Chapter 2701 No Way Out

The incredible force destroyed everything in the ocean and was so terrifying that it felt as though it could evaporate the entire ocean.

Death Fiend and the others were at the front, and they realized that they were in grave danger.

Hence, they quickly shielded themselves with their Impenetrable Armor and their divine tools.

“Urk!”

“Ah!”

Unfortunately, the attack was too powerful, and many were thrown backward.

They were severely wounded.

Even fighters as powerful as Donald were injured as well.

Fortunately, their Impenetrable Armor and divine tools took some damage for them and shielded them.

However, Death Fiend and his friends remained unscathed though.

They had drunk the blood of Gods from Restricted Area 76, so their physical attributes were beyond that of a normal human being.

That was why they were able to withstand the attack and were immune to the mucus’ harmful effects.

Edmund, who had mastered the Iron Golem Technique, also survived without a scratch.

On the other side of the ocean, Lab of Gods was scanning and analyzing Death Fiend and the others.

Dr. Erebus had created a system specifically for the purpose of figuring out whether their opponent was God from Restricted Area 76.

Erebus’ machines reacted to their blood, so they

As suspected, they started humming once more, and it seemed they were going to attack the shore.

Voom! Voom!

All anyone could really do was to keep retreating.

There was nothing else to do.

Boom! Boom!

The shoreline endured a devastating attack, and the loss incurred was tremendous.

The members of Lab of Gods were grinning like maniacs when they saw how indestructible Leviathans were.

“Now, do you understand how powerful Leviathans are? Nothing will work against them, and we will bring our enemies to their knees with our most powerful attacks!” shouted Mr. X excitedly when he saw how everything was being played out.

There was no point in keeping anything a secret anymore, and it was better to just attack head-on.

Everything else had failed, and at that point, Lab of Gods would definitely be exposed.

Under those circumstances, it was better to just step out of the shadows and attack directly while assuming their identities as members of Lab of Gods.

Leviathans were too powerful.

Their next attack freed up the space, and they would reach the land soon after.

Those words gathered everyone around.

"What is it?"

Everyone turned around. They seemed as eager as wolves that finally found food after starving for days.

It was so crazy that their eyes would pop out of their sockets if it were physically possible.

"Do you guys still remember Erudia's Project Atlantis from fifteen years ago?" asked Gary.

Chandler nodded right away and replied, "Of course I do. That project has another name, and some called it the Dragon Palace Project. If I remember correctly, my predecessor was the one who kick-started it."

Every other Erudian nodded.

Many were unaware of the existence of that project, but the leaders of Dragonites knew all about it.

Gary nodded. "That is the legendary underwater project that prompted eight hundred thousand Erudians to go missing for six long years. Neither their friends nor their family knew where they were, and it was as though they had disappeared into the wind. Truth was, they had gone to work on this project."

"Yeah, I know about it. That project was eventually scrapped midway because it was too big. The technology, resources, and finances at the time weren't sufficient, so the project had to be abandoned."

Most leaders were still confused at that moment.

Craig explained, "How do you think our enemies would assess the current battle situation?"

"I am sure they have nothing to fear since they can crush anything in their way with Warmachines. Any defense will crumble like a piece of paper in the face of brute strength. I understand now! You're saying that our enemies are overconfident in their capabilities, so they will come here to check out the circumstances even if they know that we are setting them up because they are not afraid of us."

Craig was impressed. "Exactly! That is our enemies' mentality. They will take the bait as long as we try to lure them. It doesn't matter to them even if they deviate from their offensive path. After all, they are under the impression that conquering Erudia is imminent.

After finalizing the plan, Craig contacted Gabriel and the others to inform them of the plan.

Craig had requested for them to keep their strength while harassing the enemies in an attempt to buy more time.

Meanwhile, Gary had accessed the top secret file.

He took a deep breath at the sight of the Atlantis project's content.

However, that wasn't the time to scrutinize the material.

"Remember to follow them but do not attack or harass them! Our motive is to figure out what they are up to," Mr. X reminded.

Craig and the others were actually making a risky move as well. They were betting on Leviathans to go after them.

