Chapter 1571

Anyone with eyes could judge Levi's training for themselves.

Indeed, Xaire didn't exaggerate, for it was really no different from child's play.

The practices were so basic that it couldn't get any simpler.

Worse still, they had to practice with a child.

The training plan included carrying water, hiking, and practicing Taichi.

Sorry to say, but they weren't there to work out for fitness purposes.

Instead, Hidden Dragon's purpose was to cultivate Crown Kings.

Thus, it was no joke.

Filipe and the others had oftentimes expressed their objection toward Levi being an instructor, but Darian vetoed their protests.

Now, however, it had gotten completely out of hand.

Since the disciples themselves were staging a protest, the problem snowballed.

"Even an apology is of no use now! We all demand that Levi Garrison be dismissed as an instructor! Otherwise, we're all quitting!"

Anticipation hung heavy in the training base.

Conversely, that matter hadn’t much of an effect on Levi. He was merely training them incidentally while training Forlevia.

After returning to North Hampton, he went to visit Floyd and the others.

All one hundred of them trained desperately, forgoing sleep and food.

Harboring a blazing resentment within them, they strove to improve themselves with their strong motivation.

“We’re indebted to you! You’re our savior from here on out, and we’ll go through hell for you!”

Floyd and the others fell to their knees before Levi.

“I’m similarly glad that you’ve all recovered and became stronger.”

Levi smiled at them.

Then, he smilingly said to the few people Lance arranged to protect him, “Why don’t you guys join them? You don’t have anything to do anyway.”

Having had his permission, the few of them ecstatically joined the training.

Everyone interjected in agreement.

Whoa! That's scary. In fact, it's downright petrifying! What secrets exactly does this world hide? And those secrets are only known by a selected few!

The thing was, even the Dragonites' knowledge of things was only the tip of the iceberg.

"Nonetheless, we've got to make preparations actively. For example, the implementation of the Hidden Dragon project, in hopes of nurturing a few warriors comparable to Northern Demon. After all, the crisis may befall us anytime!"

The top brass of the Dragonites was truly afraid of the imminent arrival of that day.

Anyhow, they needed to take all steps possible to gird up their loins.

Meanwhile, in a wooden house in the snowy Northeast City...

Obsidian Dragon and the others were also desolate.

They had sent out plenty of people to investigate, but there were no leads at all.

It seemed as though no one was protecting Levi.

"I can't wait anymore! I can't stand the fact that the man who killed my son is still alive!"

"Exactly! We want to avenge our brother!"

The eyes of Obsidian Dragon and Kuro Dragon's two brothers blazed scarlet with murder.

On the contrary, the first batch of disciples in Hidden Dragon who failed continued improving swiftly.

Now that Floyd and the others had truly grasped the meaning of the set of ancient techniques, they grew increasingly stronger.

Verily, the effect was even better than Levi had anticipated.

To top it off, there was even hope that they would realize the hope of the Dragonites—to cultivate three Crown Kings.

This time, it truly seemed to be a hope within reach.

“Practice for a while longer, and you guys can then have a match with the second batch of disciples of Hidden Dragon.”

Upon hearing that, Floyd and the others were over the moon since they finally had the chance to prove themselves.

“Let me tell you that they’re very strong! As such, you’ve got to train doubly hard!” Levi roared at them.

It was all in his plan to stimulate them mentally.

Floyd and others clenched their fists tightly as sparks flashed in their eyes.

“We want to win and prove to Erudia that we’re not cripples! In fact, we’re the strongest!” everyone shouted.

They had been holding onto their resentment for a long time, just waiting for the moment to finally unleash it.

Someone merely made that remark casually, but it stirred up a storm among the crowd.

Surprise inundated everyone there.

Good Lord! That seems to be true! Indeed, this aberrant stagnation only started after Levi left. Ever since we stopped attending his training plan, our progress came to a standstill. For such a long time, we seemingly haven't improved the slightest bit!

