated to a very serious state. The doctor declared that his kidneys had failed twice now. However, because of Nuannuan's daily acupuncture treatment and the kidney medication cocktail that she had developed for him, she had been able to pull him back from the jaws of death time and time again, saving him from death from kidney failure.

After the medicine and acupuncture, the patient's kidneys, which previously seemed to have completely failed, showed signs of functioning once more. Slowly, he recovered. The doctors in the Nephrology Department were eager to obtain the kidney medicine that Nuannuan had developed so casually.

Seeing Dr. Guan following Nuannuan all day long, Dr. Cai could not help judging him.

After all, Nuannuan was a member of his Pulmonary Department. Why was a professor from the Nephrology Department always following her around?

Previously, he had wanted to make Dr. Guan secretly envy him by letting him in on the secret that Nuannuan was actually the super mysterious and powerful genius pharmacist from Sab.

However, when he saw how Dr. Guan was trying to secretly learn from her even though he was already a senior—quietly sneaking into Nangong Nuannuan's temporary office from time to time, Dr. Cai chose not to say anything.

Even though he had been friends with Dr. Guan for 30 years, he did not want to reveal anything.

Most of the patients were discharged after 10 days of intravenous treatment. Only the patient who was facing kidney complications remained admitted for 17 days before being discharged.

When the last patient was discharged, Nangong Nuannuan's mission was complete.

As a senior high school student, she had persisted in the hospital for nearly 20 days and done her best to mend 185 patients back to well enough health to be discharged.

The poisoning incident was very serious. It had initially caused a panic among the public. However, under the strict protection of the Eagle Special Forces, the matter had been quickly resolved, and the culprits were brought to light.

It turned out that this incident had originated from outside the country. The culprit was a very large underground foreign organization that had been researching this poison—they felt that this poison could be very profitable.

Chapter 1770: Walker

However, after the poison was developed, these baddies found that they could not develop an antidote. In order to develop one, their people went deep into Camino and attempted to develop it through Camino's extensive and specialized pharmaceutical research capabilities.

Later, when they heard that the antidote had been developed, they started to incite public anger so they could obtain it. The reason why a wave of international criminal groups was studying this drug was that it could change genes. With an antidote, one would be able to control how much the genes would be changed.

After the drug trial and the testing of 185 now-discharged patients, it was clear that their genes indeed strengthened a little. However, it was only limited to a little bit. Moreover, even without having to tell them about it, the patients themselves knew about the toxic side effects that had come along with this minute added strength.

After all, more than 200 people had been hospitalized, and only 185 people had come out after being pulled back from the jaws of death. Additionally, it was unclear if there were more side effects that had yet to be discovered.

Therefore, even after hearing the words 'genetic modification' and "strength enhancement', the people's faces changed at the mention of this drug. They did not have the slightest desire to try it out.

In the end, after following the clues, the Eagle Special Forces finally arrested the mastermind.

This mastermind was a very big boss in the country of Yiman. After a month of following clues, they were finally arrested when they entered the country again. In the end, the Camino's and Yiman's military joined forces to take this gang down.

At present, all members of the gang had been arrested. 31 people had been arrested in the country, while 273 were arrested abroad.

Originally, Yiman was prepared to deal with these 273 people by themselves. After all, even if these people had committed crimes, they were still citizens of Yiman.

However, Camino was very firm. They believed that since these people had committed crimes in Camino, they should be punished in Camino too.

In the end, the Yiman government was pressured by international public opinion. They had no choice but to agree to Camino's extradition.

In order to prevent Walker from escaping, they sent him to a maritime prison. Afterward, the guards from the prison sent a group of prisoners to a large island between the two countries to be handed over. However, just as the two countries were about to exchange them, the leader of the organization, Walker, escaped.

The person in charge of receiving this group of prisoners was Nangong Jin. When he arrived at the border with the people from the Emperor District military base and the special combat soldiers from the Eagle Special Forces to receive the prisoners, he was faced with an apologetic smile from the Yiman military.

"General Nangong, we're really sorry. Although we have been very careful along the way, we still let Walker escape. He bribed the officers on our ship and escaped last night. This is the fault of our Yiman government. Our Prime Minister's cabinet must personally apologize to your country's president at this moment."

Since Walker had already escaped, it was useless for Nangong Jin to fuss over it. He could only accept the remaining 272 prisoners with a cold expression and leave.

When the 272 were extradited back to Camino to be punished by law, the anger in the hearts of the Caminoans finally dissipated.

Although the leader had escaped, after what happened, he would not dare to do such a bold and heartless thing to the people of Camino again.

Another five days passed. This was the 22nd day since Nangong Nuannuan had completed her mission. She finally received a call from Chi Yang.

He asked her to make a trip to the Eagle Special Forces. At the time, Nuannuan was at the Nangong family home. She had promised her brother and sister-in-law that she would represent them to participate in Lil Sun's Parents' Day event tomorrow. She had also promised to attend the parent-teacher conference.
