

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy chapter 2699

Chapter 2699 Rachel did not expect Gwen to suddenly bow for her, so she froze momentarily in surprise before finally frowning in disapproval. "Gwen, you're Luna's friend, so you're a friend of mine, too. "Even though I've never been an openly warm person, my heart isn't made of stone either, so you don't have to be so courteous with me."

She sighed and added, "Let's agree to wait until the DNA report comes out tomorrow before we decide on a course of action, alright?"

Gwen nodded earnestly.

She lifted her head to glance at Rachel one last time before finally returning to her room.

After seeing Gwen close the door behind her, Luna finally sighed and gently patted Rachel's shoulder. "This is a surprise."

She never thought that Rachel, who had always been a calm and somewhat stiff person, would talk to Gwen so gently in response to her gratitude.

Not only that... This was so foreign to Luna that she could not help thinking that this was not Rachel at all but a stranger who just so happened to look identical to her. Rachel had never acted this way, not even to Theo.

She had always been a strict and professional person. Rachel let out a sheepish laugh when she heard Luna's comment. She knew exactly what Luna was referring to.

She sighed and turned to stare at Gwen's closed door. "How can I bear to let her down?"

Luna nodded and could not help agreeing.

Rachel was right; no one could possibly bear to let Gwen down...except for Luke. Despite knowing how devastated Gwen would be after his death, he still chose to go ahead with his plan. Luna guessed that Luke had probably underestimated Gwen's love for him and thus did not think that she would be sad for too long after his death.

However, it seemed that...even Luke himself had underestimated Gwen's loyalty.

Just as the two women were immersed in their thoughts, Rachel's phone suddenly rang.

Her brow furrowed as she lowered her head to glance at the screen.

It was Theo.

She let out an exasperated sigh and pressed decline. "Excuse me for a while. I need to go to the bathroom."

With that, she disappeared into the bathroom.

The moment Rachel closed the door behind her, Luna's phone began to ring. She glanced at the screen.

It was Theo again. Luna curled her lips into a smirk and glanced at the closed door. When she heard the sound of running water coming from inside the bathroom, she could not help shaking her head.

"Hi, Theo." Luna went out on the balcony to pick up the call.

"Luna, I've arrived in Saigen City," Theo said as he stood at the entrance of Saigen City Airport, shivering in the cold. "Why is it winter here in this horrible place? I didn't bring a single winter coat with me, and now I'm freezing! Can you and Rachel come to pick me up?" Luna chuckled when she heard Theo's teeth chattering. "Didn't you check the weather forecast before coming?" Saigen City and Merchant City were numerous time zones away from each other, so of course the weather would be drastically different. Even though it was still autumn in Merchant City, Saigen City was already in the throes of winter.

"I came here because of Rachel, so how can I be bothered even to check the weather?" Theo's voice was trembling from the cold. "Come pick me up quickly!" Luna snickered. "You probably just want Rachel and can't care less whether I go or not, right?"

She had noticed Rachel declining his call. Theo was silent for a moment before finally laughing sheepishly. "You're right, as always, but

He glanced at his clothes. "But I'm not lying about the cold. If you don't come soon, I'm going to become a block of ice."

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy chapter 2700

Chapter 2700 Luna was amused by Theo's chattering voice. She sighed and glanced once again at the bathroom, then replied in a whisper, "I saw Rachel declining your call just now."

She rubbed her brow in exasperation. "I honestly don't think she'll be willing to come with me to the airport to pick you up."

Theo let out a sigh when he heard this. "That's precisely why I called you; I was hoping you could convince her to come see me..."

A hint of disappointment crept into Theo's voice. "After all, I had flown here just to see her, and I want to let her know how much I care about her—much more than that fiancé of hers does, anyway."

Luna did not know what to answer to this.

She was close to Caleb. Thus, she knew that Rachel and Caleb's engagement was just a hoax the two of them were nothing more than friends.

Caleb needed this engagement to conceal the truth about his sexual orientation, whereas Rachel just wanted an excuse to stop Theo from chasing her so she could focus on her career.

Not only that, but the reason Rachel had even 'gotten together' with Caleb in the first place was due to her disappointment in Theo.

