Chapter 311

Half an hour later, Gina smashed the last bottle in the warehouse. She looked at the shattered bottles and all kinds of mixed alcohol on the ground and admired the mess she made.

Gina estimated that the wines in the vault would cost at least sixty million dollars. However, she had shattered all of it. The bar was out of stock, so Colin would need to stock up. It was another expense. Moreover, she had already spoken to Colin's wine supplier. Once Colin called to stock up, the price would double.

Gina calmly stepped on the glass shards on the floor and left the warehouse. She quietly returned to the door of KING Bar's warehouse. Then, Gina opened the door of her Rolls Royce and got in. Gabriel, who sat in the driver's seat, looked at Gina and asked, "Is everything settled?"

Gina snapped her fingers. "Done!"

*Impressive. Unfortunately, I can only be your driver today. I can't help much," Gabriel said aggrievedly. But it was Gina who told him to stay.

"It's safer for me to go alone. Having the both of us walking around Colin's place would be too eye-catching."

"Fair enough." Gabriel shrugged helplessly and asked gently, "Shall we leave now?"

Gina shook her head. "No, let's wait a little longer."

"Why?" Gabriel asked.

"Fishing." Gina said with a smile.

At the same time. Colin and Spencer walked out of KING Bar. Colin smiled and said. "Mr. Wilson, the weather is cold. Forgive me for not sending you off properly."

Spencer felt goosebumps on his back. "That's okay, thank you for the pleasant meeting. Mr. Barnes. Please, excuse me?"

Colin pretended to be kind and asked, "Are you going straight home?"

Spencer was stunned. "Yes, yes I am."

"Mr. Wilson, how can you ignore your well-being? Look at you. Your head is bleeding. You have to go to the hospital first."

Spencer smiled stiffly. "Alright, alright. Thank you for your suggestion, Mr. Barnes, I'm leaving."

"Be careful." Colin patted Spencer's shoulder.

Spencer couldn't wait to leave. After getting into his car, he felt like he had just survived a calamity. "What a f*cking lunatic! I never knew Colin was such a narcissist."

Colin watched as Spencer's car left. His lips smiled as he prepared to head back into the bar. However, he noticed a custom-made Rolls Royce by the roadside from the corner of his eye. Gabriell

Colin raised his eyebrows with interest. Then, he went forward and knocked on the window. Gina looked at Colin who was bending down outside and turned to Gabriel. 'See? The fish has taken the bait!'

Afterward, Gina rolled down the window. Colin met her gaze and said with a cheeky smile, "Miss Miller."

"What's the matter?" Gina glanced at Colin indifferently.

Colin was about to say something when he suddenly smelled wine from Gina's body. He was a little surprised. After a few seconds of silence, Colin frowned and asked, "Miss Miller, did you just come out of my bar? And Mr. Jackson, why didn't you tell me you were coming? I would happily invite you two. After all, I consider you two to be my distinguished guests"

Gina denied. "We were just got here."

"Really?" Colin didn't believe her. "But why do I smell alcohol from you, Miss Miller?" S~earch the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"Maybe it's just you," Gina said.

Colin sneered. "Forget it, Miss Miller. Let's not argue about this meaningless issue. Since you two are here, why don't you and Mr. Jackson go in for a drink?"

Gina asked lazily. "Is there any good wine in your bar?"

Colin felt it was abnormal for Gina to be so polite to him. He didn't know what scheme Gina had played to sneak up on him. Last time at the golf course, he had no idea how Gina had drugged him. Colin thought Gina could kill him if she wanted to.

However, Gina was not an impulsive person. As a CEO and a foreigner, if Gina committed a murder, it would cause international unrest. While Colin was on guard against Gina, he was also very excited. After all, it had been too long since he had a good fight. He was bored to have no enemy.

Colin collected his thoughts and answered Gina's question seriously. "How about a 79 Lon?"

"I bought that bottle of wine for over 20 million dollars. If you want to drink it, please take a sip. But you'll have to pay me a few hundred grand. Are you interested in tasting the wine?" Colin asked. His eyes were burning as he looked at Gina. This made Gabriel feel very unhappy. He looked at Colin coldly.

Colin also noticed Gabriel's gaze. "What's wrong. Mr. Jackson? Do you have something to tell me?"

"You've been staring at my girlfriend." Gabriel reminded coldly.

Colin smiled. "I'm sorry. I'm sorry. Miss Miller is so beautiful. I can't help but look at her. If I have to blame someone, I can only blame her for being too good-looking."

"Stop being so cheesy, Gabriel warned.

Colin shrugged helplessly. "Alright, but would you care to taste my most expensive wine? Of course. Mr. Jackson is also welcome to try."

Gina immediately nodded. "Alright, get that fancy wine of yours. Mr. Barnes"

Colin sneered. "Miss Miller, do you mean I must fetch the wine bottle and pour the content into your glass myself?"

"That works too." Gina didn't hold back at all.

Colin wasn't angry even though Gina was the only person who dared to speak to him like this. With her beauty. Colin gladly gave her a pass. Gina also had an interesting personality, and Colin willingly played with her.

“Alright, I’ll get it for you. However, Miss Miller, let me tell you something. As the bar owner, I have to double the service fee for your wine tasting. Do you find this acceptable?” Colin asked.

Cina nodded. “Sure, I’m not short of money.”

“Alright, I’ll go get it.” Colin turned around and walked towards the bar. He went straight to the wine warehouse in the basement.

A staff saw Colin headed to the wine warehouse and asked. “Sir, do you need to get something? I can fetch it for you.”

However, Colin waved his hand and said with a faint smile, “No, I’ll go get it myself. That wine is valuable. I’m worried about others touching it.”

“I understand, Sir. The staff didn’t dare to say anything else.

Colin took the elevator to the basement level. The moment the elevator door opened, he saw that the door of the wine warehouse was still locked. However, before he entered, he could smell a strong wine fragrance.

The smile on Colin’s face stiffened. Something was wrong. Something was very wrong. The smile on his face disappeared completely. He hurried forward and quickly entered the password. After a series of beeps, the door lock opened. Colin pushed the door open and entered. The strong smell of alcohol mixed, making Colin feel a little unpleasant.

When Colin looked around, he saw glass shards all over the ground and the wine flowing towards his feet. The closets were all empty. Colin's mind went blank for a few seconds, and then a surge of anger rushed to his head.

When Colin saw the Loft wine had mixed with other cheaper wines, he knew it had lost its value. Forget getting Gina to taste 1. He had spent millions of dollars to get his hands on it. It was a limited edition, and he treasured it and kept it safe. No one had ever allowed to drink his Lofi Wine but Colin himself.

Colin's body began to tremble uncontrollably. His intuition told him that it must have been Gina's doing. Otherwise, why would Gina appear at his bar? He had just done something to Gina, and he knew Gina would find an opportunity to take revenge, but Colin didn't expect it to be so soon. He didn't expect Gina to be so direct. She smashed his treasured wine.

