Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy chapter 1961

If Christopher found out that she had faked the consent form, he would stop at nothing to force Bonnie to get rid of the baby!

As soon as she thought of this, Bonnie bit her lip and exclaimed, "I lost the form!"

With that, she shot Jim and Christopher a displeased look. "Who in their right mind would even keep it?"

Christopher burst out into laughter. "Lose it?"

He crossed his arms in front of his chest and fixed his gaze on Bonnie's flat belly. "If you had gone through with the surgery, the surgeon would've told you to keep your consent form in a safe place, not just to declare it to the medical insurance company but also to serve as proof when the hospital calls you back for a follow-up appointment in the future.

"You claim that you've lost the form, so it's either because you didn't know better or you're lying."

As he said this, Christopher placed his hands behind his head. "You can only choose one, Bonnie."

Bonnie clenched her fists next to her upon hearing this. She bit her lip and could not help feeling a little nervous.

She had planned to leave Merchant City and go somewhere new where she could start her life afresh with the child.

However, Christopher and Jim showed up out of nowhere and were now trying to get her to admit that the child was still alive and trying to force her to go with them!

As soon as she thought of this, Bonnie could not suppress her rage any further. She bit her lip and dug her nails into her palms. Her entire body was starting to tremble.

A split second later, she let out an exhale and decided not to hide the truth anymore.

"She didn't lose the form."

Suddenly, a man's voice rang out from the door.

Everyone in the room glanced in the direction of the voice. A young man dressed in acid-washed denim was standing at the door, trying to catch his breath.

His features and his voice bore a striking resemblance to Jim when he was younger! Jim and Christopher exchanged a look of surprise.

Who was this man, and why did he look so alike to Jim?

"What did you say, Sean?" Bonnie could not believe her ears.

She stared at Sean in disbelief and echoed, "The surgery form..."

Sean let out an exhale and quickly took out a folded piece of paper from his pocket. "Ms. Bonnie, you left this form in your laundry basket yesterday, and I came across it when I was in the laundry room just now. I was just coming over to pass it to you, but when I arrived, I heard you guys talking about it."

With that, he strode over and handed the paper to Bonnie. "Is this the one you were talking about?"

"Ms. Bonnie, you shouldn't be so careless; how can you possibly misplace such an important document?"

Bonnie felt the blood rush into her head as she stared dazedly at the paper in her hands.

Christopher quickly lunged forward and plucked the paper out of her hands. "Let me see which doctor at which hospital helped you perform this surgery!"

With that, he unfolded the paper and laid it flat.

Bonnie felt her heart leap into a throat as she watched Christopher scrutinize the form carefully.

The entire room fell silent.

Bonnie bit her lip and watched Christopher carefully, her mind racing.

She had been planning to tell the truth if Sean had not popped out at the last minute

Did this mean her child would be saved?

No... Christopher was a doctor, so he could definitely tell that she had not gone through with the surgery

Nonetheless, Bonnie could not help wondering if it was possible, anyway.

What if Christopher had not paid attention and misread a minor detail... Would he believe that this form was real?

If so, her baby would be saved!

Bonnie felt as though her heart was inching deeper and deeper into the depths of an emotional chasm as she watched Christopher.

No, it was not possible.

How could Christopher miss anything, judging by the detailed way he scrutinized the paper?

Even discovering just a minor detail would expose her.

Bonnie closed her eyes and tried to calm her racing heart.

Why was it so hard for her to protect her child? It was already complicated enough with Jim in the way, but now, Christopher had popped up out of nowhere.

Was her child destined to end up a tragedy as her love life had?

Just as Bonnie was immersed in her worries, Luna grabbed hold of her arm in reassurance. "Don't be nervous. If he doesn't believe us, we'll just go to the hospital to get a new certificate to prove it. Since you've already gone through with the surgery, there's no way you would've been able to fake it."

Bonnie could not help feeling even more guilty when she heard this.

