Chapter 1721

Although those affiliated with Eragon had contributed to the victory of the war, it was undeniable Levi deserved the most credit since he had taken care of most of their foes by the time Eragon showed up.

On top of that, Levi had smashed Deicide into pieces and consumed the energy stored within the energizer, including the upgraded ones, to ensure the safety of the rest.

Otherwise, Deicide could easily turn the table even with the aid of those affiliated with Eragon.

In short, Levi was the one who had led Erudians to success. Therefore, they wished he would make it out alive.

They were determined to get their hands on the remains of the honorable man even if he had passed on during the fight.

As they continued searching high and low for his remains, their effort was to no avail since no one was around.

“Master is no longer around! I saw him being wiped out of existence in front of me!”

“Deicide is such a horrifying weapon! I can’t believe it possesses the capabilities to wipe a man out of existence within seconds!”

Byron felt increasingly unease and thought Levi had his eyes on him. He felt as if Levi would show up at Zarain to bring him away soon.

With that, Byron told his brother about his concerns.

Unamused, Bruce reprimanded, "I'm pretty sure something's wrong with your brain! I'm going to repeat myself for one last time—Levi has passed on in front of thousands of people!"

In order to get rid of his brother's trauma, Bruce acquired the aid of countless psychologists and had Byron go through several counseling sessions.

“We need to avenge our comrades of The Calamity as well as those who had sacrificed themselves for a greater cause!”

Levi had shown up with a sword made out of an iron meteorite that was once possessed by North Sky Lord.

It was called the Northern Excalibur, and it wasn’t an ordinary sword. It was the symbol of their comrades’ determination to protect the nation.

Levi was no fool—he had long gotten himself ready to flee the scene since he was well aware of Deicide’s destruction.

Although he was ready to sacrifice himself for a greater cause, he had no intention to sustain a meaningless blow since it was one of his principles to keep himself alive at all costs.

He had always shared his principles with his comrades ever since the day he was appointed the commander.

Otherwise, there wasn’t anyone they could defend if they were no longer around to keep the defenseless civilians safe.

Therefore, Levi had no intention to brace himself through Deicide’s attack since he might end up being injured but not dead since his body was sturdier than an ordinary person’s after going through the training with his mentor.

Many people had fled the nation and surrendered their citizenship during the war.

The officials of Zarain, Raysonia, and Keerea had been welcoming Erudia's talents to migrate to their nation.

According to the latest tabulation, Zarain had welcomed a total of five hundred and seventy thousand people whereas Raysonia and Keerea had accepted a total of four hundred and twenty thousand, and three hundred and thirty thousand people respectively.

The professionals were included in the list, but those who had sneaked into the country weren't on the records.

In other words, there were much more than they could ever imagine.

Nonetheless, it was a great attempt to flush out the disloyal ones since they valued nothing above their personal gain.

To the traitors' surprise, the people of Erudia managed to defend themselves from the foes of the country.

Thus, those who had fled ended up in an awkward situation as they couldn't make up their mind if they should make their way back to Erudia.

"He's right! If anything happens to us, I'm certain that they'll rush to our rescue without a second thought!"

The party felt a sense of relief as it was written all over their faces.

They were glad they could consider themselves superior to those from their home country and continued having the best time of their lives in Zarain.

Most importantly, they weren't against the idea of taking advantage of their parents at all. They were determined to make full use of their family's influences for their personal gain.

Nevertheless, they were right because Harry and the rest would never leave them alone if they were aware that their successors were in deep trouble.

Thus, Henry and his friends made up their minds to stay at Zarain for as long as possible.

They had no choice but to give in since Jared might take them out without a second thought should they try to defy him.

It's just a piece of cake to figure out Jared's goals! He's trying to ruin Zoey and her family from within! In order to achieve his goal, we're the pawns he needs!

Nonetheless, Jared honored his promises and allowed Fabian and his peers to enjoy the most premium lifestyle they could only long for in Zarain.

Things were no longer the same for them as Jared promised to appoint them honorable knights and nobles as soon as he was appointed the king of a nation.

Henry and his peers thought it wasn't such a bad idea to join Jared since they wouldn't get to live such a promising life in Erudia.

