Pursuing My Ex-Wife Is not Easy chapter 3088-This was the first time Anne brought Sammie out. Ever since she escaped from death, she became a different person-a recluse and was afraid of the sun. This situation became even worse after she became mute.

The last time she left the house was two weeks ago when she had to go for surgery.

However, she worried about John. In the morning, Robyn told her John was hurt and needed to stay in the hospital to rest. However, she had a hard time believing what Robyn said.

After spending so many years together with John, Anne reckoned she was the one who knew John the most. If it was a minor injury, John would never want to stay in the hospital. He cared too much about her and Sammie, so he never dared to let her worry about him. Therefore, it just did not sound reasonable if John would stay in the hospital because of a small injury.

Furthermore, Robyn had not returned home since the morning, which was nearly three hours since she left the house. After much consideration, she decided to call a taxi to go to the hospital with Sammie.

Unfortunately, she was so thin and weak that even the wind could easily blow her away like a kite. The road from the gate to the hospital was a short distance. However, it took her much effort to reach the hospital door. Even Sammie was stronger and had more stamina than she did.

Although Sammie just learned how to speak, she was a good girl. When she saw Anne walking very slowly, she slowed down her pace.

“Slowly. Slowly,” said Sammie, just like how John would talk to her when he taught her how to walk.

With the rooting from her daughter’s babyish voice, Anne walked slowly, step by step.

“Hi.”

Suddenly, a deep male voice sounded from behind. Anne stopped walking and looked behind. Just one look and she was stunned.

'Is he...Luke? Isn't he dead? Didn't he give his heart to Gwen to save Gwen? Why is he here talking to me?' Anne thought.

When Stefan saw Anne looking at him, he quickly strode forward at her. "Hi, I saw you at the gate just now."

He had no idea why, but this thin woman who looked dangerously thin was very familiar to him. Then again, he could not remember where or when he saw her before, nor did he remember knowing someone so thin and weak.

Anne paused and confirmed Stefan did not know who she was. She took a deep breath and used a hand sign to show Stefan that she was mute.

"You..."

Realizing the woman was mute, Stefan frowned. Although this woman looked very familiar to him, he knew he did not know anyone who was mute. Maybe his memory was in a muddle, or maybe she looked like someone he knew.

As such, he tried to put on a friendly smile-one that he thought was friendly-and said, "I notice that you have a problem walking, so I wonder if you need any help."

After that, he pointed behind him. It was a nurse with a wheelchair in front of her.

The nurse noticed Anne was looking at her and smiled. "This gentleman rented this wheelchair and hired me to take care of you. You look like you need some help and you have a child with you. Please sit in the wheelchair. You can choose to carry your child by yourself or I can help you. I understand hand sign language, so you can sign to me where you want to go."

Anne was stunned for a while after hearing that. Finally, she nodded. As Stefan said, she definitely needed some help.

After that, she looked at Stefan. Before she could sign, Sammie said, "Thank you so much."
