The Attack Of The Ancient Clan

Levi fastened his gaze on the two of them and asked inquisitively.

Ever since he managed to track them down, he was astounded that they seemed to have not made a move yet.

Thus, he wondered how they would seek revenge.

Digital God replied instinctively, "Actually, we—"

Before he could finish, Dr. Erebus cut him off. "Before we could take the first move of our revenge plan, you had already discovered it! We are well aware of the fact that we'll only shoot ourselves in the foot if we strike impulsively against Zarain without proper planning. After all, how much can we do in barely twenty days?"

Even though Levi had a hunch that Dr. Erebus was keeping something under wraps, he did not sense anything awry on the spot.

Before that, he presumed that the two of them might have invented invincible weapons such as Leviathans to aid in their revenge. It never occurred to him that things would turn out to be the opposite of what he was thinking. They were not only bare-handed but also did not set up a large-scale testing ground or defensive base. It did seem like they were not ready yet, as they claimed.

Little did Levi know that they had no intention of inventing anything, to begin with.

The Choice Of Levi

"What? Levi Garrison has taken both of them with him?"

"I would have never believed that Levi did it if it wasn't for this video clip!"

"Does this mean that he's collaborating with Lab of Gods? If that's the case, isn't he a spy then?"

Everyone could not resist making wild guesses on that.

Meanwhile, Black Hawk was flabbergasted. Dr. Erebus is with Levi Garrison now? But how is that possible? Based on Levi's character, he should have ended Dr. Erebus' life the moment he sees him!

There Is No Need For Anything

Dr. Erebus was curious to know how Levi would react. Now that we're in such a precarious state, will he hand us over to the others or will he protect us?

The Dragonites came up to Levi and tried to enlighten him about the extreme circumstance. "Everyone suspects that we're Lab of Gods' accomplice now. Since Lab of Gods' defensive base is located in Erudia, and the Leviathans have vanished, they claim that Erudia is shielding them. But I guess we can't really blame them for drawing such speculation. Not to mention Dr. Erebus is here with us at the moment. So honestly, I can't really see a way out of this..."

Needless to say, it was not absurd for the whole world to be suspicious of Erudia. As the rumor intensified, Erudia was deemed the world's public enemy.

In fact, even the people of Erudia were requesting for Levi to hand Dr. Erebus and Digital God over. Fearing that the duo would spell trouble for their country, they demanded that the two men should be executed in front of everyone.

Looking at how calm Dr. Erebus was, Digital God heaved a sigh.

The only reason why they were in this predicament now was that they were curious about what kind of choice Levi would make. Now that Levi had shown his hand, they no longer see the need to continue with the act.

"Huh? What do you mean?" Levi asked instinctively.

The others also huddled over, puzzled by Dr. Erebus' words.

Seeing the solemn look on Digital God's face, Levi asked warily, "Could it be that you've already—"

Dr. Erebus cut him off by admitting, "That's right. Took you long enough to finally realize it. We've already started our vengeance!"

Digital God let out a deep sigh. "We've activated the system too early. In fact, we've already taken action the moment you showed up."

With an unmissable hint of regret in his tone, he added "Fearing that you would finish us off right away, we had no choice but to do start our plan early. We never expected that you would give us the chance to survive."

Those four words made Craig's heart skip a beat, and his eyes widened with astonishment.

Is he talking about the same super-spiritual ley line we are thinking about?

The four men trembled involuntarily, clearly overwhelmed by their emotions.

Zephyr's legs felt like jelly and he had to lean against the table for support so as not to fall over.

The news was simply too shocking for them.

Craig knew the consequence of destroying the super-spiritual ley line would mean wiping out human civilization from the earth.

Everything would be wiped out completely!

In the worst-case scenario, not only would the human civilization be wiped out, but the whole earth would be blown to bits and pieces.

Of course, the destruction of the earth would not affect any one of them, as they would not have lived to see that happening. All humans would all have perished by then...

Dr. Erebus nodded and advised, "That's right. The super-spiritual ley line will be destroyed, and all of us will perish together with it. So there's no use in putting up a struggle. We only have to sit and wait for the arrival of doomsday."

He and Digital God had long given up hope, but Craig and Levi were not about to do that just yet.

"No! We have to stop it!"

"No. This won't do... I had better seek some backup support," Levi declared as he contacted the Black Hawk.

Black Hawk was about to make some sarcastic remarks and question Levi about him secretly bringing Dr. Erebus away when Levi cut him off and went straight to the point.

"I have no time to explain in detail. They've already started their plan and we have less than three hours to salvage the situation. I will forward you the address. See if you can get there before me. We have to stop them!"

Black Hawk's face fell upon hearing that. He could tell from Levi's tone that it was an extremely grave situation.

Erudia and her allies had helped one another with the building of their respective Shelters. They were completed a while ago and ready for use.

When they realized the situation warranted the use of those Shelters, they immediately activated their emergency response plan.

The capacities of the Shelters were sufficient to cater to Erudia and her allies. As for the rest of the world, they had to scramble to come up with alternative solutions.

"Based on the most optimistic estimates, we have less than ten hours before we have to face the catastrophe. In the worst-case scenario, if the explosions are more powerful than expected, then the spread will be rapid and we will have only six hours to prepare ourselves!" the Dragonites gave the warning at the video conference, so everyone knew the urgency of the matter.

The amount of time they had would depend largely on how much damage the two aircraft could inflict on the super-spiritual ley line.

If they only managed to crack it a little, then it would take roughly ten hours for the destructive energy to spread from the South Pole to the rest of the world.

If the damage were to be greater, the destruction could reach every part of the world in no more than six hours.

The message the Dragonites had for the world was simple. If the chance of averting the crisis was slim, then the top priority for everyone would be to make full use of the remaining time to save whatever they could. Save whatever you can?

Carrying The Last Hope

Sadly, Levi encountered problems as well and was delayed too.

Initially, they had a slim chance of being able to catch up with Lab of Gods’ aircraft. However, the delays the two parties encountered had completely dashed that hope.

“What the heck is your problem? Why are you picking a fight with me now?” Levi was beyond infuriated by the disruptions he was facing. After all, it was not the time to stir up trouble, as the survival of humankind was at stake.

The Ancient Clan was the one who was trying to stop Pengornis.

They were the ones who betrayed Levi and when the whole world’s attention was on him, they had quietly made their way to Erudia.

They split themselves into two teams. One team was keeping an eye on Forlevia while the other searched for Levi and Dr. Erebus. When Levi was on his way to the South Pole, some of them came after him and harassed him for almost a quarter of an hour.

When they saw that they could not stop him, they had no choice but to retreat.

Forlevia Went Missing

In fact, even Levi could not believe it initially. He thought what Dr. Erebus had described was too exaggerated, and nothing in the world could be that powerful.

He was only convinced after Craig made the confession and told him the true reason for terminating Project Atlantis.

Most of those people who were being escorted by Erudia and her allies to the Shelters to take cover were also not fully convinced of the existence of such immense spiritual energies. The only reason they obediently went along with the evacuation was that they would rather play it safe than take a risk.

They chose to trust their leaders, as the leaders had always shown that they cared for the people and did what was best for them.

The rest of the world was not as trusting, however. They had serious doubts about the claims of the impending doom. Most of them thought it was a lie that Erudia came up with to justify their act of taking Dr. Erebus away. They were certain that the people of Erudia wanted to keep all the secret technology and discoveries of the Lab of Gods to themselves.
