Chapter 1361

The reporters then only caught up and turned their cameras to Bianca.

The camera lights were flashing non-stop.

Bianca wanted to laugh, but she smiled uglily and forced herself to question them, "Wha... What? You must have made a mistake."

"It is impossible for the police department to make a mistake. Please follow us."

"Sure, I can go back with you for the investigation. I am not wrong, and I will get my lawyer to represent me!" Every cell in Bianca's body was resisting.

She did not want to go with the police at all.

However, she could not refuse to do so in front of the media.

Otherwise, this would be worse for her public image.

However, even if that was the case, the news about Bianca being caught still went viral on the internet. It was like a grenade dropping into the water and exploding.

Some people guessed that it was tax evasion, some said it was murder, some said it was adultery... Basically everything that was possible.

People were really curious about the truth.

Anthony was unbudged by her plea. His eyes were filled with contempt, as though he was looking at a corpse.

“Anthony, I want to return to your side. There is no one that cares for you more than I do, not even Anne. Why do you not want someone who actually loves you but to keep a woman that hates you by your side?” Bianca’s tears were streaming down her cheeks, as she expressed her deep bewilderment.

Anthony’s facial features were engulfed by the darkness, she could not see him clearly, but she could feel his unconcealable contempt.

“Anthony, let me out. I will not do something like this again anymore...” Bianca could only beg and plead with Anthony. Unless he showed mercy, she should never imagine herself out again.

“You shouldn’t have treated others that way if you didn’t want to see the violent side of me?” Anthony said coldly.

“Anthony?” Bianca felt terrified at the cold in his voice.

“Lock her up together with the other two women!” Anthony said and left. He did not even take another look at Bianca, who almost pissed her pants.

Bianca shouted panicky, “Anthony, you will not treat me like that! Anthony, after all these years, is our relationship not even on the slightest par with a sl*t? Anthony Marwood!”

Anthony never turned back.

It was almost as though he was completely cutting ties with Bianca.

Anne stood on the balcony and watched as the Rolls Loyce disappeared from her vision.

Her heart finally calmed down.

It was barely ten in the morning, the kids were in school, and Anne sat in the garden, checking out the news on her phone.

It seemed that Bianca's trouble showed no signs of stopping.

Her screen then lit up by an incoming call, and the number was not shown.

She thought it was a spam call and declined the call.

The next second, her phone rang again.

She answered, "Hello?"

"It's me."

Anne was stunned. "Brother? Is this your number?"

“Of course, it is one that people would not know about. Anthony did not do anything to you, did he?” Tommy said casually.

“No,” Anne said.

“Did you want to leave?” Anthony's thought process was terrifying.

“Not really...I only knew about it afterward.”

Otherwise, it would sound like she knew what was going to happen at the graveyard.

She was only afraid that Tommy would appear again.

Plus, after she returned, Anthony asked who had brought her away.

She only said it was someone that Lucas had arranged, and she did not know who.

“The same thing will not happen a second time,” Anthony said lightly.

His gaze was sharp.

Anne did not say anything more.

“Come here.”

Even if Anthony heard that, she would not take what she said back.

Plus, it was Anthony who insisted on staying there and listening.

If he got unhappy over it, she would tell him off.

Just when she was trying to figure out how to rebut Anthony, she heard the deep threatening voice.

“To let someone live is a worse torture than them dying.”

Anne looked up in disbelief. She looked into Anthony’s dark eyes and did not know who he was talking about right then.

Was he talking about Bianca?

However, was his relationship with Bianca bad?

He was even overly biased toward Bianca in front of her. Even if she killed her father, he still protected her.

Anne could not understand him, but she did not ask further and just left the place with Anthony shortly after.

As they walked downhill, she looked around and paid attention to the surroundings.

Whose helicopter was that?

It was at a distance, and it looked surreal.

Then, she heard a crisp clanking noise, like an iron nail falling onto the cement ground.