"Gina, you b*tch" Colin was furious. With bloodshot red eyes, he turned around and went to the surveillance room. SEARCH the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Colin kicked the surveillance door open and saw his staff watching the footage leisurely.

The staff was shocked. He thought a random person had barged in. But when he saw it was Colin, he stood from his seat like a spring. "Mr. Barnes, what's the matter?"

Colin stepped forward and punched the staff without any explanation. The staff felt wronged and afraid. He reflexively knelt and begged Colin for mercy. "Mr. Barnes, I don't know what I did wrong. Please calm down!"

Colin didn't care about his begging. Instead, after kicking the staff to the ground, Colin began to punch and kick him mercilessly. "Useless f*ck! Is this how you work every day? Someone broke into my wine warehouse and destroyed everything! Are you blind? You didn't notice anything abnormal when you looked at the surveillance camera? If you can't use your eyes properly, let me gouge them out of their socket!"

Colin slapped the staff's face and added. "You know what? Forget about gouging your eyes. Do you know how much the cost of the wine in that warehouse? It's even more expensive than your life! I'll take your cheap life on behalf of those wines today. Colin yelled.

The staff was shocked. "Pardon me, Sir, but I didn't slack off. I've been watching them all along, but I didn't see anyone sneaking into the warehouse. I would have pressed the alarm long ago if I saw anyone barged in. Please, Mr. Barnes, spare

Colin was raging and didn't listen to the staff's explanation. He felt punching and kicking him was not enough to vent his anger. So, he picked up a stool and smashed it on the staff's head. The staff immediately fainted, and Colin began to check the surveillance footage himself.

After checking the surveillance footage, Colin was surprised to see Gina had not been recorded entering the warehouse. Then how did she get in? There's no other way to access the warehouse except from the elevator.

Colin was so angry that he smashed the display screen. How am going to settle scores with her without proof?"

Colin glanced at the unconscious staff lying on the ground and licked him away. He wanted to walk out, but when he reached the door, he suddenly remembered that he couldn't leave him alone. Hence, he called the manager impatiently. "Come to the surveillance room and send the surveillance staff to the hospital. If he's dead, compensate the family. If he's alive, pay the medical fees."

The manager was already used to it. "Yes, Sir"

After hanging up the phone, Colin went to his lounge, found an iron rod, and dragged it out of the room. All the guests saw Colin's cold face. Looking at the iron rod in his hand, they knew someone would suffer, and it wouldn't end well for the other party. Colin was already a violent person. Seeing him holding a weapon, they could guess whatever the other party had done was fatal.

Gina saw Colin walking out of the bar with a cold face. Seeing him carry an iron rod, she knew Colin must have seen her masterpiece. Her lips smiled mischievously. When Colin approached the car, Gina asked, "Mr. Barnes, why are you back so quickly! Did something happen?"

Colin could no longer laugh. He gritted his teeth and said coldly Get out of the car."

Gina looked at him and replied, "Why? I don't see you with a Los Wine in hand. Why would I need to step out of the car?"

Hearing her question, Colin slammed the iron bar against the car door. Gina was shocked and frowned.

Then, she heard Colin curse. "You're not planning to get out, hub? Then I'll smash your car first before I smash your brain out, you sick b*tch!"

"This is not my car," Gina replied calmly. She didn't want Colin to wreck Gabriel's custom Rolls Royce. Hence, she asked, "Can you move aside! I'm getting out of the car

Gabriel pulled Gina back worriedly. Although he knew Gina was a skilled fighter, he couldn't bear to see someone smash an iron rod at her. So, Gabriel suggested, "Let me take care of him. Please."

Gina didn't refuse. She knew Gabriel wanted to protect her. This was the protective instinct of a lover. Although she didn't need his protection, she didn't want to reject his sincere love.

Gabriel got out of the car first. He stood in front of the crazed Colin with a cold face. "If I see that rod anywhere near her, I'll make your entire family pay the price?"

Colin didn't think that Gabriel was bluffing. He did have the ability, but his family wasn't something that Gabriel could easily control. If Gabriel wanted to go against his entire family, the outcome would be both sides suffering. However, Colin didn't want to see his family suffer and wasn't strong enough to face Gabriel.

Colin gritted his teeth and sneered. "Mr. Jackson, I advise you not to worry about Miss Miller. Worry about yourself. I'm furious right now, and I might be unable to control my actions. The iron rod in my hand can hit you."

Gabriel smiled mockingly. His gaze was deep and cold. "Hit me? Colin, if you have the guts, you can try."

Hearing Gabriel's taunt, Colin tightened his grip on the iron rod

Colin imagined when the iron rod in his hand smashed into Gabriel's head and made his head explode. However, it was only a fantasy. He didn't have the guts to attack Gabriel.

Colin glared at Gina before walking around Gabriel. He walked toward the custom-made Rolls Royce. Afterward, Colin raised the iron rod and began smashing the hood. A dent was instantly formed. Colin wanted to continue hitting the car, but Gabriel didn't give him a chance. He ran and punched Colin in the face.

The sudden punch made Colin, who was caught off guard, flinched. "Gabriel, you hit me first!" Colin cursed angrily. He threw away the iron rod in his hand and started to throw punches at Gabriel. But Gabriel was dodging Colin's punches effortlessly.

When Gina saw them fighting, she didn't interfere. She knew Colin was no match for Gabriel, and Gabriel would have the upper hand. Additionally, she didn't want to lose her limbs by trying to break the fight. SEARCH THE website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Splashes of blood were staining Gabriel's face, but it was Colin's. He beat and pressed Colin to the ground. At first, Colin was indignant and cursed. But in the end, he couldn't retaliate and admit defeat. "Alright, stop!"

Gabriel continued to punch Colin several times before stopping, Colin stood up from the ground and wiped his face. His hand was covered in blood. "F*ck!"

Meanwhile, Gina took out a tissue from the car and wiped the blood off Gabriel's face. Seeing this, Colin shouted in anger.

Gina looked at Colin and said indifferently. "Can you control your anger now? If not, I don't mind switching places with Gabriel for round two.

Colin had lost. He didn't want to fight them anymore because he knew their fighting skills were above his. It was a pointless struggle. He had personally experienced Gabriel's skills, and the fact that Gina could enter his warehouse sneakily, decipher the password, and hack the surveillance camera showed how resourceful she was. Colin also didn't want anyone to see him in such a sorry state. He had never been in such a state since he was young.

"I've calmed down, so now, Miss Miller, let's have a good talk." Colin said with a fake smile. His blood-covered face made him look like a lunatic on the loose. However, he sincerely wanted to have a good talk with Gina.

"Let's talk about you smashing up my wines, Colin continued.

“Me? Smashing your wines?” Gina asked. “Do you have evidence? She was destroying his wine collection but wore gloves to avoid leaving her fingerprints...”

“Do I have any evidence?” Colin almost exploded in anger. Without evidence, he could only admit that he was unlucky. He had never felt so aggrieved before.

