Chapter 1241

Corentin was to be her primary concern now, as the child in Ashlynn's womb would inevitably perish.

She was the eldest daughter of the Hilton family, the most delicate lady in Athetin, and the future head of the Hilton family. Who would dare to seduce her husband?

A mere maid, hailing from a slum, should return to where she belonged!

The Bintley stopped at the mansion, and Meredith entered the hall, taking Corentin's hand.

Once inside, Meredith turned around and threw herself into Corentin's arms, embracing his strong waist with both hands, and breathed in Corentin's ear. "You won't drive me away tonight, will you?"

This statement was clearly intended to convey her desire to engage in a physical relationship with Corentin.

The atmosphere seemed off at first glance, and all the other supervisors and servants had seemingly disappeared into thin air.

Corentin did not dodge or evade and even seemed to enjoy it a bit. "You have been with a lot of men in the past, haven't you?"

"What?" Meredith was taken aback by his words and then laughed. "It's the 21st century. You don't care about that, do you? But don't worry, I'm your fiancée now, and I only want you."

Finally, there was no movement.

Corentin really wanted to continue, as it would be a disappointment to stop halfway through such pleasure.

However, considering how useful this woman was, he lifted her head out of the water.

Meredith fell limply to the ground, pale and unconscious.

Corentin pressed his palm hard against her chest twice, and Meredith spat out two large mouthfuls of water before regaining consciousness and then passed out again.

Meredith woke up from a dream, panicked as she touched her face, relieved to find that she was not dead.

The pain of being waterboarded in the bathtub by Corentin was etched into her memory.

The bloodless color on her face did not recover either.

She did not know the room she was in, so she was probably still in the mansion.

Corentin sighed heavily, turned off the light, and went to sleep.

Meredith followed Corentin in order to find out where Ashlynn lived.

She did not see Ashlynn. Instead, she got a chance to spend some time with Corentin.

As soon as she returned home, Meredith could not hold back her anger any longer. She confronted Cory directly, her eyes blazing with determination.

"Meredith, is this true? You can't say that about Corentin. He's not that kind of person. Corey knew that Meredith was referring to the rumors about Ashlynn's pregnancy. He tried to play it cool, pretending to be unhappy on the surface.

"Uncle Cory, I wouldn't have come here to tell you if I weren't sure. Uncle Cory, you have to make a decision for me on this matter. I can't allow a woman outside to give birth to Corentin's child unless the marriage between the Hilton and Lloyd families is called off," Meredith said, feeling aggrieved.

Cory sighed heavily, knowing that he had no choice but to confront the truth. "The marriage between the Hilton and Lloyd families is a huge decision. The media are all rushing to report on it. Everyone knows this is a big event. Meredith, don't worry. I will definitely stand by your side and get rid of Ashlynn."

Owen watched as Ashlynn was led into the car by the steward and his men. He could not believe what was happening. He had to do something to stop this.

He quickly pulled out his phone and called Corentin.

The phone rang for what felt like an eternity before Corentin answered.

“Mr. Lloyd, Ashlynn was taken away by Cory’s people!” Owen yelled into the phone, his voice shaking with fear and desperation.

“I saw!” Corentin shouted back, his voice laced with anger. “I’m on my way now.”

Owen breathed a sigh of relief as he heard the sound of a car engine roaring to life in the background. He knew that with Corentin on the case, everything would be okay.

Corentin hung up the phone and threw it onto the passenger seat. He gripped the steering wheel tightly with both hands and stepped on the gas pedal, sending his black Bintley galloping down the viaduct.

Corentin caught up to the car that had taken Ashlynn. He pulled his car up alongside

Cory exclaimed, his face twitching with anger, “Corentin! Now you are the heir of the Lloyd family, a wealthy nobleman, not a hooligan!”

“Then mark my words, I must have the child in Ashlynn’s belly! I will kill whoever kills the child!” Corentin shouted back, standing up and towering over Cory. “In case you didn’t know, I don’t care if I’m not the heir of the Lloyd family!”

With that, Corentin picked up the gun from the table and stormed out of the room, leaving Cory seething with anger.

Cory knew that once Corentin set his mind on something, there was no changing it. He sighed and decided to give in.

“Okay!” Cory slammed his hand down on the table. “You can keep the child, but nothing must go wrong in your marriage with the Hilton family!”

Corentin did not say a word, but Cory could see the determination in his eyes. Cory knew that he had to be careful. If Mr. Hilton found out about the situation, it would be a disaster.

Corentin picked her up and sat on the couch, soothing her like a child. “Is your stomach hurting?”

“No.”

“Don’t worry, that old man won’t dare to bother you again. Your baby will be born safely.” Corentin reassured her.

Ashlynn was not surprised at all. How could Cory stand a chance against Corentin?

After all, Corentin was his own son, an undeniable fact.

Cory was caught off guard, but he managed to compose himself and say, “Beth, you don’t need to worry about that. We are a family now, and we have to do things for the sake of our children. Nobody cares more about this than I do.”

“With your words, I feel reassured. Meredith actually loves Corentin. Otherwise, I would never have taken this matter into my hands,” Beth said.

“There are guards outside Corentin’s villa. It’s not easy for you to get close to Ashlynn. One of them is a man named Owen. You can look him up,” Cory said.

After hanging up the phone, Cory sat there with a composed expression.

He had to teach Salvatore a lesson.

In the evening, Corentin came to the villa and had dinner with Ashlynn. As expected, he planned to stay the night.

“I have to go to the neighboring city tomorrow for work. I’ll try to come back and have breakfast with you the day after tomorrow.” Corentin took her hand.

“Don’t worry about me. I’ll be fine here,” Ashlynn said indifferently.

Beth sneered, clearly not believing her words at all.

"Corentin won't forgive you..." Ashlynn said.

"You don't need to worry about that." Beth looked at her pale face without sympathy and told the doctor, "Hurry up!"

After speaking, she turned and left.

Ashlynn heard the sounds of the surgical utensils clinking.

Corentin's gun was loaded, and his finger was on the trigger.

Cory and the others just looked down.

Ashlynn screamed in horror, "Corentin, don't! Don't be crazy! I'll tell you the truth, even if this never happened, I would still try to get rid of the baby!"

Corentin turned his head, his bloodshot eyes staring at her. "What did you say?"

"I never wanted to have your child. You know that! You've always been forcing me..." Ashlynn's words stopped abruptly as the gun was pointed at her forehead.

"Say it again!" Corentin's eyes were full of fury.

Ashlynn's heart skipped a beat. She suppressed her fear of death and closed her eyes. "Shoot me then..."

Cory watched Corentin's hand shake as he gripped the gun; no one wanted to hear the gunshot more than he did.

"I just want a baby. What's wrong with that?" Corentin's face was close, looking crazed and twisted.
"Someone has to pay the price for this."

Shaking off her hand, he turned and left the ward.

"Corentin! Corentin! You can't do this!" Ashlynn got off the bed and went after him. After running after Corentin's ruthless silhouette, she wanted to rush up to him but was stopped by his subordinates.
"Corentin, you can't be so inhumane! Corentin, please let Chichi go... If you dare to do that, I will never forgive you!"

Corentin ignored her and disappeared down the corridor without looking back.

When Ashlynn dragged her tired body back to the mansion, she could not see Chichi.

"Chichi? Chichi?" Ashlynn grabbed the maid and asked, "Did you see Chichi? Did you see it?"

The maid shook her head again and again.

Ashlynn went everywhere to find Chichi, and the more she searched, the more frightened she became.
