Chapter 1301

She sat up in exhaustion and bit her lips as tears scrolled down her cheeks before she realized it.

After sitting in bed for a few minutes, she struggled to get out of bed and headed to the bathroom.

She had her lunch on the balcony and remained there to look at the scenery afterward. Anne took a stroll on the second floor and realized that all the balconies were sealed with glasses, so she would not even have the choice to jump out.

Anthony was going to lock her here until he said otherwise, but she was clueless as to how he would be satisfied.

Her heart sank as she recalled all the things he had done in the past.

At dusk, she jolted in fear and instinctively wanted to run away from the hell that approached when she heard a car stopping outside the mansion. However, she could not bring herself to move at all as Anthony's shadow loomed over her.

Someone else walked into the room and Anne opened her eyes to find Kathryn before her.

Anne closed her eyes again as Kathryn checked her body and her temperature. "She's running a fever. I will have her take some pills for now."

Anthony fed her a pill and let her take a sip of water.

Kathryn shot one glance at Anne, before walking outside.

Ten minutes later, Anthony came out of the room and questioned, "Why would she run a fever? I checked and she wasn't injured."

"Her immune system is down," Kathryn said, "Mr. Marwood, she is only made of flesh and she is weak compared to you."

One could tell how strong Anthony was from his looks alone and Kathryn advised, "You might want to let her rest."

Anthony's expression darkened and he turned to leave without another word.

Relieved, Kathryn went into the room and was shocked by how slim Anne looked underneath the blanket.

"Anne?"

Anne opened her eyes and looked at Kathryn, before looking around the room.

"Mr. Marwood has gone downstairs."

"I...I want to call Lucas. I've decided to leave Luton and Anthony, forever..." She muttered through quivering lips as tears scrolled down her cheeks.

"What about the kids?" Kathryn asked.

Devastation filled Anne's eyes as she sobbed. "Which do you think is better for the kids, me going missing, or me getting killed by Anthony at some point?"

Two days had passed and though Anne had fully recovered, she was not allowed to leave.

Anthony seemed to prefer keeping her in the mansion and did not even go to the Archduke that often. He would be close to her twenty hours a day and even when he needed to work, he would settle it in the study room.

At the moment, he had Anne on his lap while he attended a virtual meeting. The meeting room in the Archduke Group was shown on the laptop screen, but the others could not see Anthony, or it would be extremely inappropriate for Anne to sit on his lap.

Anne kept herself from making any noises and listened to the managers speak.

Anthony held a fork and fed her a piece of fruit.

She accepted it and chewed carefully, not wanting the others to hear her. Though they could not see anything on Anthony's end, they could hear any sound emitted as Anthony would speak to them from time to time.

Anne only dared to watch secretly from outside the door, and she felt teary.

Once she left, her precious children would never see Mama again.

They would be sad, right?

However, there was no way around it.

Anne did not want to, but she did not want them to be traumatized by their father killing their mother.

As time passed, she could appear again, right?

The children would not have a hard life with their powerful father, and they would get a better education.

At least it would be much better than following her back then.

After their classes, the three little ones went to the hallway step by step like a little penguins.

They were taken aback for a moment when they saw the person in the hallway. Soon, their eyes lit up, and they ran over excitedly-

“Papa, look!” Charlie raised the small warship, showing it to Anthony excitedly.

Anthony walked in and said, “It’s late. Take a bath and go to bed.”

“No! I don’t want to! We’re not done yet!” Charlie was angry.

“You can continue building it tomorrow.” Anthony frowned slightly, looking threatening.

Charlie shuddered and immediately hid behind Anne, peeking angrily at Anthony.

Anne held him in her arms, rubbed his little head to comfort him, and said, "Go and take a bath first. I'll build the warship model with you tomorrow."

Charlie was even angrier, but he did not dare to say anything.

In the bathroom, Anne stood under the shower with her face slightly lowered while Anthony stood behind her.

The water streamed along her beautiful neck, forming a trickling river and flowing through her graceful curves.

Anthony moved his damp black hair away and pressed his thin lips to the back of her neck, nibbling at the protruding bone.

Anne held Chloe in one hand and touched Charlie and Chris with the other, silently soothing their upset mood.

If she could, she would really like to leave with her three children.

However, the idea was simply unrealistic.

After all, Anthony could let her go, but he would never give up on his three children.

Anne fell asleep with the children in her arms, but her heart was full of sadness.

Anne woke up early the next morning because the children also woke up early, surrounding her.