Otherwise, Erudia's fate would be dire.

Craig and the others were anxious when they saw Leviathans staying put.

They finally let out sighs of relief when those Leviathans chased after them as their plan was halfway through since Leviathans had taken their bait and stepped into the trap.

All they had to do next was to lure Leviathans to the designated location.

"What's going on?" Levi, situated not far away, was stunned.

He was in pursuit of the group along with Mutant Number Thirteen and Fearsome Four until they had arrived at the coastal area.

Levi had asked the others to continue looking for Lab of Gods while he observed the turns of events in secret.

He was waiting for an opportunity to make his move as he was aware of Leviathans' formidable power in crushing everything in their way.

Chapter 2706 Levi Is Trapped

Mr. X came to a revelation at once.

They were facing an unpredicted predicament as the plot they took lightly turned out to be a huge trap.

“Oh no! Send someone to inspect the location where Leviathans disappeared immediately. I want a report on the situation as soon as possible!”

Everyone in Lab of Gods felt insecure now.

They were worried despite knowing Leviathans’ indestructibility.

Even though Leviathans were disconnected from Lab of Gods, they adhered to their final command, which was to pursue the escaping army ahead of them and not attack them.

Treading on the heels of Leviathans, Levi sensed the peculiarity of the place too. That area was filled with high levels of disordered energy.

He could feel the changes in his surroundings more vividly than the others as he was traveling without an underwater vehicle, unlike others.

The subsequent journey became more arduous after passing through the zone.

A few underwater vehicles sustained damage because of the obstacles in their way.

After all, Leviathans had lost their target after demolishing all the unmanned drones upon entering the base.

Levi was the only person alive, so they turned their attention toward him.

Levi muttered helplessly, "Look at this! This is the consequence after you all closed the gates. They are all targeting me now."

Levi was frustrated initially, but a mischievous smile flashed across his face the next moment.

His grin widened as he muttered to himself, "I was thinking so hard for a way to eliminate all of you without exposing myself. There wasn't any solution prior to this, but now..."

A golden opportunity had presented itself as they were all trapped together in an isolated area.

No one would ever know what had happened in there regardless of the things Levi was going to do, not even the people from Lab of Gods.

Levi was certain of that because if Lab of Gods were still in control of Leviathans, they would not have fallen for the trap.

Hence, he concluded that Leviathans were disconnected from Lab of Gods, and his plan to massacre these mega machines would never be known to another person.

Leviathans were seething with rage as they glared at Levi menacingly.

"Fools!"

Levi withdrew God Crusher at once.

Chapter 2709 Strategy By Sacroria

Their intense inquisitiveness was driven by their cluelessness about a place that could confine three thousand Warmachines.

Craig beamed. "I apologize for not being able to reveal that information for now because of the significance of this matter. Our effort thus far may go down the drain if I disclose the location."

Just then, Sammy piped up, "He's right! It is beneficial for everyone if fewer people know about this information. After all, we cannot guarantee that there are no undercover agents or spies among us working for our enemies."

"That's true! What if someone with ill intention gets hold of the location and releases the Warmachines? Who will bear the consequences then?"

"Yes! I agree with that. The fewer people in the know of the location, the better."

A few nations and forces on good terms with Erudia stepped forward to speak their minds.

They understood Erudia's concern about divulging such crucial information to the public as a division in stance existed among the different forces in attendance.

Moreover, they were also concerned about the people behind Leviathan.

The representative from Zarain quickly spoke up to lighten the situation, "All right, let's stop asking questions now. The most important thing is that we know those Warmachines are trapped for good."

In the end, the burning question in everyone's mind was left unanswered.

Mr. X and the others were desperate to know Sacroria’s strategy during that crucial moment.

After all, Sacroria had never intervened in their plan since the very beginning.

They had entrusted Mr. X and his team to handle everything.

Now that the situation was turning south, they were finally making a move.

In fact, Sacroria, which had become Levi’s primary concern, was never present at any of the training bases commanded by Lab of Gods.

They were situated elsewhere in a place they had always been.

It was only the troops consisting of Lab of Gods that had infiltrated Erudia.
