Pursuing My Ex-Wife Is not Easy chapter 3080-Luna furrowed her brow when she heard this.

She would have to keep Gwen out of sight when John visited them. At the same time, she had to get someone else to impersonate this so-called Andie Larson'.

At the thought of this, Luna sighed and glanced meaningfully at Tara.

Tara nodded in understanding, then turned and walked back toward the elevator with Luna.

As the doors shut, Tara sighed and said in a rather exhausted tone, "Thank God Robyn's memory failed her. Otherwise, all our plans would be ruined."

Luna nodded. Then, she glanced at Tara and asked, "By the way, how did John even end up with Gwen's father in the first place?"

Andy had been brought to Sharnwick City by Tyson's men, who kidnapped him. How did John end up kept in the same room as Andy and even took a bullet for him?

Did John also get kidnapped by the same people somehow? If so, why did they do this?

At the mention of this, Tara sighed and began to explain, "Well, here's what happened. Last night, we discovered that Andy was held hostage in an apartment complex, so our men searched every unit in an attempt to find him.

"However, since we were conducting the search in the middle of the night and would severely inconvenience the residents, we offered all of the residents some money to compensate for their trouble.

"Although we're only offering ten thousand dollars, this is still a substantial amount to most of the residents there, and they were delighted by this. John just so happens to live in the apartment complex right across. He and some of the other residents overheard this news and snuck into some of the empty units, trying to pass off as residents to get the money.

“Unfortunately for him, he just so happened to sneak right into the unit Andy was imprisoned in.”

Luna was so stunned by this that she fell silent.

She was not so much surprised by Tara’s generosity in offering so much money to the residents of the apartment complex, but...

She could not believe John would do something like this for money.

One could argue that 10000 dollars was a hefty sum, but from what Luna remembered, John was never a greedy person. He would never have resorted to such desperate measures for money.

She always thought he was just stingy and egoistic, but after witnessing John’s determination to start his company and refusal to receive help from other people, including the connections that Anne had to offer, she understood that

John was just a hardworking and down-to-earth man.

He had principles that he lived by, and someone like this would never attempt to cheat their way into 10000 dollars unless they were truly desperate.

“Well, we can’t blame him for doing this.” Tara shrugged when she saw the look on Luna’s face. “He’s certainly having a hard time right now. Not only does he have a child to feed, but there’s someone gravely ill relying on him too. From what I found, he had spent all of his savings on medical bills, and now, he’s barely scraping a living.¹ This shocked Luna. “Who’s ill?”