She did not say anything in response but instead just gripped Luna's hand in return. Her hand was covered in sweat.

She wanted to leave Merchant City and return to Banyan City, the place that felt like home, but

Harvey had told her on the phone that he and Shelly would be arriving in Merchant City that night.

Scanned with CamScanner

If she returned to Banyan City at this moment, she would not be able to see them.

Therefore, she had to stay, at least until she saw Harvey and Shelly for the last time. Only then would she be able to leave this place full of bad memories in peace...

A split second later, Christopher let out a sigh and put down the paper. There was a hint of helplessness and even a twinge of delight in his eyes. "I never thought you would've gone through with it, Bonnie."

While on the way here, he had been brainstorming how to get Bonnie to abort the baby.

Truth be told, a pill was all he needed to get rid of a one-month-old fetus, but Christopher could not help feeling that this was too simple.

He had to make her suffer through the pain; only then would she understand the consequences of her actions!

However, he never thought that Bonnie would choose to undergo an abortion on her own.

Not only that, but she had chosen the most painful way to do so—through surgery.

It seemed that she had truly understood her mistakes.

In that case, she had probably learned her lesson and would know never to sleep with other men anymore in the future.

Bonnie lifted her head to stare at Christopher in disbelief. "Are you...sure that this form is the real deal?"

According to what she knew of Christopher, he would not make such a stupid mistake.

He was an extremely observant and detail-oriented person, and because of this, she thought he would see through her in an instant...

How was it possible that...

"Of course it is." Christopher sighed. "How can I doubt you when you put yourself through such a painful procedure?" With that, he let out an exhale and stood up.

"Since you've gotten rid of the baby, I guess we have no business being here anymore."

As he said this, Christopher glanced at Jim, who had been sitting next to him. "Let's go, Jim."

Jim narrowed his eyes. "So soon? Aren't we going to bring Bonnie with us?"

Christopher curled his lips into a smile. "There's no need for that anymore."

With that, he glanced at Bonnie with a somewhat reassured look. "Since she's already gotten rid of our child, I don't think there's a need for me to take care of her anymore."

Jim furrowed his brows and stared at Christopher in puzzlement.

The child that Bonnie had aborted was Christopher's child, but why did he not seem upset at all and relieved instead?

When Christopher had brought up Bonnie on the phone the night before, he had teared up and claimed that he would stop at nothing to bring Bonnie home with him, where he would be able to take care of her.

He even seemed thrilled to be a father, but at this moment...

Jim furrowed his brows and glanced first at Christopher, then at Bonnie. He could not help feeling a little confused about this.

He could understand why Christopher had been so anxious to see the proof of Bonnie's surgery. After all, abortion was such a sensitive topic that one should not joke about it.

If Bonnie had lied to Christopher about getting an abortion when in reality she had not, then they would have trouble fighting for the baby's custody in the future.

However, to his surprise, Christopher seemed delighted to know that Bonnie had gone through with the abortion.

Jim narrowed his eyes. "Who does this baby truly belong to?"

For some reason, Jim suddenly wanted to know the truth about this baby.

He did not understand why he was suddenly compelled to find out about this.

It was as though...he had said this out of intention of getting to know Bonnie better.

Everyone in the room was shocked to hear this, even Jim himself.

After all, this was a man who had nothing to do with Bonnie and had even rejected her on a couple of occasions. Therefore, there was no reason for him to want to know anything about her, even the identity of the father of her child.

However, not only had the question blurted out of his mouth, but he was genuinely curious to hear the answer

Bonnie curled her lips into a smirk and glanced coldly at Jim. "What are you asking this for, Master Landry?"

"You didn't believe me when I said the child was yours, and now that I've aborted it, you're suddenly interested in knowing who the father is. Don't you think you're a little hypocritical?"

There was no hint of emotion in Bonnie's voice at all.

Christopher, too, quickly piped up, "Why are you asking this, Jim?"

"I've already said the baby belongs to me; don't you believe me?"