If this happened overseas, he would let his family come after Gabriel and Gina to vent his anger. Colin chuckled in annoyance. “Yes, you’re right. I don’t have any evidence. I have to admit, I’m impressed by how skillful you are. I finally lose my cool.

“Oh? Is it something challenging to make you lose your cool?” Gina asked calmly.

Colin sneered. “Impressive, impressive, but Miss Miller, if we keep taking revenge like this, when will it end? So, I’m offering you a ceasefire. Let’s shake hands and respect each other from now on.”

Gina’s tone was slightly cold. “Colin, your words can’t be trusted.”

Colin was stunned for a moment before laughing out loud. “Miss Miller, you know me well. This makes me very happy”

Colin’s words were extremely unpleasant to Gabriel’s ears. He frowned and looked at Colin with a warning look in his eyes.

Colin noticed Gabriel’s gaze and teased, “Mr. Jackson, what kind of gaze is that? Are you afraid that I’ll become rival? Well, I have to say your worries are reasonable.”

e your love

Gina seemed to remain calm, and although it wasn’t because of love, Colin found it very interesting. He was so impressed that he quickly forgot the ruin of his warehouse. He didn’t lack several million dollars. After all, Colin was mad because Gina had outplayed him, and he felt ashamed. ‘Love rival? Why bother?

Gabriel sneered. “Do you think you’re worthy?”

He still wanted to hit Colin, but Gina held him back. Gina shook his head at Gabriel, telling him he had enough. Then, Gina told Colin, "You smashed Gabriel's car, so you need to compensate."

Colin said disdainfully, "Why? Can't you afford the repair fee yourself?"

"If you don't want to compensate, we'll call the police," Gina said calmly.

The fight between Gabriel and Colin was not quite a fight. Neither side was the victor. However, Colin deliberately destroyed Gabriel's car, took out a weapon, and intended to hit a person. He disrupted public order and acted like a triad. If the police investigated further, Colin could get arrested.

Of course, Colin didn't want to be deported. Not only did he want to follow his family's wishes, but he also wanted to return to his roots. The Barnes family wanted to expand their business there, and the first two companies that Colin liked were Gabriel's Jackson Group and Gina's Quaria. Before he achieved this goal, he didn't plan to leave, nor was he willing to

Colin knew it wouldn't do him good if his fight blew up. Additionally, Gabriel's beating had caused him a lot of pain, both physical and mental. He wanted to find his doctor to treat him, so he wasn't in the mood to argue with Gina and Gabriel. Hence, he changed his words. "Alright, I'll bring your car back to the maintenance center for repairs. I guarantee that when it returns to your hands, it'll be as good as new."

Gabriel sneered and did not say anything.

Colin even "warmheartedly suggested, "Mr. Jackson, I'm truly sorry for almost totaling your car. Please, let me arrange for a car to send you back."

"No need, Gina rejected indifferently. Then, she held Gabriel's hand. "Want to take a walk?"

Gabriel looked at Gina. His gaze changed from cold to warm and gentle. "Sounds good."

Seeing the two of them were so carefree, the anger in Colin's chest surged again. However, it was useless for him to be ang

As Gabriel and Gina left, Colin called the manager out. When the manager saw the blood on Colin's face, he thought it was someone else's blood that splattered on his face. He couldn't imagine who dared to hit Colin until he bled. But upon closer inspection, he realized Colin's face was bruised. He was shocked

“Mr. Barries, why don’t I call an ambulance for you first?” The manager said nervously..

Colin shook his head. “No need. Take care of this car and send it overseas for repairs. Also, clean this place up,” Colin entered his bar as he said that. He called his private doctor to treat his wound. The private doctor knew Colin well and didn’t ask about his injuries. He left after he was done.

Colin instructed the manager to deal with the wine storage immediately and buy a new batch of wine to fill up the inventory. Then, Colin returned to his place. Elaine was sitting on the sofa in the living room, surrounded by a few luxury goods. When she saw her brother return, Elaine returned them in their respective boxes.

Colin walked closer and Elaine was shocked to discover his injured face, “Colin? What happened to your face? Did that dan *person hit you?”

“It’s Gabriel.” Colin sat down and said calmly.

“Gabriel: I’ll get someone to cripple him!” Elaine pouted.

Colin smiled and rubbed her hair. “Why do you want to cripple him? At least for now, he’s still outside our grasp.”

Elaine knew they couldn’t do anything to Gabriel for the time being. But she was still curious. “Why did he hit you in the first place?”

“Because... I want to hurt Gina. That was indeed the cause.

“That slut, she deserves to be beaten up. Gabriel is blind to protect her. Sooner or later, they will have to pay the price!” Elaine said coldly.

Colin didn’t continue this topic. Instead, he looked at the various luxury goods on the table and said, “What did you buy this time?”

“Nothing much, just some clothes and bags that I like. Gosh, can’t Quaria release new products every week? It’s best if they launch a product designed by their chief designer. This way, I’ll have something worthy to spend on.”

Elaine said nonchalantly. As she spoke, she caressed her custom-made bracelet by the chief designer of Quaria. She was satisfied to have her hands on one of the designer's pieces.

When Elaine mentioned Quaria, Colin suddenly laughed. "You know? I have to tell you something, and I hope you are mentally prepared."

"What is it?" Elaine thought her brother would say something serious, so she was all ears.

"The chairman of Quaria is Cina," Colin said.

Elaine's expression turned pale. "That b*tch is the chairman of Quaria?"

She wasn't surprised about this matter. After all, Michael had worked so hard to protect Gina in front of her at the new product foresight banquet last time. Elaine felt that something was odd. Since Colin had confirmed that Gina was the chairman, Elaine nodded in understanding but felt disgusted.

She looked at the bracelet on her hand and thought about the jewelry she had bought from Quaria. She wanted to throw it away but didn't have the heart.

She still liked Quaria jewelry, so Elaine said stubbornly, "So what if she's the chairman? She doesn't participate in designing the jewelry pieces. At least I know the jewelry I wear didn't come from her. Recently, she participated in a new product launch as a special designer but I didn't buy any of her works."

"Then which designer do you like?" Colin asked calmly.

"Of course, it's the mysterious chief designer. Unfortunately, she's only been involved in a few design projects. I've already bought everything I can. Look, that designer designed the bracelet on my wrist. I consider this the most unique and luxurious bracelet in the world!" Elaine boasted.

Colin said helplessly, "You've already told me this many times. I know that Quaraia's Chief Designer designed your bracelet, but to be honest, it's very different from the previous works. I think this bracelet looks a little ordinary and even a little childish."

"Colin, how is this childish? This is simple and elegant Elaine was displeased.

"Alright, alright, alright. It's simple and elegant." Colin agreed to Elaine's opinion while chuckling.

Elaine was silent for a moment, but she still felt unhappy. "Alright, I can't take it anymore. Why does Quaria belong to that slut Gina! I'm so angry. I'm so angry! Elaine was furious. She swept all the luxury goods on the coffee table to the ground. Quaria was her favorite brand, and knowing Gina as the chairman ruined her excitement.

