Chapter 1061

“Levi Garrison is still too weak. Wouldn’t it be more fun if he posed a little more of a challenge?”

Damien sighed resignedly and replied, “I have so many ways of taking him down right now! Take Zoey Lopez and that child inside her, for example. If I wanted to, I could make sure that the child won’t be born alive!”

“Exactly! Mr. Damien, we await your orders. One word from you and we’ll head off to torment him immediately!”

However, Damien shook his head. “No, no, no... Where’s the fun in that? I want to torment him to death slowly. By the time I’m through with him, he’ll realize how foolish he has been to hold on so tightly to his pride!”

“As for his wedding night, I’ll make sure nothing goes well for him, either! Tell my men to go...”

Levi was having drinks with his friends.

It was rare that his friends of “special status” could meet up.

The fact that his beloved mentor, Angus Belford, was also present made Levi feel overwhelmed with pleasure.

Angus said, “Levi, I understand your situation now. To tell you the truth, the Garrison clan of Oakland City aren’t ordinary folks. They have been around for thousand-odd years and numerous generations. Their fighting prowess is top-notch.”

“Shall I tell you some statistics? You know about Erudia’s Saber Leaderboard, don’t you?”

Levi nodded.

"Who is it?" Levi asked.

Shaking slightly, Emma asked, "Could it be Dexter?"

If there was someone in the Garrison family whom Levi owed his life to, it had to be Dexter, the Garrisons' butler.

Back then, Dexter had treated Emma like his own daughter.

He had helped her numerous times, often secretly.

Hence, he had a huge role to play in the fact that she was still alive today.

After Emma gave birth to her child, the child was taken away by Tyrone Garrison.

She had feared for her child's life and wondered if he could live on.

However, Dexter promised her that he would find a way to ensure that her child lived.

"Right on the first try! Yes, it's Dexter."

Vincent laughed coldly. "I'll tell you guys the truth. Initially, the Garrison family had no plans of letting Levi Garrison live. They took him and abandoned him in the mountains, leaving him to die. However, Dexter, that old hag, secretly left him on the streets of North Hampton instead. If not for him, Levi would have died a long time ago!"

A hush fell over the room. Emma felt as though she had just been struck by lightning.

As Levi left, Emma gazed after him, her mouth agape as she stood rooted to her spot.

I can't let this happen!

I can't send Levi straight to his death.

Emma quickly left, too, but no one knew where she was headed.

The villa in North Hampton had originally been the residence of the Gonzales family, but they had moved away a long time ago.

Now, it was Damien's year-round residence.

He was currently enjoying his wine in the enormous meeting room of the house.

He had a reputation for having a Machiavellian and deceitful personality. However, quite different from his character, he had quite a liking for hard liquor.

He enjoyed the feeling of the liquor burning its way down his throat like a ball of fire.

"Ah! That's some good stuff."

He gulped down another mouthful of liquor.

At that moment, Levi kicked the gates open and strode into the villa.

He was greeted by the sight of up to a thousand of Damien’s men, who stared him down with murderous intent.

“Take him down!”

There was a buzz as the men started running towards him immediately. However, a slow drawl interrupted their progress.

“Slow down! Let him take his time,” Damien said from inside the meeting room.

Upon hearing Damien’s orders, the warriors moved aside and opened up a narrow path for Levi to walk across to the front door. They continued to watch him closely as he stepped into the house.

Levi noticed those men were top-class warriors.

The Garrison family really hires and trains the best of the best.

Very quickly, Levi found his way through the corridors and arrived at the meeting room.

When he spotted Dexter hanging upside down from ceiling, his eyes narrowed into a thin line.

Damien is too cruel.

Levi turned livid when he noted the pool of blood on the floor below Dexter.

Damien burst into laughter. “Levi, this is the man you owe your life to! If it hadn’t been for him, you would have died in the wilderness a few hours after you were born.”

However, Tyrone turned her down immediately. "Even if I let him off the hook, I can't promise you that the other Garrison family members will do the same!"

"Tyrone Garrison! If you don't promise me this, I'll expose that secret of yours to the world!" Emma suddenly exclaimed.

"You..."

Tyrone's tone underwent a profound change when he heard that.

He roared angrily, "So much for your promise to love me for the rest of your life and to keep my secret forever! How dare you threaten to expose it to the world now, you wretched b*tch!"

Emma was forced into a corner. "I'm willing to do almost anything if it means saving my son's life. If there's anything that can get him out, I'll do it!"

"Alright, alright, I'll let him off, alright? I'll make sure to keep him alive. But there's still a problem—how will I know that you won't use this secret to threaten me again?" Tyrone asked.

"I swear I'll never use this secret against you again!"

However, Tyrone replied in a low and dangerous voice, "Preposterous. I've long understood that only the dead can keep secrets."