At the direction of their thoughts, shock was etched on each of their faces.

Could it be a coincidence or it's really because of Levi?

Filipe, Xaire, and the others realized that as well.

All at once, they broke out in a cold sweat.

If that's truly the case, then it's downright scary!

A shudder racked Collin.

In truth, he was one of the few present who believed in Levi.

"I think that's entirely possible. Ever since Mr. Garrison left, our disciples have ceased to improve. Besides, we can't figure out any other possibilities now. We've never considered him part of the reason, so it's certainly plausible that their progress was all thanks to him and had nothing to do with us."

Subsequently, Filipe took out the drug.

"If one uses the entire bottle here, one's strength would instantly shoot up tenfold. However, the price would be the total exhaustion of one's life force, resulting in immediate death!"

Hiss!

Hearing that, Luther sucked in a breath.

"So, you're planning to use this drug so that the disciples will improve in a short period of time and show Erudia the results?" Luther queried.

"Yes, that's right! We can attain the desired effect with just a small amount of it. And so, Erudia will be satisfied!"

Filipe nodded in affirmation.

"Indeed, it'll be effective, and Erudia will also be satisfied. But the disciples will be ruined! Even if you only use a smidgen, it'll still be draining them of their lives! Their entire lives will be wrecked!" Luther exclaimed.

While consuming the drug, they would improve significantly and become stronger.

But once the drug passed, their lifespan would be exhausted, and their life force leeched.

At that time, they might not even be able to survive, much less become peerless warriors.

This cruel method is unfair to them!

Everyone attained the result they wanted, and Levi was the first person who came to mind for Xaire.
He couldn't wait to have Levi see how strong he was right then.
In fact, he was the disciple with the strongest yearning to be on par with Northern Demon.
He was buoyed with confidence, looking down on everyone other than Filipe.
"I'll be hosting an international competition three days later specifically for the younger generation like you all. Talented warriors from ten countries will be participating then, and they're not weak. Therefore, we've got to work hard!" Filipe announced.
In reality, it was mainly for the purpose of testing the results of the special training.
He wanted to convince Erudia in order to bag even more benefits.
Coincidentally, other countries were also conducting special training similar to Hidden Dragon, all making preparations actively.
Thus, Filipe utilized his connections and status to host an international competition.

“Mr. Jourdain, we must invite Levi Garrison and show him our capability!” Xaire hollered.

In the end, Darian personally went to look for Levi and told him about the international competition.

Filipe kept all his attention on Levi despite being far away.

A look of bloodthirst flashed in his eyes.

No one had noticed it all the while, but Levi did.

Upon hearing what Levi had said earlier, Xaire and the others glared at him furiously. “What do you mean by that?”

"I'm telling you to stop the training right away, or you're going to suffer," advised Levi sincerely. "Even if you don't die, you'd end up completely disabled."

The drug was consuming their vitality- in other words, their lifespan, by the second.

Not even the Reversero technique, would be able to save them.

"Huh? Could you explain yourself more clearly, Levi? What on earth are you trying to say?"

Everyone was confused.

"In other words, you're taking drugs that help to boost your strength. But this is only temporary, and you're giving up your lifespan in return!"

More importantly, Levi had no proof at all, whereas Filipe had produced tangible results.

Hence, Erudia and the Dragonites had absolute trust in Filipe.

That was why Levi's act of calling Filipe out was simply seen as an attempt to sow discord.

Levi gazed at the crowd sternly. "Fine. In any case, I've left you a warning. If you want to keep training, suit yourself."

"You're nothing but an ingrate, Levi!" Xaire fumed.

Disregarding them, Levi turned and left.

Filipe and Luther exchanged glances, their eyes full of murderous intent.

It looks like Levi's discovered something. In that case, our best option is to get rid of him.

Only the dead will stay quiet!

Meanwhile, Collin maintained his gaze on the two men.

Despite being one of the three instructors, he never had much of a sense of participation since Filipe and Luther would always leave him out in their plans.