Colin looked at Elaine's expression and laughed, and Elaine grew angry. "Colin, how can you do this? You're even laughing at me. Do you think I'm stupid?" She had bought so much jewelry from the company of the people she hated most and considered it a waste of her money. But she was indeed a sucker for Quaria products. She had this deep love for the brand that was irreplaceable. SEARCH THE WEBSITE TO ACCESS CHAPTERS OF NOVELS EARLY AND IN THE HIGHEST QUALITY.

"No one is calling you stupid." Colin shook his head and comforted Elaine. "Alright, alright, don't be angry. You know what? I have a big plan, I want to snatch Quaria's ownership and give it to you. Quaria will be yours and you don't have to feel disgusted with the brand."

When Elaine heard this, she was beyond happy. "Gosh, thank you, Colin! I knew it. You're the best! With you around, Quaria will be mine sooner or later. When Quaria becomes mine, I'll know who the mysterious chief designer is. I want to lock that person in a room and make them draw designs for me day and night!" Elaine said proudly.

Colin agreed, "Okay."

Two days later, Olivia followed Ella to Norwood International Airport. They were waiting for Ivan to return home.

When Ivan appeared before them with a backpack, Olivia almost didn't recognize him. This was because Ivan had tanned a lot and his skin had turned bronze. It was Ella who recognized his son first. "Ivan!"

Ivan was also looking for his mother and sister in the crowd. After hearing Ella's voice, he looked in the direction of the voice and found them. He carried his backpack and walked up to them. Olivia looked at Ivan and was stunned. She felt Ivan had become much more handsome. He had become more manly. She couldn't help but... be tempted.

Olivia immediately returned to her senses. She was shocked by her strong reaction just now. "What the hell is going on with me? Is it because I've been missing a man's touch for too long?"

Olivia was still deep in thought when she was suddenly pulled into Ivan's embrace. "Olivia, thank you for donating your kidney to Mom. You're the best!"

Olivia's heart beat even faster when Ivan hugged her. She was even quite embarrassed as she gently pushed Ivan away. "You're welcome, Ivan. I need to repay Mom for raising me."

Ivan released Olivia. "For the Miller family to have a daughter like Gina is unfortunate, but to have you, who, though not biological, are as good as our daughter, is a blessing. From now on, our family will stand together, never to be separated," Ivan declared passionately.

"Okay." Olivia nodded, feigning emotion.

Olivia had sacrificed by donating a kidney to earn their favor again. The Miller family's change of heart had been her chance. She had seized it, entwining herself with the Miller family for survival. It had been her plan until she stepped on Gina's toes.

Then, Ivan said to Ella, "Mom, don't worry. I'll immediately talk to Gina and have her return Miller Jewels to us."

Ella couldn't dare to hope anymore. "Let it go, Ivan. As for Gina, we can't compete with her, and most importantly, behind her stands Gabriel. I've sinned to have such an unfilial daughter. I truly regret not ending her life when she was born," Ella said from the depths of her heart.

"Mom, it's not too late now," Ivan said disdainfully.

Ella was still worried. "But Ivan, don't be reckless," Ella cautioned "Committing murder is against the law."

“Mom, you don’t need to worry.” Ivan reassured Ella. “I promised you I’ll take care of Gina. I have my ways. Just trust me.

“Enough, Ivan. Stop talking nonsense,” Ella scolded, feeling that Ivan was irrational. “Just go home, now!”

Gina went to the medicine land to gather some medicinal herbs, intending to prepare a tonic for Neil Jackson. Upon seeing Cathy Fowler again, her complexion grew paler, and her appearance became haggard.

“Miss Miller,” Cathy said weakly, her voice trembling as she struggled to maintain balance.

Gina frowned and asked, “Did you donate blood again? She knew there had to be something suspicious about this so-called blood donation.

Cathy felt inexplicably guilty. “I...” Before she could finish her sentence, she collapsed before Gina.

Gina was stunned, and she immediately crouched down to check her pulse. Cathy was in shock.

When Cathy woke up, she found herself in the hospital. As she glanced around, she saw a bag of blood continuously being transfused into her body while Gina sat nearby with a cold expression on her face.

“Awake? You almost died from shock,” Gina said succinctly.

Cathy hesitated for a moment, then realized she had narrowly escaped death. Overwhelmed with fear, she burst into tears. “Thank you, Miss Miller, you saved me!”

“What’s the deal with the blood donation you mentioned earlier Donating blood again after just a few days-is that something you insisted on doing? How many people are as insistent on donating blood as you are?” Gina inquired.

Cathy realized that Gina knew she had been lying about her blood donation intentions before. This time, nearly dying, she couldn’t hold back any longer. “I’m sorry, Miss Miller. Last time, I lied to you. I didn’t voluntarily donate blood; I signed a “Yes,” Cathy stammered, her words disjointed and unclear as she struggled to speak through her sobs.

Gina motioned for her to calm down before continuing, “You don’t need to apologize to me. The life you almost lost is your own. The one you owe apologies to is yourself.” And Gina’s intervention to save her was just a tiny effort on her part.

“I signed a contract with Blue Vale Hospital to supply blood. I have to be available whenever they call, and although they blood- only draw a small amount, around 100-200cc, the intervals are very short each time. Despite them providing many replenishing nutrients and supplements after each extraction, I can’t replenish it.in time, Cathy explained.

“Why did you sign a contract with Blue Vale?” This question concerned Gina the most. “Are you in need of money?”

Cathy shook her head. “No, I’m not.”

Gina could tell that Cathy was hesitant and unwilling to tell the truth. “I saved you. Can’t you be honest with me? That’s my only request.” Gina said.

Cathy lowered her gaze. “It’s my boyfriend.”

Gina wasn’t surprised, but it was rare for her to meddle in others affairs. “You said you didn’t break up with Andy Taylor because he saved your life. Now, because of him, you’ve signed a messy contract and nearly died. You’ve also paid him back with your life. No one can save you if you don’t break up with him now. I can’t guarantee that I’ll always be able to get you to the hospital in time when you’re unconscious, nor can you guarantee that someone will always find you when you faint,” Gina explained.

Cathy had to admit that Gina’s words made sense. However, she was at a loss about what to do now. “But I signed the contract. If I breach it. I have to pay a penalty of 100 thousand dollars, which I can’t afford. I also don’t want to donate blood anymore, but the contract is legally binding...”

“Take me to Blue Vale,” Gina said calmly. She wanted to see what this private hospital was up to.

“Okay,” Cathy agreed.

Gina fed Cathy some of the medicinal herbs she had grown herself, and Cathy immediately regained some strength. Together, they went to see what Blue Vale called its blood collection department.

Olivia was holding several newly signed blood supply agreements and smiling as she prepared to deposit them in Nicolas Jacquard's office safe. She hadn't expected to run into Gina, and when she saw Gina standing across from her, Olivia felt as if she'd seen a phantom. She was startled, fearing that Gina might be there to cause trouble for her.