A shiver ran through Emma's body. She felt a little panicked by the implications of his words.

"Alright, here's my proposal. Trade your life with your son's. When Levi makes it out of there, I'll send someone to fetch you back to Oakland City!"

There was no way Tyrone would allow his secret to be leaked to the public.

Levi thought the whole situation ridiculous.

Does Damien really think he'll emerge from this without any consequences?

Has he ever considered what I might have up my sleeve?

Damien has no clue as to who will be killing who.

"Hmm?" Damien froze.

I have already agreed to spare Levi's life, but this incorrigible jerk is trying to push it.

“Alright, everyone heard that, right? He said he wanted to kill me, didn’t he? If I kill him now, I doubt my father will blame me for it. Haha...”

Just now, Damien was feeling despondent when he realized there was no way he could kill Levi without angering his father.

However, Levi had decided to dig his own grave.

This is excellent!

Damien burst into laughter.

“Levi Garrison, you’re asking to be killed, aren’t you? Don’t blame me for being too awful to you!”

Emma was now on her way to Oakland City.

She was brought before Tyrone Garrison.

It had been twenty years since the last time they met.

Now that they met each other again, Tyrone observed that the woman had changed drastically since he last saw her.

Tyrone still looked elegant and polished as ever. He still had that commanding vibe, albeit it had become more mature and made him seem even more impressive.

Tyrone had lived a perfect life from all perspectives.

Besides, he was currently poised to become the next patriarch of the Garrison family. When that happened, he would become the most respected man on earth.

On the other hand, age had significantly altered Emma's beauty. The wrinkles that crept across her entire forehead made her seem older than she really was. She was so skinny that she looked like a walking skeleton.

She was once as beautiful as a flower. Now, she simply looked like an old hag.

The two of them were a glaring contrast to each other when they stood together.

Nobody would have thought they used to be a couple...

When she saw Tyrone again, a complicated mix of emotions welled up within Emma.

Suddenly, a cold voice sounded at the door. "Ridiculous. Who said my son was brought up in a perfect environment?"

The woman sent an intimidating vibe as she glided into the room. Olivia appeared, looking as regal as a queen.

The difference between Emma and herself was obvious.

Tyrone laughed. "Olivia, I made the best decision of my life when I chose you to be my wife all those years ago."

Olivia walked in front of Emma and said coldly, "Emma, let me tell you something that might shock the skin off those pathetic bones of yours."

"My son, Damien, was never brought up in the warm environment of the Garrison residence, like you imagined. From the time he was born, Damien was abandoned at a training ground in the frigid north. During his time in training, he never knew his true identity and the Garrison family never provided him with any help. Instead, we made sure to place all sorts of obstacles in his way to ensure that he grew up strong."

Olivia continued, "Damien managed to survive those challenges because of his own strength and intelligence. We only accepted him into the family when he came of age and proved himself to be a capable warrior. His achievements surpassed those of others in his generation; no one ever came close to defeating him."

Olivia went into greater detail. "In order to create challenges for him, the Garrison clan spent tens of billions and lost more than three thousands of our men! Back at the training grounds, there were about eighty other recruits who trained alongside Damien, but only one could emerge alive. Damien was the one who killed off the rest and walked away as the victor!"

Olivia froze before replying, "Do—do you mean you'll kill Emma Jones?"

"Yes, of course. Does a b*tch like her really think she has any right to bargain with me? As for extending her life by a few more months, that's never going to happen!"

Tyrone was deathly afraid that his secret would be exposed.

Emma had to go, and she had to go now.

He had only agreed to her demands on the surface.

Oh, what a shame. Emma has been tricked again.

Tyrone was never someone who took his promises seriously.

Besides, Emma was holding onto a secret that could have a devastating impact on his future within the family. He would be stupid to let her live.

He arrived at her cell.

Emma had already figured out his intentions. "You're here to kill me off, aren't you?"

Tyrone raised his right hand into the air.

In a moment, he would swing it down and bash it against the top of Emma's head.

Emma could feel the wind as Tyrone brought his fist down with a whoosh.

She was only a few moments away from death...

Right before his fist made contact with her head, however, Tyrone froze.

Emma waited for a few moments with her eyes shut, but nothing happened. She opened her eyes timidly.

"Aren't—aren't you going to kill me?" she asked tremulously.

Tyrone gazed at her with a complicated look and didn't say anything. He turned and left the room.

He slammed the door shut behind him with a loud bang.

Emma's eyes glittered as she understood what was going on.

Tyrone feared the consequences of killing her.

He was afraid that Emma would've already told his secret to her son and he did not want to take that risk.

If Levi already knew his secret, he would definitely expose it once he found out that Emma was dead.