Before Anne could respond, the glass window panel was blown apart.

"Ah!" Anne fell to the ground.

She looked up and saw the helicopter that got closer and closer to her, her heart racing.

Would this be Tommy's arrangement?

The office door was opened. Oliver walked in and pulled Anne from the ground. "Let's go!"

They went out of the office and took the lift to another floor.

"I did not expect to be ambushed. I wonder who is bold enough to do this. Plus, Mr. Marwood's office was built with bullet-proof glass panels..." Oliver could not fathom it.

He was chasing the helicopter like a leopard on its hunt.

There were also helicopters in the sky chasing their target.

It was full coverage combat.

The man who captured Anne was not worried at all.

Right at this moment, a rocket missile was directed at the helicopter. With a loud bang, it was blown up, and a humongous fireball was burning in the sky, then fell right into the ocean.

The Rolls Royce pulled to a halt. Anthony came out and looked at the scene while heavily breathing, his dark eyes bloodshot. "Who did this? Who did this?"

He kicked the bodyguard who followed and shouted, "Who did this? If she is harmed, I will make sure you all go to hell!"

When he reached the seaside, there were only a few remaining pieces of the helicopter floating on the sea.

He took a motorboat to search, but to no avail, everything was burnt, plus the waves were undulating. They could not tell if the people in the helicopter were washed away or blown apart.

Anthony was going crazy, and he dived right into the sea to search.

The bodyguards next to him were all shocked.

Anne stood up. "I cannot stay here, I have my home, I am not the same as Lilian. My husband is Anthony Marwood. He is powerful. If you annoy him, you will end up badly. So, it is better for you to let me go!"

The man turned around and looked at her, intrigued. "Are you threatening me? Too bad I cannot fulfill your wish."

Anne frowned, the eyes behind the mask were like an emotionless robot, and it looked extra ruthless under the white light.

She felt like she had said something that annoyed him.

"However... I still need to leave."

The man approached her and said, "Why do you need to go back? As far as I know, you are unhappy with Anthony, and you want to run away. Isn't this good? You can become mine, and no one will bully you."

Anne tried to calm herself down. "What is your intention? Just because... I killed Lilian? Should you investigate this again? Lilian could be killed by someone else, yes, someone else!"

"Who?"

"Erm... Tommy Marwood, I remember it vividly. It was Tommy Marwood!" Anne said with confidence.

She apologized to Tommy in her mind.

She guessed she had no choice. The person did not seem to be afraid of Anthony. Since Tommy was lower profile than Anthony, she figured that perhaps someone mysterious like him could do the trick.

There was no one else other than her.

Finally, in the afternoon, some people finally entered the room.

They were all women, wearing basic tank tops and shorts, revealing their long legs, as they returned to each of their beds.

Anne's presence was invisible to them.

They were wearing the same robotic emotionless expression on their faces.

As soon as they got back, they climbed into their beds and dozed off.

Anne did not know what was going on. She found it creepy and wanted to leave.

However, when she opened the door, two guns were immediately pointed at her head, as though warning her that she would be shot if she took one more step forward.

“Get the f*ck inside. If you come out again, I will pull the trigger!” A buff man with tattoos on his arms said. His arms were thicker than her waist.

He could definitely knock her out with just a punch and, of course, easily with the gun.

Anne backed away and immediately closed the door.

Everyone immediately ran out of the door. Anne was still stunned, and the woman reminded her, "Go."

Anne then followed mindlessly like an idiot.

They all stood in a row.

The armed muscular man dragged two corpses out to the front.

"This is the consequence of trying to escape! In here! Only the winners live! Otherwise, you will die!" the muscular man roared.

The night was dark. There were only some lights on the island at a distance. There were still hours to go until sunrise.

Anne looked at the women's corpses under the dim light, her heart beating fast.

If this were an island, then unless she could get away in a boat, there would be next to no chances for her to leave this place.

Anne was feeling heavy and hopeless.