Olivia looked at Gina with apprehension and asked, "What brings you here?"

Cathy had always considered Olivia a friend. She believed that meeting someone and making friends with them was a matter of fate in a world where countless people pass by each day. So, she took the initiative to greet Olivia. "Olivia..." However, Olivia ignored her.

Gina noticed that Olivia was likely working here. Seeing the thick contracts in Olivia's hands, Gina furrowed her brows. "Get your supervisor or the person in charge of this hospital, Dr. Jacquard," she instructed.

Olivia was surprised. "What do you need Dr. Jacquard for?"

"It's none of your concern, Gina replied impassively.

Olivia felt somewhat offended, but she dared not express her anger. "Dr. Jacquard isn't here. If you have any business, you can tell me directly," she said.

Gina pointed to Cathy. "I want her blood supply contract," she stated.

Olivia glanced at Cathy with confusion. Although Cathy had helped her before, they had lost touch after Olivia moved. So when Cathy greeted her earlier, Olivia didn't respond.

Chapter 316

“I want her off the contract, Gina said coldly.

Annoyed by Gina’s calm demeanor, Olivia retorted sarcastically, Miss Miller, are you mistaken? Here isn’t Prover Hospital, and you’re not the dean. You don’t have the final say.”

“You don’t have the authority to refuse me either,” Gina said casually.

Olivia’s expression changed immediately. She dared not confront Gina, but the anger burned inside her, causing her to ache

Gina continued, “Your so-called blood supply contracts are utterly unreasonable.”

“It’s unreasonable but legal,” Olivia smirked triumphantly. “It’s all written clearly. They signed voluntarily. Any objections?”

Uninterested in further conversation, Gina said, “As I said, I want to see your supervisor or the dean.”

“Our dean isn’t someone you can just see whenever you please, Olivia asserted, bolstered by Nicolas’s influence, showing a hint of defiance.

“Olivia Miller, let me remind you, my patience is limited. Before I lose interest in talking to you nicely, comply with my request, or else... Gina warned sternly, her expression turned cold.

Olivia didn’t dare to confront Gina head-on. She knew that if Gina wanted, she could easily manipulate the situation to her advantage. Now wasn’t the time for her to challenge Gina, “I’ll go and see if Dr. Jacquard has any availability,” Olivia said with a stiff expression.

Cathy sensed the unusual tension between the two but refrained from prying further. Following Olivia's lead, Gina arrived at Nicolas's office.

"You can't go in. Miss Miller, surely you won't disregard basic courtesy?" Olivia said, her tone resolute.

Gina had no intention of barging in. She remained silent as Olivia breathed a sigh of relief and entered his office. However, he was absent, and Olivia was unsure of his whereabouts, so she called.

"What do you mean, Gina Miller showed up? How did she find out about this? What's going on?" Nicolas asked.

He was furious, which startled Olivia. "She... has a blood donor who knows her. They must have told her about it"

"Who's that despicable person?" Nicolas gritted his teeth. If Gina were to discover their true intention behind collecting blood, not for treatment or replenishing the blood bank, but for selling it, it would be a big problem.

"Cathy Fowler, Olivia replied.

"Cathy Fowler, alright, alright... Nicolas chuckled coldly.

"Are you planning to do something to her?" Olivia asked, observing his intense anger.

"Are you a fool?" Nicolas redirected his pent-up frustration towards Olivia. "Since they knew each other, Gina will delve deeper into our blood collection scheme if I target Cathy. Right now, our focus should be on diverting Gina's attention. Also, stop recruiting blood donors for a while and reduce the frequency of blood draws. If Gina wants Cathy's contract, give it to her. Let's settle things with Gina first before any confrontation."

"Alright..." Olivia had expected Nicolas to confront Gina, but he seemed keen to avoid it. She realized that, at the moment, Colin Barnes was her only hope to counter Gina. She had to find a way to get on his side.

Olivia walked out of the office feeling a bit uneasy. "Dr. Jacquard isn't here, but I called him. He said when Miss Fowler signed the contract, it was voluntary. She received generous compensation from our hospital. Now, breaking the contract and causing trouble is regrettable Dr. Jacquard wants to know why you want to breach the contract.”

Cathy bettsted for a momerit, unsure of what to say. She felt intimidated by Olivia’s aggressive questioning. ‘I went into shock, so I don’t want to be a mobile blood bank anymore,” she explained timidly

“Miss Fowler, you and your boyfriend initially expressed a need for money, mentioning your desire to buy a house in Norwood together. Unfortunately, the housing prices were too high, even if you scraped together a down payment. The anquent risortgage payments and living expenses would have significantly strained you. So, you signed the contract with in Cher hospital maintains a moderate blood donation schedule, yet you’re the only one who encountered issues. “Olivia and her tone laden with implication

wanting to delay. Olivia handed Cathy « contract to Gina, who then handed it to Cathy Tear it up,” Gina said. Then, the contract would no longer be effective.

Oliva felt a twinge of frustration. Losing a blood donor meant less profit for her. She couldn’t fathom why Gina had to meddle in everything. Her tone was sarcastic as she added. “Miss Fowler since you’ve breached the contract, it seems you’ve found someone influential to back you up. We won’t be able to reclaim the penalty fee, but you’ll have to return two-thirds of the payment we gave you earlier, around 20 thousand dollars. As for the gifts we provided you for blood replenishment, you can keep those And If you refuse to comply Blue Vale won’t let it slide. Her words carried an undertone of threat. unspoken aloud in the presence of Gina, but Olivia hoped Cathy would understand.

Cathy was foolish. She understood that refusing could bring trouble from Blue Vale in Gina’s absence. Gina might protect her once, but not indefinitely. Til comply and refund,” she said.

“That’s good” Olivia said with a hint of satisfaction

After Gana helped Cathy regain her freedom, she showed no intention of staying longer. Turning around, she left, with Cathy quickly following her footsteps.

Gina's paze darkened as she stepped out of the hospital, there was something wrong with this hospital. She would never allow a supposedly reputable medical institution to engage in activities that endangered lives. Despite the hospital's size, attracting blood donors like Cathy, there were likely many others. The lure of high salaries was significant, for now, Gina had no evidence. She could help Cathy but couldn't find other done to convince them otherwise. She needed to know what Blur Vair was doing with all that blood

"Miss Miller, Miss Miller" Cathy's voice interrupted Gina's thoughts.

She turned to look at Cathy: "What's wrong"

"Thank you for saving me? Cathy expressed her gratitude. "I-1 want a way to repay you she promised earnestly.

"Alright" Gana nodded lightly and asked, "Apart from persuading you to become a blood donor, did your boyfriend encourage others to do the same?"

Chapter 317

Cathy remained silent for a moment. Gina grew a bit displeased. "Are you still trying to protect your boyfriend regarding matters of life and death?"

