

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy Chapter 2111

Chapter 2111 Bonnie sat up in her seat and stared dazedly in the direction Jim had left. Where was he going? Was he leaving his car here? What was she going to do? Bonnie furrowed her brows and immediately took out her phone to call Jim. "Sorry, the number you have dialed is unavailable ..." the operator's cold, emotionless voice rang out from the other end of the line.

Bonnie dialed his number again, and every time the call went through, the same automated voice would echo.

Jim was still on the phone with his assistant when he heard a second call coming in. He furrowed his brows and glanced at the screen.

The screen displayed Bonnie's number, and he instinctively sneered.

How shameless was this woman? She knew that he did not want her to find out about what he was doing here, yet she was calling to bug him.

The more she pestered him, the more repulsed he felt toward her!

With that, Jim blocked her number and continued talking on the phone to his assistant. "Have you stopped the man?"

The midday sun was beating down harshly on Bonnie's skin.

With the engine turned off and the car locked, Bonnie could not even wind down the windows.

She was covered entirely in sweat as though she was a fish out of water.

The sweat crept into the wound on her belly, making it tingle and itch slightly.

Bonnie called Jim over and over, but no matter how many times she did this, she could not get through to him.

Finally, as her phone battery was about to die, she tried to call Luna, but Luna's phone had been turned off too.

Joshua's was the same.

Bonnie closed her eyes and could not help letting out a bitter chuckle.

What was going on with these two, having their phones turned off in the middle of the day? Were they up to some naughty stuff? Bonnie made a mental note to tease them about this the next time she saw them. The sun seemed to grow hotter and hotter, and by this time, beads of sweat were clinging onto Bonnie's lashes.

Her vision was starting to blur. Clutching her phone and scrolling through her contacts one last time, Bonnie finally decided to call Sean. "Hello?" his clear voice rang out from the other end of the line. "What's up, Ms. Craig?"

"Help me." Bonnie forced herself to lift her head and glance out the window. "I'm parked... next to a restaurant named Four Seasons and Rainbow Kindergarten.

"I've been locked inside a car...please...please help me..."

Before she could finish her sentence, she passed out. "Ms. Craig? Ms. Craig!" Sean shouted into the phone, sensing that something was seriously wrong. "Don't fall asleep!" He picked up his jacket and continued yelling into the phone as he stormed out the door, "Don't fall asleep, Ms. Craig! Look outside the window. What other buildings do you see? "They're too many restaurants and kindergartens by those names in this city!" However, there was no reply. Sean furrowed his brows and got ready to head out.

"Sean." Suddenly, Nikki strode over to grab his arm, then stared up at him with a pitiful expression. "Are you heading out to find Ms. Craig? Can you not go, please?"

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy Chapter 2112

Chapter 2112 Sean furrowed his brows and shot Nikki a displeased look.

"Nikki, Ms. Craig is in danger now and I have to go save her."

Then, he flung her arm away and snapped, "Get out of my way!"

Seeing how worried he was, Nikki sniffed and reached out to grab him once more."Can't you not go, Sean? Didn't you and Ms. Craig meet only yesterday? If so, why is she asking you for help instead of asking her friends or family?"

"You only met her last night, yet you've already suffered so many injuries because of her. That's enough! You don't owe her anything, so please don't go!"

Tears started to fall as Nikki added, "Sean, I'm really worried about you. Ms. Craig doesn't seem like a good person. Besides..."

She sniffed. "Besides, now that I'm so weak, aren't you afraid of what'll happen to me if you leave me alone? Can you not go..." A hint of impatience flashed through Sean's eyes when he saw Nikki crying.

However, he reminded himself that she was terribly ill, so he forced himself to suppress his emotions and said calmly, "Nikki, I'm going to save her. She's not a bad person, and if she had managed to get in touch with her family and friends, she wouldn't have called me in the first place.

"I'm not that important to her." Nikki bit her lip. "Well, since that's the case, you—"

"Because of this, the fact that she called me means that she couldn't get in touch with anyone else to help her," Sean interrupted her curtly.

"Nikki, time is running out, so get out of my way!"