They would always be deemed inferior to Zoey and Forlevia due to the contribution of Levi. However, things were different as long as they were a citizen of Zarain.

They wouldn't have to rely on others apart from Jared. Thrilled by the thoughts, they started celebrating again.

The news of Jared being appointed as the king of a nation made it to the headlines and garnered attention as well as support from former Erudian.

When the others heard Henry, they exclaimed, "You're right! They're way too stubborn for their own good!"

"Actually, we're not really affiliated with those from Zarain anymore ever since we're a member of Mr. Schmidt's personal party."

"Since he's going to build another safe haven for fellow Erudians, I don't think there's any wrong with it! In fact, the members of his team are Erudians as well!"

"Indeed, we're just trying to build safe haven for our fellow countrymen! Why does that make us traitors? Our predecessors need to be proud of us since we're honoring the nation wherever we are!"

The shameless bunch had just justified their betrayal and thought they were the righteous ones instead of others.

On the other hand, Jared continued getting in touch with migrants from Erudia. Things had been going well since most weren't against the idea of joining him.

However, the people of Erudia and Dragonites got increasingly infuriated the more high profile Jared became.

Unfortunately, they could merely condemn the shameless bunch.

They secretly prayed for someone to show up and shatter their ambitious goal into pieces. It was time for Jared to learn his lesson for betraying his country.

Although they knew those might remain a wish for a long time, they couldn't help but keep hoping and praying.

Iron Shield Laboratory was one of the many laboratories affiliated with Zarain. The laboratory was in charge of countless highly confidential researches.

Byron had spent most of his time there to take care of his damaged body parts. On top of that, he thought it was a great idea to stay hidden in a well-secured compound.

He felt a sense of security since Bruce had dispatched a Rank Six combatant to guard him just to ensure his safety.

To be precise, the combatant was merely a step away from being a Rank Seven. Thus, no ordinary Rank Six was a match for him in terms of combat skills.

Although most of the members of the Ruling Union had a bodyguard of Rank Six, none of them were as capable as the one Bruce sent Byron.

Byron still had to rely on the aid of psychologists just to bring himself to sleep due to nightmares.

"Mr. Byron, Mr. Schmidt will be appointed the king of another nation today. Mr. Johnston wants you to join them at the coronation ceremony."

Byron shook his head and insisted, "Just tell my brother I'll sit this one out!"

The ones around him went dead silent when they heard his seemingly arrogant remark.

Similarly, Byron, who had a great time savoring his breakfast, scrunched up his face in irritation when he heard the intruder.

Clank!

He dropped his utensils when he found out the intruder was there for him.

Similarly, the ones affiliated with the laboratory looked at the intruder in disbelief and thought they had been hearing things.

Seriously? Has Byron's premonition come true? Has someone really made his way to Zarain just to take Byron into custody? It turns out he hasn't been lying all this while!

As those around him lost themselves in a train of thoughts, Levi instructed in a callous tone, "Hand him over to me immediately to avoid a fight!"

They finally snapped out of bewilderment and returned to their senses. Similarly, they had regained their composure and thought it wouldn't be necessary for them to be intimidated since they were still at Zarain.

In spite of taking out countless men within seconds, not even a single drop of blood could be seen on the blade of the Northern Excalibur.

Jameson gaped at the presence of the insanely strong figure in front of them. He wasn't aware that that was merely the beginning of a massacre.

Levi continued taking out the ones getting in his way before the startled bunch could grasp what was going on.

Swoosh!

It wasn't much of a challenge for him to take those defenseless men out since his subordinates of Rank and Rank Six could easily take out Supreme class fighters.

Those with advanced machinery and equipment weren't a match against the almighty Levi as well. All it took was one of Levi's powerful strikes to shatter their armors into pieces.

Not even the sturdiest material could withstand a strike of the almighty Northern Excalibur. Thus, those with armors were sliced into half as though it wasn't a big deal.

Shortly, he made his way to the training base.

He thought those in front of him weren't much of a threat when he could easily take care of those affiliated with the Ruling Union at ease.

Jameson's mind was all over the place as the brutal intruder continued marching his way in their direction.