Cathy was taken aback when Gina hit the nail on the head. Initially, she found the contract unreasonable but couldn't resist Andy's persuasion.

Signing that contract felt like signing away her autonomy, akin to indentured servitude. And it wasn't just her; she suspected other girls who experienced shock from blood donation might be in the same predicament. Unlike her, those unable to pay the breach fee weren't as fortunate to encounter Gina. If she withheld information from Gina, it would be indirectly causing harm, even leading to fatalities.

"Indeed, he's constantly recruiting people to become mobile blood banks," Cathy admitted truthfully.

Try to stop him as much as possible, Gina paused. "Consider it as repaying me."

"Alright, I'll do my best." Cathy replied, meeting Gina's gaze.

Finally, Gina added. "Be careful, don't let Andy find out, and don't get yourself hurt." Andy wasn't a good person, let alone a suitable match. Gina saw through him better than Cathy did.

Cathy nodded silently.

"Go back and rest well, Gina said.

After Cathy left. Gina walked far away and found a quiet spot before calling Michael. "Investigate Blue Vale Hospital. They attract a large number of people to donate blood with high salaries. Find out where the blood they collect ends up."

"Got it," Michael replied solemnly. He continued, "By the way, Gina, Colin Barnes is looking for two other collectors with the 79 Lafite. It seems like he loves that wine. Without one bottle in his collection, he's keen on acquiring the only two remaining exquisite bottles worldwide."

Gina instructed Michael to closely monitor Colin and see what other tricks he might have. She found the discovery quite intriguing. With a faint smile, Gina added, "Stay ahead of him. Find those two collectors first and purchase the wine."

"Understood," Michael said.

Gina hung up the phone and realized she was being followed. Without alerting the follower, she continued, taking a less crowded route once she reached her apartment complex.

Ivan felt increasingly uneasy but couldn't quite understand what was wrong. He continued to follow, intending to turn the corner, when suddenly he was kicked hard.

The blow landed in his lower abdomen, narrowly missing a more sensitive area. Ivan looked at Gina in anger.

Gina recognized Ivan. "Are you Millers never going to leave me alone? Didn't you say you wouldn't bother me again?"

Ivan's expression turned cold. "Mom did say that, but the condition was for you to help Miller Jewels through the tough times, not snatch it away"

"Snatch it away?" Gina found it somewhat amusing. "Without me Miller Jewels would have turned into a mess.

In fact, without Gina's investment arrangements and the personally designed Wish collection, Miller Jewels would have been nothing but a sinking ship.

"I advise you, Gina Miller, to return Miller Jewels to us before I lose my patience and stop being civil," Ivan said menacingly.

Gina responded calmly, "That's not going to happen."

"Is that so?" Ivan sneered, "Don't underestimate me. I could take your life right Ivan pulled out a handgun and aimed it at Gina. "This gun is equipped with a silencer. I can make sure you die quietly in this alley

Gina remained unfazed, her expression still calm and composed. "Is that so? Then go ahead and shoot."

Ivan was taken aback. He couldn't detect a hint of fear on Gina's face. Why wasn't she scared? Instead, her unnerving calmness was almost terrifying. How could anyone not be afraid when faced with a gun, especially when it was pointed at their head? And Gina was a woman. 'Da*n it, she must be some freak! he thought.

Ivan thought that Gina still didn't grasp the seriousness of the situation. "Do you think I'm bluffing? Or do you believe this gun isn't real and can't kill you? Don't assume that just because you have status, influence, and Gabriel's protection, I won't dare to kill you. Killing you means I get all your assets and can still walk away unscathed. Do you think I'm joking with you?" Search The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

However, he'd need to share some benefits with the mercenary group to get away cleanly. Killing someone and covering it up wasn't easy, but offering rewards was no big deal. After all, Gina was wealthy. Once he got his hands on her assets, affording those rewards wouldn't be a problem.

"I doubt it. I'm not particularly eager to listen to nonsense. If you think you can shoot, go ahead and shoot." Gina said calmly.

Ivan was puzzled, not entirely understanding Gina's words. What did she mean by "if you think you can shoot, then go ahead and shoot"? Ivan felt underestimated by Gina. He believed she was mocking him, implying that he wouldn't shoot.

"Alright. Gina Miller. Ivan gritted his teeth. "You said it yourself. When my bullet hits you, there'll be no turning back. Prepare to die. He was determined to execute Gina on his return.

Just as Ivan was about to pull the trigger, he suddenly felt a slight prick on his neck, as if an insect had bitten him. Instinctively, he touched his neck to see what had happened. But to his horror, he found himself unable to move. It was as if his entire body had lost sensation and control, except for his consciousness. He felt paralyzed, unable to command his actions. Ivan's eyes widened in terror as he stood helplessly frozen in place.

As Gina calmly approached him, Ivan watched in astonishment. During their conversation just now, Gina had subtly captured his attention and then swiftly shot a threadlike blade hidden in her fingertips, striking a crucial point on Ivan's neck. Ivan found himself completely immobilized. The threadlike blade was thin and long, almost invisible even to someone with excellent eyesight. Ivan had no idea it could also be used as a hidden weapon.

Gina walked up to Ivan and took the gun from his hand, pressing it against his forehead.

Beads of sweat instantly appeared on Ivan's forehead.

He refused to admit it. "How dare you shoot me?"

Gina smiled nonchalantly. "If you dare, why wouldn't I?"

"How dare you?" Ivan asked a silly question in a panic, "If you kill me, do you think Gabriel will help you hide it?"

"No, I don't need Gabriel's help. I can handle this small matter myself, Gina said slowly.

Ivan thought. A small matter? Did she mean killing me is just a small matter?

How lawless she is!

With a real gun pointed at his head, Ivan was afraid and did not dare to retort. He said through gritted teeth, "Do you have to be so ruthless? We are related by blood, and do we have to fight to the death? It doesn't matter to you if Miller Jewels is not under your control. However, it's important for Mom, Noah, and James. You snatched it away. Aren't you trying to force them into a dilemma?"

Gina chuckled. "Force them into a dilemma? They're healthy adults. Other than running a company, can't they seek a job? Besides, your mom has such a promising son like you. Looks like you've made a name for yourself overseas. Since you dare to kill me with a real gun, can't you support your family of eight

You Ivan could say nothing.

"Since you came with the intention of killing me, I should return the favor."

Gina's expression turned cold as she slowly pulled the trigger.

Ivan was terrified and immediately admitted defeat. "Don't! Don't! I don't want to die!"

Gina was about to say something when she suddenly heard the sound of water flowing.

She frowned and looked down. It was Ivan who had peed out of fright...

Gina distanced herself from him in disgust and mocked, "You're quite a coward."

Ivan's face turned red as if he had been greatly humiliated.

He did not know what trick Gina had played to immobilize him. If not for that, he would not have lost his composure!

Now, he could not resist Gina. To save his life, he did not dare to refute, either.