Then, he turned and left.

Nikki bit her lip as she watched him leave, then quickly chased after him.

"Sean! Do you think she's more important than me? I'm terminally ill! If you leave me home alone..."

"Nikki." Sean froze in his steps. "I know you can take care of yourself. Besides, you've always been home alone when I go out to work, and nothing bad has ever happened.

"I'm heading out now, and I promise to buy you some of your favorite cake when I get home."

Then, he strode out of the house.

Nikki remained motionless, staring at Sean's retreating figure, and clenched her fists.

For some reason, she could not help thinking that...if Sean was to find Bonnie, she would lose him forever!

As soon as she thought of this, Nikki took out her phone and dialed

Sean's number.

At this moment, Sean had already left the house in his car.

The car he drove was a very old, second-hand car he had found from the factory he worked at and fixed up himself so that it worked fine as transportation. However, the car was very noisy, and it took a long time before he finally heard his phone ringing. He furrowed his brows when he saw the name on the screen.

Nikki, I'm already on my way to find Ms. Craig. You..." "Sean," Nikki's voice sounded frail from the other end of the line. "Can you come back and send me to the hospital? I... I think I triggered an attack." Sean could feel his chest tighten when he heard this. However, a split second later, he could not help feeling something was not right.

Chapter 2113 When Sean had left the house ten minutes earlier, Nikki had been perfectly fine, without even a single hint of an impending attack. Not only that, but her grip on his arm felt strong and sturdy. From his experience, Nikki would always have warning signs before she had an attack, and her attacks had never come out of the blue.

Sean pursed his lips and listened carefully for a moment. Suddenly, he could hear a hint of Nikki forcing herself to sound weaker than she actually was. He knew immediately what Nikki was up to, so he sighed and replied, "Nikki, it's not good to lie to other people."

Nikki said weakly, "Sean, I'm telling the truth. I need to go to the hospital... Can you..."

Seeing that she was still pretending, Sean lost all of his patience. "Nikki, I wouldn't mind you acting like this usually, but Ms. Craig's situation is an emergency! You can't possibly want her to die just because you think she's a bad person, right?" As he said this, Sean searched the road for any signs of a restaurant named Four Seasons and a kindergarten called Rainbow Kindergarten. "Stop bugging me, Nikki, and wait till I get home!" Then, he hung up the phone. However, as soon as he did so, he could not help feeling worried...

Could he be wrong?

What if Nikki had been telling the truth? He could not possibly let her suffer alone. After contemplating for a long time, Sean dialed the number of his boss at the factory where he used to work. “Boss, can you do me a favor by stopping by my house to send my sister to the hospital?”

The man on the other end of the line paused. “Is she having another attack?”

“Sean, I don’t want to be rude, but your sister isn’t even related to you, and yet you raised her like your own for so many years. It’s about time you”

“Boss,” Sean interrupted curtly. “If you don’t want to help me, then pretend I never said anything.”

The man fell silent for a moment before finally replying, “Alright. I’ll send her to the hospital immediately!” After receiving this confirmation, Sean hung up the phone and scanned the road for any signs of Bonnie. After searching for a long time, he finally caught sight of a junction between Four Seasons Restaurant and Rainbow Kindergarten. There was a black Kayenne parked by the roadside.

Sean furrowed his brows.

He recognized this car.

It was Jim’s. Sean quickly parked his car next to the Kayenne, and as soon as he got out of the car, he saw a hand pressed against the car window. Bonnie was slumped in the backseat, unconscious and covered in sweat!

She had one hand pressed against the glass window, while the other was laid over the seat, with her dead phone lying next to it. Her entire face was red as though she had been stuck in this heat for a long time.

Sean immediately grew worried when he saw this. He immediately found a hammer and wrench in his car and broke Jim’s car window.

Fresh air surged into the car, and Bonnie let out a grunt before passing out once more.

Without a second thought, Sean opened the door, picked Bonnie up in his arms, and sprinted toward the nearest hospital. “Jim...” Bonnie muttered under her breath as she clutched Sean's collar. "I...I want to keep this child and raise it on my own..."