Charlie and Chris were sprawled out on the bed, and she did not see Anthony.

He had probably woken up earlier than them.

“Mama...” Chloe acted coquettishly. “I want milk.”

Anne smiled gently. “Alright. I’ll make a bottle for you.”

Churches would generally be in a remote place and would not be monitored.

So, could she take advantage of this opportunity to get out of Anthony's sight and control?

Otherwise, would she have a better way than this?

"Mrs. Marwood?"

Anne returned to her senses. "Yes?"

"Many people go to Luton's Church of the Divine Mercy for prayers. Why don't you visit there?" Mia recommended, "Many people said their prayers are always answered at that church."

"I'll think about it." Then, Anne noticed that Mia was still standing there, so she said, "You can leave first!"

"Yes, Mrs. Marwood." Mia left the balcony with a cunning look.

Anne sat in a daze on the sofa.

Was she supposed to leave tomorrow? She thought she could spend two more days with her children, but the day came so soon.

However, Anne did not want to let go of such an opportunity,

Moreover, there was no going back either...

The Church of the Divine Mercy...Anne searched for the address on her phone.

It was indeed located in a remote area.

Would Anthony allow her to go to such a remote place?

What if Anthony wanted to accompany her? How would she get the chance to escape?

After dinner, Anne was still spending time with her children.

The three little ones were chasing and playing while she stood quietly watching.

As she watched them, tears suddenly welled up in her eyes.

Anne took a lot of photos and videos on her phone today. If she missed her children in the future, this was the only way she could make herself feel better.

The sound of steady yet heavy footsteps sounded behind her, and Anne could feel the sudden danger in the air.

“Turn around.”

Anne hesitated and turned her around again.

However, everything turned dark when she just turned over-

“Mmf!” Anne’s long eyelashes fluttered like frightened butterflies.

Anthony kissed her hard, possessing and devouring Anne’s small mouth. He was so possessive that he did not let Anne have a chance to breathe.

After Anne was kissed until she felt her brain lacking oxygen, she heard Anthony’s deep and hoarse voice, “Since you can’t sleep well, let’s do something.”

Anne’s body stiffened suddenly when she understood what he meant, and the blush on her face immediately faded.

Her little hands curled up tightly under the quilt, resisting the anger and impulse of wanting to push Anthony away.

“But...we’re going to the church tomorrow. Is that...okay?”

“Yes.”

“I won’t be able to wake up.”

“It’s fine.”

Anne comforted herself repeatedly, thinking, “It’s okay...it’s okay. I can leave this man forever tomorrow. This will be the last time.”

However, it was too late.

The thick wooden door slammed shut. Even when they rammed into the door together, the door still did not move.

Ivan roared, "Crash the door with the cars!"

The bodyguards turned around and got into the cars. However, the bullets hit the car doors just as they opened them, and sparks were flickering everywhere.

Bang, bang, bang!

There were people wearing black hoods surrounding them outside, and their faces could not be seen. Moreover, each had guns in their hands, shooting this way.

It was a fierce fight outside, and it was also a close call inside.

If it were not for Anthony hugging Anne, she would already have slipped to the ground.

Anne could feel the arms around her waist trembling, which meant that Anthony had the same problem as her.

It's just that Anthony's body was strong, and he would not be knocked down immediately like her. However, would it not be more serious if it dragged on?

Why was this happening?

Anne watched helplessly as Anthony shot the monk with a blank expression. In order to save bullets, he only fired one shot at the monk’s head, and it exploded on the spot

Anne shuddered and closed her eyes.

Before Anthony even moved the gun, another monk rushed over and grabbed Anthony’s arm to prevent him from shooting, directly attacking Anthony’s lower body.

Anthony dodged, kicking out his long legs quickly.

In the fight, the monk was not at a disadvantage, and it could be seen that he had received professional training.

Obviously, they were fake monks.

Moreover, the drug’s effect on Anthony’s body was still present. Yet, he still protected Anne with one hand, attacking with all his might.

“Ah!” Anne screamed when she saw someone sneaking up next to her. The next second, she was pushed away, and she felt her body go weak as she leaned against the pilar next to her. “Ah...”

Anne looked and found Anthony in an intense fight with the two monks, and no one could get closer to them.

The monks were professional, while Anthony, who was drugged, obviously could not exert his full strength and was sweating cold sweat on his forehead.

Anne looked at the door. Three monks were in the church hall; one was dead, and two more remained.
