Chapter 1451

“Eh?”

Thierry’s proclamation had left the crowd speechless.

“Is that all?” Dragonus demanded in disbelief.

Even with the secrecy that the Great Family of Eastford operated in, they had still suffered tremendous casualties.

It was inconceivable that Thierry was just going to let it go.

“That’s right! For all the casualties that we have faced, I’m going to need an explanation!” Lesale spoke up.

“Even if I were to let it go, I couldn’t deny Frostbringer the taste of blood,” Albus said coldly.

“Frostbringer wouldn’t agree! The three hundred thousand strong of Frostford wouldn’t agree!” shouted the men of the Great Family of Frostford, the volume of their combined voices thundered throughout Lake Westia.

“Give me one good reason to!” Albus glared at Thierry.

“You have all been deceived!” Thierry protested weakly. “It’s not what it looks like! Levi wasn’t the one to kill all your men, somebody had him framed!”

“How do you explain the evidence, then?” With a wave of his arm, Albus’s men came forth bearing the evidence he referred to.

The others blatantly laughed at Thierry's revelation.

"Thierry, since when did you become so timid?" they jeered. "How easily frightened you are by a nobody like Levi!"

"You're so afraid to face him that you've concocted a delusion that Levi is the Crown King. Are you lying to us or lying to yourself?" Albus demanded.

"That's right! The Crown King had fallen down Mount Drago. He couldn't possibly survive that. Even if he does, what is his connection to Levi?" Lesale asked.

"I..." With his trump card viewed as a farce, Thierry had nothing left to say.

Despite the consequences it entailed, he had already let slip the secret truth about Levi's identity, which was treated with derision.

Given that they had reacted to this piece of news with mockery, Thierry was not able to prove Levi's innocence.

"It doesn't matter if you are not in favor, Thierry. You're outnumbered three to one. Westford has to conform!" Albus said triumphantly.

The rules are the rules.

"Don't say I didn't warn you. You're picking a fight you have no chance of winning," Thierry said with a sigh.

Despite George's reassurance, Zoey remained anxious.

"How did he manage to offend the Great Family of Frostford?" she whispered.

Zoey had heard her grandmother mention once before that Frostford was the most powerful of all the Great Families. Not even Westford was foolish enough to cause trouble with them.

The Four Great Families were waiting expectantly on the banks of Lake Westia.

"Brothers, there is a fighter of astounding skill that has been standing guard over Levi over the course of his infirmity. As a result, we must exert more effort than was expected to apprehend him." Albus was busy making arrangements.

"There is just the two of them as opposed to our vast number." The others were brimming with confidence.

The last time all four Great Families united, even the Dragonites had to surrender.

It was a show of force not to be underestimated.

"This will be the last time I'm warning you. Let this go while you still can!" Thierry spoke up again.

The atmosphere grew tense to the point that was beyond Thierry's control.

Well, here we are.

"Come and get me, then." Levi smirked.

After the battle at Mount Drago, his mental strength and martial skills had grown exponentially.

"Kill him!" The men shrieked, their voices echoed over Lake Westia like a maddened warcry.

"By the name of the Four Great Families, Levi Garrison is hereby sentenced to death!" Albus roared.

Having been denied it for so long, he was anxious for vengeance to be exacted.

At that point, Dragonus stepped forward. "Brothers, may I speak?"

"Speak, Dragonus! You have earned the right to as the fearsome and loyal warrior you are. With the famed power of your fists, you are a talent from Eastford that appears once every hundred years. I am unashamed of the fact that not a single youth from Frostford can contend with you." Albus was generous with his praise for the young warrior.

"He is a fighter with skills beyond his age," Lesale added in admiration. "I have met masters who have lived beyond two centuries who are still no match for Dragonus."

"The most astounding ability of his is to survive for up to a month underwater! It was with this skill that he had developed agility and strength that is unattainable by any mere mortal."

"North, you're up!" said Levi softly to the man next to him.
North Sky Lord dashed forward to meet the onslaught.
Though his martial skill was not up to par with Levi's, he was still the best fighter of the Calamity.
North Sky Lord decimated their ranks, leaving them no room to defend themselves.
Those that had managed to get close to Levi had been beaten back before they could lay a finger on him.
Despite being grossly outnumbered at several hundred to two, the fighters of the Great Families were easily subdued.
In a frighteningly short amount of time, the ground was covered in bodies.

Albus and Lesale were flabbergasted at the outcome.

What kind of power is this?

These were trained warriors whose corpses now littered the ground!

Thierry however was not surprised.

Compared to the battle on Mount Drago, this is child's play.

"Don't just stand and watch, Thierry! Summon your men!" Albus shouted.

"To hell I will!" Thierry was not a big enough fool to send his men to their deaths.