"Don't take my baby away from me... Don't... Don't hurt Sean..."

Sean's entire body stiffened when he heard his name. He lowered his head to glance at the beautiful woman in his arms and suddenly felt as though a surge of electricity had struck him.

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy Chapter 2113

Chapter 2113 When Sean had left the house ten minutes earlier, Nikki had been perfectly fine, without even a single hint of an impending attack. Not only that, but her grip on his arm felt strong and sturdy. From his experience, Nikki would always have warning signs before she had an attack, and her attacks had never come out of the blue.

Sean pursed his lips and listened carefully for a moment. Suddenly, he could hear a hint of Nikki forcing herself to sound weaker than she actually was. He knew immediately what Nikki was up to, so he sighed and replied, "Nikki, it's not good to lie to other people."

Nikki said weakly, "Sean, I'm telling the truth. I need to go to the hospital... Can you..."

Seeing that she was still pretending, Sean lost all of his patience. "Nikki, I wouldn't mind you acting like this usually, but Ms. Craig's situation is an emergency! You can't possibly want her to die just because you think she's a bad person, right?" As he said this, Sean searched the road for any signs of a restaurant named Four Seasons and a kindergarten called Rainbow Kindergarten. "Stop bugging me, Nikki, and wait till I get home!" Then, he hung up the phone. However, as soon as he did so, he could not help feeling worried...

Could he be wrong?

What if Nikki had been telling the truth? He could not possibly let her suffer alone. After contemplating for a long time, Sean dialed the number of his boss at the factory where he used to work. "Boss, can you do me a favor by stopping by my house to send my sister to the hospital?"

The man on the other end of the line paused. "Is she having another attack?

“Sean, I don’t want to be rude, but your sister isn’t even related to you, and yet you raised her like your own for so many years. It’s about time you”

“Boss,” Sean interrupted curtly. “If you don’t want to help me, then pretend I never said anything.”

The man fell silent for a moment before finally replying, “Alright. I’ll send her to the hospital immediately!” After receiving this confirmation, Sean hung up the phone and scanned the road for any signs of Bonnie. After searching for a long time, he finally caught sight of a junction between Four Seasons Restaurant and Rainbow Kindergarten. There was a black Kayenne parked by the roadside.

Sean furrowed his brows.

He recognized this car.

It was Jim’s. Sean quickly parked his car next to the Kayenne, and as soon as he got out of the car, he saw a hand pressed against the car window. Bonnie was slumped in the backseat, unconscious and covered in sweat!

She had one hand pressed against the glass window, while the other was laid over the seat, with her dead phone lying next to it. Her entire face was red as though she had been stuck in this heat for a long time.

Sean immediately grew worried when he saw this. He immediately found a hammer and wrench in his car and broke Jim’s car window.

Fresh air surged into the car, and Bonnie let out a grunt before passing out once more.

Without a second thought, Sean opened the door, picked Bonnie up in his arms, and sprinted toward the nearest hospital. “Jim...” Bonnie muttered under her breath as she clutched Sean’s collar. “I...I want to keep this child and raise it on my own...”

“Don’t take my baby away from me... Don’t... Don’t hurt Sean...”

Sean’s entire body stiffened when he heard his name. He lowered his head to glance at the beautiful woman in his arms and suddenly felt as though a surge of electricity had struck him.

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy Chapter 2114

Chapter 2114 When Sean finally reached the hospital, Bonnie's entire body had gone limp.

"She probably wouldn't have survived if you had arrived even a minute later," said the doctor. After checking Bonnie to make sure she was still breathing, he could not help lifting his head to shoot Sean an accusing look. "What kind of boyfriend are you? How can you let her be locked in a car in the heat of the summer?"

"If she dies today, you'll become a murderer!"

Sean bit his lip nervously when he heard this. "Doctor, I'm not..."

"You're not what? Not a murderer?" The doctor shot him a cold glare.

"If anything happens to her, you're a murderer, and there's no way you're getting out of this!"

Then, he tossed a prescription slip to Sean and barked, "Go pay this at the counter!"

Sean paused for a moment, then quickly ran off, knowing that he had no time to waste.