Whenever she recalled the crazy things Theo had done for Roanne, Luna could not help thinking that if she were in Rachel's shoes, she would not choose to forgive him so easily, either.

However, since both Theo and Rachel were her friends, she was in no place to comment on their relationship.

"Alright. I'll ask Rachel if she's willing to come with me to pick you up. If she's unwilling, I'll have to send Joshua and Thomas to do so."

Theo was silent for a long time before finally sighing. He had no choice but to relent. "Alright. I guess that's fine."

Then, he could not help adding, "Luna, do you think that...I'm not as good as Caleb, and I don't even stand a chance of winning back Rachel's heart?"

This question was so abrupt that Luna did not know how to answer it.

At this moment, the door behind her creaked open, and Rachel emerged from the bathroom.

Luna quickly hung up. "Was that Theo?" Rachel asked, raising her brow. Luna did not think it was necessary to hide the truth from Rachel, so she nodded and said, "He told me that since you refused to take his calls, he had no choice but to contact me instead." "What does he want?"

"He..." Luna pursed her lips and quickly relayed their conversation to Rachel. "He wants us to go pick him up and bring some winter clothes for him too."

Rachel furrowed her brow in exasperation. "That idiot."

How could he not know that Saigen City and Merchant City were in different seasons? How could he have flown over without even thinking of bringing winter clothes?

Even though Rachel was snippy, Luna could not help noticing the worry and apprehension on her face. She asked testily, "Why don't we go pick him up together?"

"No point. Might as well let him freeze." Rachel shifted into a more comfortable position on the sofa and added, "He's not a child, and it's not like he flew over without any money. He can always just hail a cab and buy some winter clothing, so why do we need to go to all that trouble?"

Then, she fell silent for a moment before finally glancing at Luna. "Isn't Joshua in Saigen City too? Why don't...you ask Joshua to send someone to pick him up? "He's so dumb that I'm worried he might get lost here."

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy chapter 2701

Chapter 2701 Theo waited at the airport entrance in his thin clothing for almost half an hour.

Just as he thought he was about to freeze to death, a car pulled to a stop in front of him. Thomas stepped out of the car, glanced at this man who was only wearing a thin trench coat in this weather, and could not stop himself from snickering. "You're a world-famous artist, for heaven's sake. How could you have been so stupid?"

Theo glanced at him, frowning.

He remembered this man; he was the celebrity rumored to be dating a servant who worked for Luna. Not only that, but it was later exposed that he was, in fact, Joshua's cousin.

Theo's expression fell at this realization.

The fact that Thomas had come meant that Joshua was probably here too, but he did not even call Joshua for help.

This meant that Luna was the one who had sent them.

The reason Luna had asked them for help was that...she did not manage to change Rachel's mind about refusing to see him. Since the only reason he had contacted Luna was to seek her help in bringing Rachel along to the airport, Luna was not obligated to come pick him up herself at all.

This was why she had chosen to relay this task to Joshua and Thomas instead. A twinge of disappointment crept into Theo's heart at this. He was right...

He should have known that Rachel would not forgive him so easily. Even after realizing his mistake, Rachel was unwilling to change her decision.

She had always been an arrogant and dignified woman.

Not only that, but she was already someone else's fiancée, too.

"Hey, you speak English?" Thomas felt a little uneasy at the way Theo was staring at him. He strode over to Theo's side and patted his shoulder. "Or have you got a brain freeze?"

He took off his parka and draped it over Theo's skinny frame. "Come, let's get you into the car!

Theo finally snapped out of his stupor when he felt the warmth of Thomas' coat on him. He pulled the parka tighter and followed Thomas to the car. "Thank you, thank you so much."

Thomas took his suitcase from him and shot him a rather quizzical look. Then, he placed the suitcase in the trunk and opened the door so that Theo could get into the car. As he expected, Joshua was sitting in the backseat, talking on the phone. The look on his face was solemn, it was clear that he was in a meeting. "Alright. If there's nothing else, I have to go now. Don't worry; I'll let you know if anything changes."

Then, he hung up and turned to glance at Theo. "Long time no see."

The inside of the car was so toasty in contrast to the freezing cold outside that Theo's face flushed red from the warmth. "Long time no see, indeed."

