Chapter 1081

That's right,' Ashlynn thought. 'If the baby is gone, I won't stand a chance. Is Corentin going to force me to give birth to his child now?'

"Since we are here in the hospital, let's get you checked as well!" Instead of reflecting on his actions, Corentin decided to take it a step further.

Ashlynn paled and shook her head. "No. I won't give birth to your child. I won't..."

"We've found a doctor."

They drove the car to the main entrance of the hospital and Corentin carried Ashlynn out of the car and into the gynecology department.

She fought the entire way and eventually was drained of all her strength. The doctor took her blood sample before Corentin forced her into the inspection room.

Just as the doctor was about to operate the machine, Corentin waved her away and sat down next to the machine, before commanding, "Gloves."

The doctor handed him a pair of gloves hastily.

If others caught news of this, they might think that the heir to the Lloyd Group had fertility issues and soon, Corentin would become the laughing stock of the entire city. Corentin was smart enough to understand the risk, but just as she was certain that he would give up, she heard him say to the doctor, "Put me into a slot for the test."

"Sure." The doctor went outside to make the arrangement.

Ashlynn was still trying to process the fact that Corentin had agreed to take a fertility test, when Corentin pulled her into a certain room.

"What?" She asked, "I thought you needed to give them the sample."

When Corentin dragged her into the designated washroom, she immediately realized what Corentin was thinking and swiftly turned to escape.

Corentin stepped on the door and slammed it shut. "We are alone here. There's no need to be embarrassed."

"Do this yourself, Corentin Lloyd!" She roared.

"I never do it myself." He pulled her closer. "You are my wife, so of course, you should be the one who does it."

“You might have lost this grandchild, but you have great-grandchildren. Ms. Vallois has three children!”
The butler reminded Cory.

Cory thought of Anne and her triplets. Anne was the child of his eldest and had Nigel not been so determined to cut ties with his family, Cory would not have been so distant with his granddaughter.

“I haven’t visited Nigel’s grave since his death. I will go pay him a visit soon!”

“Yes, sir.”

Cory traveled to the graveyard by car and spotted a woman at the top of the stairs as soon as he arrived. The woman held a cane and was moving ahead slowly with a bouquet in her hand; there was a man holding flowers and offerings in his hands standing behind her as well.

Chapter 1084

Anne heard the sound of something being set onto the ground. She had not expected Cory to come all the way from Athetin as he had a horrible relationship with Nigel and had not mourned or appeared at all after Nigel’s death.

Anne had accepted the fact that only her and her children would come to the graves by now.

Cory stared at his eldest son's grave and sighed. "Nigel was my first-born and I was so proud on the day he was born. I had never imagined that he would break ties with me when he grew up, and I was hurt for a really long time."

"How could Dad accept all the shady business you were running?" Anne still remembered the things Ashlynn had told her and was still having a hard time believing all the inhumane acts the Lloyd Family benefited from. "You should be proud of having such a kind-hearted son, instead of feeling ashamed. I support my dad's decision, so I am on his side."

By stating that she was on the same side as her father, she was declaring that she would never stand with the Lloyd Family's values and she hoped that her grandfather would understand that as soon as possible.

"I know, and I can understand." Cory nodded. "Everything that the Lloyd Family does is legal, and you don't have to worry about that. I do want to accept you back into the family as my granddaughter and to have you included in our family tree. That's my way of respecting your dad as well."

Anne was shocked.

"Good. I feel reassured," Cory said.

Anthony remained silent. Had Anne not been related to the Lloyds, Anthony would have never been in contact with this family.

After all, all powerful beings had their own territories and would often remain out of one another's ways.

Once they arrived at the end of the stairs, Cory added, "I'll go back to my hotel and will stay here for about two to three days. Anne, if you want to return to this family, call me. No matter what you decide, I won't force you to do anything." With that said, he returned to his car.

Anthony stared at Anne intently without a word until they were inside the car. "You want to go back to the Lloyd Family?"

"He said he wants me to. I'm still considering..." She said.

The fact that she was considering it meant that she wanted to be a part of the family, or she would have refused Cory's offer on the spot. With all the members of her family gone, it was only normal for her to want to return to her roots.

"There's no harm in returning to the Lloyd Family," he said.

She nodded dazedly and Anthony grabbed her hands to wipe them with a warm wet towel.

"I can do it myself..." She wanted to avoid his touch. Though she could not see, she could still wipe her own hands.

"Don't move." He tightened his grip and refused to let her escape.

Anne gave up on resisting. The warm sensation slowly moved from the back of her hands to her palms and she felt exceptionally sensation because she could not see.

He moved from her left hand to her right and for a moment, it felt as though all the nerves of her hands were directly linked to her heart and her heart raced at the slightest movement.

“Enough.” Unable to stand it any longer, she decided to jolt her hands away and placed them under the table, while clenching her fists.

She hated how she felt because she knew what it meant: she had fallen for Anthony uncontrollably.

Anne could sense her heart racing, threatening to leap out of her chest.

Intimacy had only ever been a way for Anthony to satisfy his need to possess her, but for Anne, it started to mean something else. She panicked at the change of heart and would only feel safe if she could remain in a distance from Anthony, but Anthony would never allow that.

As he moved closer to her, Anne felt as though she was about to be devoured whole.

Startled, Anne struggled to hold onto her last strand of sense and struggled out of Anthony’s embrace.

“Stop it!”

She pressed her body up against the corner and held herself in fear as though that was the only way she could defend her pride.

The sound of running water and Anthony’s rasped breathing echoed in the spacious bathroom.

"I'm done, so I'll go outside first..." Anne stumbled out of the bathtub and grabbed her pajamas on the hanging rack, before exiting the room.

Anthony took a deep breath and ran his fingers through his hair, revealing his brooding features.

Ever since Anne had her memories back, she had been avoiding him.

'Why? Is it because of Bianca?' He thought, before landing his fist on the glass wall next to him furiously.

Anne heard the loud thud and tensed. She reached out to grab the pillow next to her and wrapped her arms around it to feel slightly more secured

A few minutes later, she heard the door to the bathroom opening and realized that Anthony was out of the shower.

She wondered for a moment if he was in a bad mood from what she did in the bathroom, as she knew just how dangerous Anthony could be when he was furious.

The bed sank as Anthony got into bed and Anne tensed, tightening her arms around the pillow she was holding.

Anne was glad that she could not see Bianca’s face, or she would have vomited with disgust at that very instant.

‘Who’s one big family with you?’ She thought to herself angrily. ‘You are the one who killed Dad! You are my nemesis, not family! How dare you show that face here?’

She quietly pulled her arm away from Anthony’s hold.

Anthony scowled and tensed, his expression darkening.

After taking their seats, the triplets looked around curiously.

“Bianca happened to be working here and wanted to visit me. I’m happy that she remembers me. Though your parents had done some wrong in their lives, let’s not let the past affect the next generation.”

Anne had no proof of Bianca’s crime, or she would have never allowed Bianca to flaunt herself in this manner.

Cory would not show mercy on Bianca if he found out that she was the one who killed his eldest son and Anne had not expected Bianca to be bold enough to show herself here.

The butler walked in and announced, “Elder Lloyd, the food is ready.”

“Let’s talk about the sign later. Let’s eat.” Cory got up.