He did not even think twice before he took out his personal savings card, which he usually reserved for paying Nikki's medical bills, and headed to the counter.

The receptionist seemed a little surprised to see him. "Did something happen to Nikki?"

This was the same hospital that Nikki would always come to whenever she fell sick, so most of the staff knew her and Sean.

Sean paused for a moment, then replied, "No, I'm here for my friend."

The receptionist glanced at the name displayed on the computer screen.

"Bonnie Craig...it's a woman..."

She lifted her head to stare at Sean. "So you finally got a girlfriend, huh?"

"You should've done this a long time ago, Sean. Otherwise, Nikki will never be able to get better..."

Sean furrowed his brows when he heard this. "What does my finding a girlfriend have anything to do with Nikki's illness?"

Seeing that he appeared displeased, the receptionist did not dare to say anything more. Instead, she pouted slightly and smiled awkwardly at him. “Nothing... Just pretend I never said that.”

.

Then, she handed the card back to him. “Alright. It’s done.” Sean was about to leave when he paused and suddenly turned to warn the receptionist, “I know what you guys have been saying about Nikki, and I think you’d better stop that.”

Then, he turned and strode away. The receptionist pursed her lips as she watched him leave. She could not believe how naïve this man was. How could he still buy into the idea of Nikki being terminally ill?

Even though Nikki was not the healthiest girl, she was not dying at all.

Instead, she simply had a minor illness that required her to be on medications, but she would always pretend to have severe “attacks” that required immediate medical attention.

Only fools like Sean would fall for this trick and even save hundreds of thousands of dollars for her medical bills...

As soon as she thought of this, the receptionist glanced at the computer screen, which displayed all of Bonnie’s personal information.

She pursed her lips slightly. “It turns out he has quite good taste...” By the time Sean arrived back at the emergency room, Bonnie had already been sent into the surgical suite.

He took out his phone and called his boss. “Boss, I’m already finished here. Have you brought Nikki to the hospital? Which hospital did you send her to?”

The man on the other end of the line was in the middle of work, so he furrowed his brows impatiently when he heard Sean’s voice. “How could I possibly have the time to check on your little sister? “Don’t worry. I sent one of my workers to check on her, and they’re probably already at the hospital. I’ll send you his number so you can contact him yourself.”

Sean nodded. “Thank you.” After hanging up the phone, his boss immediately texted him the number as he had promised.

However, no one picked up the phone. Sean furrowed his brows as a bad feeling arose in his heart.

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy Chapter 2115

Chapter 2115 Sean forced himself to stay calm and dialed the number once more. Again, no answer.

Every single note of the dial tone felt like a splash of kerosene in Sean's burning heart.

Could...something have happened to Nikki?

Sean called the same number over and over.

After a long internal battle, he finally let out an exhale and stood up.

With Bonnie wheeled into the operation room, the doctors would still save her even if he was not around, but Nikki...

Sean could not stop worrying about her now that he had no news about her.

What if he had been wrong? What if Nikki had been telling the truth?

What if the man had not managed to bring her to the hospital in time...

Sean could feel his skin crawl at these thoughts.

Finally, he gave in to his worry and stood up, intending to return home and find Nikki. "Hey, where do you think you're going?" Sean had taken just a few steps when the doctor who reprimanded him earlier emerged from the operation room.

When he saw Sean leaving, he furrowed his brows and chased after him.

"How dare you run away when your girlfriend is in danger? Guards! Get him!

"This man is not allowed to leave before the patient's condition is stabilized.

He's a suspect!"

Then, he turned and disappeared back into the room.

The two guards that had been summoned over did not restrain him, but they stared at him with such a menacing look that made Sean uneasy.

He furrowed his brows, unsure of how to explain to them that he was not Bonnie's boyfriend.

He knew that he should not leave just like this, but Nikki...

Sean closed his eyes and continued to dial the number again and again.

No answer.

Still no answer.

Finally, he gave in to the gnawing guilt in his heart and turned to leave.

However, at this moment, the doors to the operation room swung open, and Bonnie was wheeled out.