Thomas got into the front passenger seat, glanced at Theo through the rearview mirror, and said, frowning, "Should we bring your friend to the hospital?" "No, no, I'm fine," Theo quickly replied. "You sure?" Thomas shot him a dubious look, then sighed. "It's cold here in Saigen City at this time of year, so why did you have to wait outside the airport? I remember that they used to sell cheap coats and parkas in the duty-free stores; why didn't you go buy one?"

Theo was a little frustrated by this comment.

However, he refrained from showing his emotions and instead replied, smiling, "I guess it slipped my mind."

Joshua curled his lips into a smile and glanced at him. "You forgot or didn't want to miss out on someone coming?"

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy chapter 2702

Chapter 2702 Joshua's remark had reopened the wound that Theo so desperately wanted to stop thinking about. His expression darkened, and he turned to stare out the window, avoiding Joshua's gaze. "I guess it's a little bit of both." Thomas turned to shoot Joshua a helpless look. "Why did you have to probe at his wound like that?"

Then, he glanced at Theo with a sympathetic expression and added, "Don't worry, my friend. It takes time and patience to wait for the woman you love to come around."

Joshua curled his lips into a smirk and raised his brows at Thomas. "I'm surprised you'd say that."

Thomas claimed that patience was needed to wait for a woman to change her mind, but he had shown no sign of patience at all when trying to win over Yannie's heart.

Thomas rolled his eyes at Joshua but did not reply. Lucas, who was sitting in the driver's seat, chuckled at this. "This is the first I've ever seen you and Mr. Howard bicker so lightheartedly, Sir."

Joshua and Thomas had been so preoccupied with work since they arrived in Saigen City that it had been a while since Lucas last saw Joshua smile like this.

"Shall we return to Mr. Howard's house, sir?"

Joshua murmured a response, glanced at Theo once more, then lowered his head and began scrolling through his phone.

Theo pulled his coat tighter around him and turned to stare out the window.

He knew the reason Joshua had come to Saigen City, and he was well aware of the fact that Joshua had been extremely busy lately.

This was why he had chosen to tell Luna of his arrival but not Joshua, but he never thought that...

The black Masevati slowly pulled away from the airport entrance.

Meanwhile, inside a taxi parked in the distance, Luna glanced at the woman sitting next to her. "You happy now?"

Rachel narrowed her eyes and curled her lips into a sneer as she watched the black Masevati leave. "I only came to see if he'd frozen to death. I'm a doctor, after all, so I can't possibly leave someone out to die."

Then, she turned away and crossed her arms in front of her chest as she leaned against the seat. "Well, since he's still alive, I guess we can head back to the hotel now."

Luna curled her lips into a weak smile and instructed the driver to return to the hotel.

All of a sudden, her phone chimed with a message from Joshua. (You guys should head home now.)

Luna smiled. (We're already on our way back.)

Then, she could not help adding, (Did Theo say anything to you?) Joshua glanced at the man sitting next to him, who was staring out the window in a trance.[He looks upset but didn't say anything.]

Luna pursed her lips and instinctively glanced at Rachel. (Rachel seems a little upset too.¹)

(Why would she be when she's the one who refused to come pick Theo up?) Joshua replied, smirking. (Women are so complicated, I can't even begin to wrap my head around her thoughts.)

Luna pouted slightly when she saw this. (You don't have to bother trying to figure out what other women think; focus on trying to decode me.)

(You're fairly easy to decode if I do say so myself.) Luna rolled her eyes and made no further comments.

The car soon arrived at their hotel.

As soon as the taxi pulled to a stop, Rachel yawned and hopped out of the car. "I'm so exhausted! I'd better get some rest now." Luna sighed and brought Rachel back to her room. Thankfully, the room she and Gwen shared was a suite, and they had an extra bedroom to spare. Initially, Yannie was supposed to stay with them, but since she was spending most of her time with Thomas, she did not need that room anymore. This was not necessarily a bad thing since this meant they had a bedroom to spare for Rachel. Luna and Rachel returned to the suite and rested up. The next morning, Rachel was awoken from her slumber by Gwen knocking on her door.