Chapter 791

The twenty men raised their swords up high, charging toward Levi and his men.

Whoosh!

Suddenly, a powerful gust of wind roared to life and there was a silhouette flickered passed them like a bolt of lightning.

It was White Tiger.

Among the Five Kings of War, Black Tortoise was the best at defense while White Tiger was the best at offence.

Wham! Wham!

White Tiger weaved through the crowd of men, his punches snapping out so quickly they were a blur.

Within moments, he stopped in his tracks.

Thud! Thud! Thud!

All twenty of his opponents crumpled to the ground like puppets that had their strings cut.

A dead silence descended upon the scene.

Jaron's face paled dramatically.

Jaron and the other members of the Prince Gang were frozen to the spot at Levi's words.
It was finally sinking in that they were in deep trouble this time.
At the rate things were going, they might just end up dying here in South City.
This was why they had to resolve this matter as peacefully as possible.
Jaron lowered his head slightly in submission, representing the Prince Gang's defeat.
This was the first time since the founding of the Prince Gang that they had actually lost to someone.
Every time before, they were always the ones pushing others around and stepping on their defeated enemies.

Levi's hand darted out and he landed a ringing slap on Jaron's face.

"Then so be it! It might just be a dog to you but to us, it was a living, breathing creature! It was a precious life! It was our friend, our comrade-in-arm!" Levi roared in rage.

He was well and truly mad this time.

One of the dogs had been his constant companion when he was still in the military. Playing with it always served to brighten up his day and helped with the stress of fighting a war.

They had been on the frontlines together and fought plenty of battles.

After they retired from the military, he brought it back here with him.

Now, Jaron killed his precious dog and had the audacity to say it was "just dogs".

"To me, its life is infinitely more valuable than you scum!"

Levi’s eyes flashed and he uttered coldly, “Breaking an arm for killing my dog isn’t excessive, is it?”

The threat had Jaron’s face flushing red in alarm and he struggled to escape.

He was a prince! If one of his arms were snapped just like that, his reputation would be ruined forever! He would never be able to look anyone in the eyes again!

“No, please. Let’s talk about this, okay? I’ll give you anything you want!” He babbled anxiously.

At that moment, his disheveled appearance made him look just like any other normal person. Gone were his arrogance and princely demeanor.

“I want my dog!”

Eyes wintry with his rage, Levi glared at him.

Jaron was stumped at his words.

His dog is already dead. How am I supposed to give it back to him?

Wales chuckled and answered, "This is Lucas we're talking about. Getting a woman for himself is child's play for him!"

Tyler thought over that and had to agree.

Lucas was a domineering person who always did as he pleased in South Hampton. Nobody had ever dared to stop him here, so who would have the courage to do so at South City?

"But then why isn't he back yet? And there's been no news from him either! I tried calling him but strangely enough, his phone is turned off!"

Being a little more meticulous than his brother, Tyler got the vague feeling that something was about to happen.

"He's probably having too much fun! I wouldn't mind sleeping with those two beauties either!" Wales commented with a lecherous grin.

"Grandpa, it's them! They are strong. The one standing in the middle leads them!"

Jaron pointed Levi out.

However, he did not expect to see another eight strangers to turn up out of nowhere.

But he did not care.

With his grandpa here, even another eight hundred people would have been useless.

Upon seeing Levi and his men, the leaders of the twenty nine top families in South Hampton fixated their gaze on their enemies.

They could barely wait to swallow them alive.

How dare somebody crippled their precious child!

Xabian suppressed his anger forcefully and asked coldly, "Was it you who chopped off my grandson's arm?"

"Indeed, it was me. He killed my dog and all I did was breaking one of his hands. That was already very merciful of me." Levi said calmly.

"Are you telling me you could have killed my grandson just because of a dog?"

“That’s impossible! After all, it’s just two women. What could have happened from there? Moreover, who else in the South City would dare to do something to Lucas? Let alone make Elder Goel to leave this city for him?”

Michael and Wales exchanged glances.

They were still very certain that Lucas was fine, and that Levi was unable to cause any ripples.

“Tyler, you are overthinking this. Think about it, what waves could Levi possibly cause?”

Michael could not help but say.

“Grandpa, why don’t I make a trip to South City to see what’s going on?” Tyler suggested.

“Alright, go and take a look so that we can all be more at ease. In case anything happens, we can get the first-hand information.” The older man nodded in agreement.

As he helmed the large family, he was full of strategies.

“Hello Chief! It is such an honor to meet you!”

Clark said excitedly.

The South Hampton Warzone was a very important area. From the military viewpoint, it was more important than both the North Hampton and South City Warzones.

Correspondingly, Clark’s position was more important than Mike’s and Percy’s.

Levi smiled, “I’ve heard of you!”

Clark was surprised that the God of War actually remembered him.

This was an honor of a lifetime for him.

Percy began introducing the others.

Silence followed the patriarch's question.

None of the other family members had ever seen the old man so enraged.

Oh no, Elder Goel is utterly infuriated this time!

"A man from South City called Levi Garrison. He has several expert fighters with him. I wasn't a match for his strongest." Jaron explained.

"By the way, Elder Goel, they seem to be related to the Southern Union. We personally witnessed as the members of the Southern Union knelt before him!" One of the Prince Gang members chimed in.

"So what if they're connected to the Southern Union? As if I'm afraid of them! I don't care who he is; I'll kill him even if he's from Oakland City!"

Xabian's eyes gleamed menacingly as he ordered, "Contact all the other families involved in this incident. Tell them to gather here right away. Tonight, I shall personally lead them to South City! I would like to see who in that damn city dares to accept an apology from me!"

Everybody present was astounded at his words.

At one of South Hampton's downtown areas.

Despite being a downtown area, this particular neighborhood was empty. Not a single soul could be seen within a ten-kilometer radius of it.

This strange phenomenon could be attributed to the guards patrolling every single road that led to it as this area was listed as private property.

As for who the property belonged to, it was none other than the most prominent family in South Hampton – the royal family of Goel.

The Goel family was said to have existed here for nearly a thousand years, a testament to their prowess.

At that moment, there were several people lying on the ground before the gates of the manor.

Every single one of them either had their arms or legs broken.