“Eh?” The men exclaimed, flabbergasted at George’s public display of his unexpected allegiance.

The best fighter of Westford is on his knees before Levi?

What is going on?

After witnessing the defeat of the others before, George remained their best hope at defeating Levi once and for all.

“Master, forgive me for my late arrival!” said George to Levi.

“Not at all, you’re just in time,” said Levi, courteously.

“Master?” Albus repeated incredulously, unsure if they had heard him right.

Did George just address Levi as “Master”?

“What are you doing, George?” Albus shouted. “You’re embarrassing the Great Family of Westford! Have you no shame to kneel before some young hotshot despite being two hundred years old?”

“He’s right. George, you’re bringing shame to the rest of us,” came several other disdainful voices.

“Can you beat him?” George asked as he looked around at his accusers.

“We...” The men found their throats constricted by the truth in George’s words.

With the newfound loyalty of the Four Great Families, Levi's forces had grown to unfathomable proportions.

"We still have to subdue the threats that are lurking beneath the surface," Levi announced. "Our mission is to channel their untamed strength and mold them for the service of Erudia."

This was a mission for the Four Great Families to execute.

"The most important thing is that my identity and your allegiance to me must be kept secret. I will not hesitate to kill the one who lets slip of that!" Levi shot a warning glare to the men.

"Yes, sire!" they shouted with vigor.

"Sire, there's something I don't understand," Albus spoke up. "Who was the one who had instigated us to kill you?"

At that point, it was clear that there was an attempt to drive a wedge between Levi and the Four Great Families.

"They are a powerful group not to be underestimated. It was they who had orchestrated the events at Mount Drago. I have a feeling that they will show up very soon."

The next stage of Levi's plan required the unwavering support of the Four Great Families. Thus, Levi had briefed them on the role that the Avengers had played in sabotaging their alliance.

The crowd was livid.

"We must avenge ourselves against the saboteur!"

"Sire, the Avengers are unaware of your true identity, hence they will be under the impression that by driving a wedge between us, we will have you killed. How are we supposed to maintain the appearance of our animosity toward each other?"

Albus was visibly shaken by the extent of the Avengers' influence.

With his appointment for such an important task, Shaun's authority was vast.

He had the power to determine who was worthy enough to attend the unification ceremony.

Of course, the attendance of guests above Shaun's social class was not up to him to decide.

In Shaun's eyes, Levi and his family were beneath him.

“Will this displease Cora?” somebody asked tentatively.

“The most prominent figures of the Four Great Families would be in attendance,” Shaun said with a smug smile. “The old lady has no standing. There is nothing she could say to reverse my decision to bar Zoey and her family from attending such an important ceremony.”

“You’re right. We’ll do it your way then!”

The day of the unification ceremony arrived.

The important figures in all of Erudia had received their invitations and accepted them with fervent expectation.

It was too good of an opportunity to miss.

The spots were limited, therefore rendering each and every invitation sent out to be priceless in value.

Zoey was taken aback. She stared disbelievingly at Levi.

Though Levi had recovered and was back to his old self, that did not mean that he could blatantly disrespect the Four Great Families.

Furthermore, the Four Great Families had been merged into one. It was unprecedented in the eyes of the world.

How many people had fought tooth and nail just to be considered for an invitation?

This unification ceremony was considered by many to be the social event of the millennium.

With such prestige placed on the ceremony, Levi had blatantly disrespected it.

Surely that is delusional and egoistic.

"It's Grandma's way of punishing us by not letting us attend, whereas everyone else gets to go," said Zoey reproachfully.

"I don't even know how you had managed to offend Albus to have Mr. Langston beg for mercy on your behalf." She sighed.

"Zoey, do you really wish to attend the ceremony?" Levi gazed at his wife.

"I have considered it," said Zoey truthfully. "It just doesn't feel right to be absent when everybody else gets to attend."

"That's settled, then. We'll be attending as well!" Levi answered immediately. "We'll bring Mom and Mia along!"

Zoey was trying hard to steady her breath.

“Says me! What about it?” The sound of Levi’s voice came at that moment.

“Levi, how dare you show your face here?” Shaun shouted in a fury.

“Why can’t I be here?” Levi chuckled in disdain.

“This is the unification ceremony of the Four Great Families. Did you receive an invitation?” Shaun demanded.

“No, I did not.”

“How brazen of you to show up without an invitation. Get lost!” the crowd shouted.

“Levi, the spots for attending this ceremony are limited. Besides, I was the one who had decided on who to invite and where they were to be seated. It would be impossible for you to sneak in unnoticed.”

“Don’t even think about currying favor with the Four Great Families,” Shaun continued. “I suggest that you give up now.”