She had been unconscious when she entered, but at this moment, she emerged from the operation room, wide awake. Even though she still looked frail, at least she was conscious.

The doctor kept going on about instructions to look after Bonnie, and Sean listened to them patiently. Finally, after the doctor was done, Sean wheeled Bonnie into the ward.

Thank you. Sean,” Bonnie thanked him weakly as she leaned against the headboard, her face still pale. “If it weren’t for you...” If Sean had not arrived in time, she would have ended up a corpse in the back of Jim’s car. Sean scratched his head awkwardly and could not help feeling a little happy. “Don’t thank me.. It was nothing.” Then, he glanced at Bonnie and said, “But there’s something wrong with my sister, and I really want to...” Bonnie immediately understood what he was saying. “Go on. I’m sorry this took up so much of your time.”

Sean pursed his lips and replied, “Alright, I’ll be off now.”

Then, he turned and strode out of the room. Before he could even leave the room, his phone finally rang.

It was a call from Nikki. He picked up the call and said anxiously, “Nikki?”. “Sean...” Nikki burst into tears as soon as she heard Sean’s voice. “I don’t want to live anymore

– I...I was raped...”

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn’ t Easy Chapter 2116

Chapter 2116

Sean’s entire body was frozen in shock when he heard Nikki’s sobs.

He felt his entire body go stiff, unable to breathe or even move.

His brain seemed to have lost its ability to think.

Nikki's voice sounded far away as she cried, "Sean, I don't want to live anymore! I just turned nineteen, and I still have a long life ahead of me, but I didn't manage to save my first time for the man I truly love. I..."

Her voice was almost unintelligible as she sobbed, "What should I do now... Sean, are you coming home to see me one last time?"

"I don't have anything worth holding onto in this world. The only person I want to see before I die is you, so please come home. I'm going to die soon..."

Sean bit his lip and tried to suppress the surge of emotions in his mind.

"Nikki....don't...don't kid about things like this."

Did she not say she had an attack while she was at home? How... How did everything end up like this? How could she have been raped?

"Sean..." Nikki let out a bitter chuckle. "I can't believe even at a time like this, you still don't trust me and think I'm lying! Well, suit yourself!

"If you want to stay by your precious Ms. Craig's side, do as you please!

"You don't have to come home anymore. You can return tomorrow to get rid of my dead body!

Then, she hung up the phone.

Sean remained motionless, his feet frozen in shock, unable to move or even utter a single word.

"What happened to Nikki?" Bonnie furrowed her brows and got out of the bed. "I heard what she said on the phone... You should probably go back to check on her immediately." Sean bit his lip once more and glanced at Bonnie. Then, he nodded in reply and stormed out the door.

"Hey, why are you leaving so soon?" The doctor, who had entered the room at that exact moment, bumped into Sean as he sprinted out the door.

He stared at Sean's retreating figure, frowning. "I can't believe he's leaving as soon as you wake up. That boyfriend of yours is an irresponsible man." Bonnie froze, then smiled weakly at the doctor.

"He's not my boyfriend, Doctor. Is there a misunderstanding?"

The doctor raised his brows skeptically. "He's not your boyfriend? Wasn't he the one who locked you in the car and caused you to end up like this?" Bonnie shook her head. "No. He... He's just a very kind, helpful friend of mine. Besides"

She let out a sigh as she glanced in the direction Sean had left. "He has a sister at home who's terminally ill, and because of me, he was forced to leave her alone at home...and I think something bad has happened to her."

The doctor smacked his forehead in sudden realization. "No wonder he was so corto

"I thought he was your boyfriend and the culprit who locked you in the door and almost led to your death...so I stopped him from leaving multiple times..." Then, the doctor lifted his head to shoot Bonnie a guilty look. "Is his sister...okay?"

Bonnie pursed her lips and suddenly recalled what she had overheard Nikki saying on the phone. She clutched her hospital gown and asked, "Doctor, is it possible...for me to be discharged now?"

"I want to go to my friend's house to check on him, and I'll only be able to rest assured if I know his sister is okay."

The doctor paused for a moment, then glanced at Bonnie's medical record. "It's not that you can't...but judging from your condition..."