Gina threw the gun to the ground, stomped on it, and shattered it. Not intending to waste time with Ivan, she warned him indifferently. "If you dare to provoke me again, I'll cripple you so that you can't walk around anymore.

"Just stand here. You'll be able to move in 12 hours."

With that, Gina left.

In the villa, Colin stared at the laptop on the coffee table with a gloomy face. He was waiting for a person to pick up the video call.

The moment the call was answered, he smiled at the grey-haired foreigner on the screen.

The foreigner was the first to greet Colin. "Hello, Mr. Barnes."

"Hello, I won't beat around the bush. I heard that you bought a bottle of 79 Lafite for 30 million dollars as a collection. I want to buy it from you. I'll bid 100 million dollars. If the price is suitable, how about we call it even?"

The foreigner said regretfully. "I'm sorry, Mr. Barnes. The bottle of wine you mentioned has been bought. I don't have 79

Lafite now."

You sold it? When?"

Colin was a little anxious.

"Yesterday," "The foreigner answered.

Was there such a coincidence?

Colin had found out who the remaining two collectors were and contacted one of them. He did not expect the wine be sold.

"I'm really sorry, Mr. Barnes... The foreigner wanted to express his regret for not being able to do business with Colin, yet Colin no longer had the patience to listen. He hung up the video call and contacted the last collector.

He received the same answer-the wine had been sold.

At that moment, Colin could guess Gina was the one who bought the two bottles of wine.

Exasperated, he picked up the ashtray and smashed the coffee table. After calming down, he touched his face and suddenly laughed softly.

He thought, "Interesting. How interesting! Gina, you're so capable! Am I a clown in your eyes?"

Colin gritted his teeth and smiled sinisterly.

He took a deep breath and called Gina.

Gina picked up the call but did not say anything.

Colin sneered. "Miss Miller, you've been waiting for my call for a long time, right?"

It wasn't difficult for Colin to get Gina's phone number,

Gina said casually, "Why would I wait for your call? Mr. Barnes, don't be overthinking."

"Is that so? You bought the only two 79 Lafite in the world. Arent you waiting for me to buy them from you?"

"No. You're not the only buyer who wants to collect the 79 Lafite Why should I sell it to you? I can sell it to any buyer as long the price is satisfactory.

"Possibly, I won't sell them. I may take it out to celebrate the festive and drink it myself. I don't have any thoughts of hoarding wine. In my opinion, 79 Lafite is just a kind of expensive wine."

Colin was a little angry. However, being angry couldn't solve the problem, and spending money could. He said patiently. "Alright. Miss Miller, I won't beat around the bush with you anymore. I want to buy it. Tell me, how much do I have to pay?"

"200 million dollars," Gina said calmly.

Colin sneered "Miss Miller, you're quite a businesswoman. It doesn't matter. I can accept two bottles of 200 million dollars."

"No, it's a bottle of 200 million dollars."

"What?" Colin was exasperated. Wasn't Gina taking him for a fool

“Mr. Barnes, remember, I’m not forcing you to buy it. I’ve said an choose not to sell it to you. Whether you buy it or not is up to you.”

With that, Gina hung up.

Colin was even angrier. He cursed inwardly. “That bi*ch dared to hang up on me!

He made another call. The moment Gina picked up the phone, he said decisively, not going to argue with her, “I’ll buy it.”

“Mr. Barnes, you’re so straightforward, Gina said with a strange smile.

Colin smiled coldly. “Miss Miller, isn’t it a little early to be smug? Today, you took 100 million dollars from me with two bottles of wine. Have you ever thought I would take more from you one day?”

Ivan returned to the Miller’s residence.

Ella had just left the hospital and was sitting on the sofa. Seeing him finally return, she rebuked, “What’s wrong? Why did you come back so late? Olivia said you went to Gina. I kept calling you, but you didn’t answer. You almost scared me to death. I thought Gina had done something to you and you can’t be back!”

Ivan’s face was a little gloomy. Gina did not do anything overboard to him. She only made him stand in a small alley for 12 hours.

It was fine if he was only scrutinized by passers-by. However, his pants were wet...

Fortunately, he had been standing for too long, and his pants dried.

Ivan took a sip of water. For a moment, he found it difficult to speak, not wanting to talk about his cowardly experience today. Anyway, he would not admit that he was inferior to Gina.

He thought he had been careless and underestimated Gina.

Ella noticed Ivan's displeasure and asked, "What happened? Did Gina bully you?"

Ivan was agitated. "How is that possible?"

Ella was shocked. "Shoot her? Are you crazy? A life for a life. If you kill her, can you stay out of it? I won't allow a single member of the Miller family to be a murderer!"

Ella was confident that the Miller family would be the richest family in Norwood again. If her son became a murderer, wouldn't people criticize him in the future?

If so, the Miller family would not be able to raise their heads high.

Ivan smiled disdainfully. "Mom, since I dare to do it, I can certainly get away from it. This time, I was careless and let Gina escape. Next time, she won't be so lucky!"

Ella was still a little worried. She was recovering, and when she was agitated, she suddenly felt dizzy.

Ivan said, "Mom, don't worry about me. The most important thing for you now is to recuperate. I don't have a father anymore. I can't lose you."

Ella sighed. "As long as I worry less about you guys, I'll feel better and recover.

Chapter 310

Olivia, standing silently on the second floor, listened to the conversation between Iran and Ella. She had overestimated Ivan.

Ivan had promised loudly that he would kill Gina.

Unexpectedly, he was too weak.

Not to mention Gina, even Olivia looked down on him. She thought, I can't have any expectations for the Miller family.

No one in the world is completely reliable. It's better to rely on myself.

Relying on myself to obtain Mr. Barnes' help...

In Jackson Group, David placed a project document in front of Gabriel.

"Mr. Jackson, this is a new competitive game developed by our company. The test results are not bad. Now, we need more publicity. The current plan is to let a celebrity endorse it. What do you think?"

"No problem," Gabriel said calmly,

"Alright, choose a suitable candidate now,

David left Gabriel's office.

After dealing with a bunch of files, Gabriel rubbed his eyebrows tiredly. He took a break and looked at his phone. Gina did not reply to his message.

Gabriel was a little depressed. He called Gina directly.

"Hello? Isn't it working hours now?" Gina teased.

"Yes. I'm taking a break. I looked at my phone and realized that you didn't reply to my messages," Gabriel complained,

"I was dealing with some matters just now and forgot..." Gina said guiltily.

She thought she had replied to Gabriel.

“What sort of things?” Gabriel asked.

“Sell the wine to Colin, two bottles of 400 million dollars. The deal was just completed. He got someone to take the wine away,” Gina said in a good mood.

She was happy, and Gabriel was the same. “Good joy.”

“Did you call just to tell me I didn’t reply?” Gina asked.

“Yes,” Gabriel answered straightforwardly. “Also, I want to see your

“But you’re at work,” Gina reminded.

“I’ve been working hard. It’s alright to slack off occasionally,” Gabriel said.

“Then, are you going to sneak out and meet me?”