Jim furrowed his brows. "No, it's not that I don't believe you; I just that it's strange how you're not at all upset about the baby having been aborted. This isn't like you.

"Even if you never wanted the baby in the first place, you would have at least condemned Bonnie for undergoing an abortion without your knowledge, wouldn't you?"

"But not only weren't you upset, but you seemed even happier than Bonnie is. In fact, she seems to be the one that's mourning the baby's passing.

"Last night, you claimed that you love Bonnie and the child in her belly and that you'd stop at nothing to bring her home with you, but I find it hard to believe this after seeing everything you did today."

With that, he stared at Christopher and said coldly, "There's nothing I hate more in this world than being deceived, Christopher; you should know that.

"Especially by someone I trust and cherish."

Bonnie could not help bursting into laughter when she heard this.

She laughed so hard that tears formed in her eyes. "There's nothing you hate more than being deceived by someone you trust, you say? "That's the exact predicament you're in right now, Jim.

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy chapter 1964

Bonnie had been mocking Jim about being deceived by Charlotte, but to him, it felt as though she was mocking him about falling for her and Luna's tricks previously

His expression darkened as soon as he made this realization

He stared coldly at Bonnie's cackling face and curled his lips into a sneer. "Do you think this is funny?"

Bonnie finally stopped laughing and replied, with a slightly pitiful look on her face, "Don't you think it's sad, Jim?"

"I pity you more." Jim glanced coldly at her and added impassively, "You don't appreciate having someone who loves you as much as Christopher does, and instead, got yourself knocked up with another man's dirty offspring."

Dirty offspring

These two words felt like thorns pricking into Bonnie's heart.

She bit her lip and dug her nails into her palms so hard that her fingers started to hurt, but she did not seem to notice this.

She stared at Jim intently. She had so much to say to him, but no words could encompass her feelings.

Luna could not bear to see her like this. Sucking her lip harshly, she gently grabbed hold of Bonnie's hand to comfort her, and glanced at Sean, who was standing a short distance away." Come help me bring Bonnie upstairs."

Luna could tell that Bonnie was beginning to grow upset, and she was worried she would not be able to bring Bonnie upstairs on her own.

She would rather ask Sean to help her than risk embarrassing herself in front of Jim and Christopher

Sean paused for a moment, then quickly strode over. "Ms. Bonnie."

Bonnie regained her composure, let out an exhale, and stood up.

The split second she turned around, she froze in her steps and turned to glance coldly at Jim. "One day, you'll regret everything you've said today, Jim.

"My child isn't a dirty offspring, but you? You're an asshole to even suggest that."

With that, she extended her arm to Sean and said, "Bring me upstairs."

Sean nodded.

This time, he did not lift Bonnie into his arms and instead obediently helped her up the stairs.

Jim narrowed his eyes as he watched Bonnie leave. "What did you just call me?"

Bonnie did not even turn around. "You heard me, so I don't think I need to repeat myself."

"You!" Jim stood up in anger and was about to say something when Joshua curled his lips into a smirk and took a sip from his cup of tea. "This is my house, Mr. Landry, so I suggest you keep yourself in check.

"Bonnie is an injured woman recovering from her injuries, and no one in their right mind would take what she said to heart at a time like this."

With that, he put down his cup.

His entire being emanated an aura of coldness and hostility as he stared at Jim. "Are you intending to continue arguing with Bonnie, Mr. Landry? She lives in my house, so I have the right to protect her."

Jim clenched his fists in frustration when he heard this.

No matter how badly he wanted to berate Bonnie at this moment, he could not do so.

It was one thing to insult Bonnie but another thing entirely to get on Joshua's bad side.

The Landry family was on the verge of bankruptcy, and a single command was all it took for Joshua to topple his entire career.

Since Joshua had clearly stated that he was on Bonnie's side, Jim did not dare to go against him, fearing that Joshua would take his anger out on Landry Group.