“No...” There was an important meeting later, and Harry would also attend. If Gabriel delayed the meeting because of private matters, Harry would stir up trouble again,

“I can go to Jackson Group to accompany you if it doesn’t bother your work...” Gina probed.

Gabriel was a little happy. “Really?”

“You can come.” Gabriel could not wait any longer. “No, I’ll pick you up. There’s still an hour before the meeting anyway.”

Twenty minutes later, Gina reached the Jackson Group.

Harry was waiting for the elevator. He heard the sound of a car at the door and turned around, only to see Gina getting out of the car.

Harry could not hold it in. "Miss Miller, I know you're Gabriel's girlfriend. Gabriel is working now. Even if you want to be intimate, can't you do it after work? Do you have any sense of propriety? Gabriel has never been so unreasonable in the past.

Gina smiled calmly. "Mr. Harry, how do you know I'm here to date him and not for work? Maybe I'll talk about collaboration"

"Collaboration? With a hospital? I don't think Gabriel has the intention to do so. Besides, Ethan has a medical project under development. Don't do anything unnecessary and annoy others, understand? Harry snorted coldly. He did not hide the contempt for Gina in his eyes. He was annoyed with Gina, especially when he saw her in the Jackson Group.

He was more afraid that he would see Gina in the Jackson Group every day in the future and that Gabriel would give its shares to Gina

Gina was neither servile nor overbearing. "Mr. Harry, you don't have to rack your brains to guess my intentions. Rest assured. I'm not interested in competing with Ethan for the medical projects. Moreover, whether my meeting with Gabriel is private or not has nothing to do with you. Don't talk too much. It's quite annoying."

"You..." Harry was furious.

Gina entered the elevator and immediately pressed the button to close the door. She smiled and said, "Mr. Harry, I know you don't want to stay with me, so please wait a little longer."

Harry was about to explode with rage. If he shouted at Gina to get out, it would be disrespectful to his seniority. Moreover, he was now in the Jackson Group, Staying with Gina in the elevator would embarrass him, and continuing to wait seemed no different.

Harry could not help but think. 'Bit*h!

She's so good at playing tricks. I'll remember it!

Gina arrived at Gabriel's office. She had just knocked when Gabriel opened the door.

The moment he saw her, a smile appeared on his previous cold face.

"You've been waiting at the door?" Gina asked.

She was surprised. Gabriel... could not wait to see her?

Gabriel was a little embarrassed. "I want to see you as soon as possible."

"Come in. Gabriel took Gina's hand and led her in.

Otherwise, if others saw them being lovey-dovey, wouldn't his dignity as the president be gone?

Unfortunately, even if he closed the door, he could not get intimate with Gina. He had to deal with work.

Gabriel sat back in his chair. Gina walked to his side and said, "T see what Mr. Jackson is busy with. Is that okay?"

"Of course. Gabriel nodded. "Why not?"

Gina teased him, "What if I see the confidential information accidentally?"

"So be it. We're family. Of course, you can see it. Gabriel could not hide the pleasure in his eyes.

Gina also smiled.

Gabriel was a little embarrassed as he said, "There's no other chair. Do you want to sit on my lap

“No!”

Gina was shy.

She calmed herself down and said, “I have a question for you.”

“What? I will tell you everything I know,” Gabriel said.

“I want to know.... when did you fall for me? You know, I have a missing memory. So, how long ago did you know me?”

“Three years ago, when we agere overseas...” Gabriel was a little hesitant. “Do you want to know? Perhaps my memories can remind you something. If you want.....

Gina shook her head. She had thought about it. Although she could no longer remember what had caused her memory loss, she was sure that it was her choice. She had probably gone through an MECT.

She didn't want to recall anything.

It was good to forget.

Gabriel stopped the topic. “Alright, I won't say more. You just want to know the time, right?”

Gina nodded and thought of something else. “Isaac has told me one thing. When you were 23 years old, you disappeared for a whole year. No one could contact you, and Mr. Neil was worried about you... Can you tell me where you went that year?”

“Mosnioca. I was overseas investigating my mother's death. And met you that year, Gina,” Gabriel said.

Memories flooded his mind. He had a lot of things to say, but Gina no longer had any memories of that time. Since she was unwilling to recall the past, he would not mention it again.

You went abroad to investigate?”

Gina was a little surprised. "Why did you have to go overseas?"

"It's a long story. My mother suddenly had cancer and it worsened rapidly. It's too strange. I've been investigating and I've found a rumor. It's said that someone in Mosnioca secretly developed a carcinogenic agent that can kill people without a trace. If one were injected with it, he would die of cancer, and no one would notice anything abnormal.

"I suspect that my mother was secretly injected with the drug, which is why she suddenly had terminal cancer.

"After getting the clue, I continued my investigation. Unfortunately, I didn't find the research location or personnel that were studying the virus."

Gabriel was in a bad mood as he recalled, his tone upset.

Cina placed a hand on his shoulder to comfort him. "The truth will be found."

"You're right." Gabriel covered Gina's hand and nodded.

After a short silence, they tacitly stopped talking about the topic. Without new clues, discussing it would only bring them pain.

Gina looked at the documents on Gabriel's table. "Soul Blade. Is this a game that your company has recently developed?"

"Yeah, now we're looking for an amba*sador."

"A celebrity?"

"Yes," Gabriel replied. "Do you have a recommendation?"

Gina asked, "Can 1 recommend one?"

"Of course!"

"I don't have anyone to recommend, but I do have a company to recommend."

"Which one?"

"Star Entertainment

It was Aria's company.

Last time, Aria said she was Gina's friend and rejected Olivia's 200 million dollars of investment without hesitation. Olivia's money was extorted from Gina, and even if she invested, it was likely that Gina would recover it. Even so, Gina still thought Aria was a loyal friend. After all, she did ask Aria to be biased at that time. This time, it was her turn to be biased.

"Alright. Star Entertainment Company is okay. How about you choose? You can choose whoever you want, Gabriel said.

Gina joked, "Huh? Mr. Jackson, you want me to work for nothing

"Of course not. Is 10% of the Jackson Group's shares enough for the salary?" Gabriel was serious.

Gina didn't want it. The shares of Jackson Group were valuable, but she wasn't short of money. Moreover, some people in the Jackson family didn't like her. If she took the shares, they would probably cause trouble again. She knew Gabriel only wanted to treat her well.

Gina looked at Gabriel and said, "Mr. Jackson, you're so generous. Aren't you afraid of being criticized for being selfish?"

Gabriel held her hand and placed it on his face. "I have selfish motives. After you become a shareholder of the Jackson Group, you have to work here in the future. This way, we can meet during work hours."

Gina was amused. "You think I'm not tired enough, and that's why you want to offer me another job, right?"

Gabriel got up and pulled Gina into his arms. "I'm sorry. I just...just like staying with you. I don't want to be separated from you for even a second. If only I could stick to you."

Gina's eyes widened. "I didn't expect you to be so mushy!"
