Chapter 1371

A drop of tear fell from his eye and landed in his palm.

He looked at it blankly as though looking at Anne, who was trapped within his palm.

He could not believe it, and his eyes glared so forcefully that they would pop.

'How could you die?'

'How could you leave my side without my permission?'

'I don't agree, I will find you!'

'I will!'

However, after a month, the entire ocean area was flipped all over, and various divers went into the water, but they still did not find the person who brought Anne away or Anne herself.

The scene of the helicopter exploding was replaying again and again in Anthony's mind, ripping his brain nerves apart and hurting him so much that he fainted.

The people at the scene were shocked and sent him to the hospital.

Kathryn almost could not recognize him when she saw Anthony passed out.

Anne's heart sank. "I did not have a trade. I was abducted here."

"That is impossible. Everyone came here voluntarily." Yuri observed her appearance and mannerisms. Obviously she did not look like she belonged here.

Every other woman here was ranked subpar in terms of their appearance and their skin.

Anne, on the other hand, had smooth, silky fair skin. Even though she had been here for the training for a month, her skin was still glowing.

She looked like someone who was raised delicately and could not handle a single bit of harshness.

It was already impressive enough that she could persist for a month.

Perhaps she had a stronger mentality than everyone else?

"I was really abducted here." Anne did not lie to her.

"Was there really nothing that you wanted?" Yuri asked

Yuri sat up. "Are you alright?"

Anne turned around and looked at her shakily. "I killed someone..."

"Everyone who lived tonight had already killed someone," Yuri said calmly.

Anne noticed that half of the beds in the dorm were empty. Those women were all killed.

After they came back, they all carried a killing vibe that did not exist before.

The next day, they continued with the training.

As the muscular man stepped onto Anne in the water, he received orders in his earphone. He then released Anne, who was half dead.

Anne was drenched and almost died because of suffocation.

She was dragged away like a bag of cement.

Yuri watched as Anne was taken away, clueless about what that was all about.

Anne changed into clean clothes again. It was a gorgeous-looking gown. She looked demure and beautiful, unlike her original look of a mess.

She had thought more traps would await her, but she slept through the night.

The people in black robes were right. She had never been this free.

Whenever she tried to escape, Anthony would always find her and drag her back.

She wondered if Anthony was still searching for her after a month.

'After some time, maybe he will forget about me. If I really manage to get out of here, maybe I won't have to be scared of him anymore...' she thought.

In the morning at the Royal Mansion, Hayden went to check on the children, and the maid was dressing them.

Breakfast and everything else was ready.

As he walked past the master bedroom, he noticed that the door was not shut, and sunlight came shining through the gap. Hayden knocked on the door and asked, "Mr. Marwood, are you awake?"

There was no response.

Anthony remained silent, unable to say a word through the piercing pain in his chest, and could simply

Anthony fell forward and landed on his knees, barely supporting himself with a trembling arm on the coffee table next to him.

"Mr Marwood!"

Hayden went to help him up, but Anthony shoved him aside and shouted hoarsely, "Don't touch me!"

"Mr Marwood, you need a doctor I will call Kathryn.."

"No one can help me or save me I want Anne to be here. Find her!" Anthony panted in misery without a trace of his usual composure as though he had run out of hope in life.

Hayden wanted to find Anne as well and longed for her to return safely as well, but if even Anthony Ashlyn sighed a breath of relief. “Oh. I will try my best to get home before you do, then.”

“Sure.”

After hanging up, Ashlynn returned to the house while Corentin tightened his grip around his phone as though it was Ashlynn’s neck.

Not only had she gone to the Hilton’s frequently, but she had also started lying to him about it.

Is that how she’s supposed to treat me? Is that how she’s supposed to treat Beth, who killed our son?

He thought angrily

Ashlynn sat down on the couch, and Beth asked, “Something important came up?”

She shook her head. “No.”

They heard a car approaching, followed by Jeremy’s entrance into the house. “You are all here?” He sat down next to Ashlynn. “Stay here tonight!”

Beth and Marshall knew better than to neglect Meredith simply because of Ashlynn; however, they were only human and could not help but favor their own daughter.

Ashlynn left after dinner, and Jeremy offered her a ride.

Beth and Marshall stood outside the door to see them off reluctantly, and Meredith saw every detail in their expressions.

Meredith stayed the night with the Hiltons, and Aunt Cher brought her a glass of warm milk. "This will help you sleep."

Meredith was not at all in the mood and asked, "Don't you think it's weird for Uncle Marshall and Aunt Beth to treat Ashlynn with such care? You mentioned that Ashlynn comes here often, but why?"

“Probably to win Mr. and Mrs. Hilton over.”

“What a joke! Who does she think she is?” In Meredith’s perspective, Ashlynn was merely an outsider. “Uncle and Auntie must be out of their minds.”

It would feel like she was committing suicide

After being used by Corentin at the Hilton’s the time before, she had avoided Corentin at every turn.

As a lady of the Hilton Family, she had plenty of choices when it came to men, and no matter how much she liked Corentin, her own life was more important.

However, this had affected her importance to Beth, and she could not help but wonder if this was truly the reason why Beth had stopped caring about her Jeremy dropped Ashlynn at a distance away from Corentin's mansion as per her request, as she did not want Corentin to see them.

Corentin had suspected that something was going on between the two before for no reason at all, despite Ashlynn explaining how she saw Jeremy as a younger brother.

Just as she was about to get out of the car, Jeremy grabbed her hand, and when she turned her head, he planted a kiss on her forehead.

The water was splashed onto her face, scrolling down her neck and onto her clothes.

The thin fabric of her white shirt outlined the curves of her body, and the look in Corentin's eyes darkened as his eyes trailed down her neck.

"What happened to Anne and the kids? Why would Anthony let the news about the triplets spread all over the news? They are probably fine because all news about the triplets disappeared without a trace shortly after, like they never existed in the first place. They should be fine, right? she thought.

Corentin went into the bedroom and noticed that she was staring at her phone dazedly. "Who are you trying to call? The Hiltons?"

Ashlynn felt like Corentin had become prejudiced about the Hiltons and seemed to blame everything on them. "No. I've been calling Anne, but she won't pick up. You are her uncle, so why can't you go and check on her in Luton?"

Corentin removed his clothes as he walked toward the bathroom. "That's between those two. We should stay out of it."

She watched as he went into the bathroom. Feeling like there was more to the story, she hurried after him.

"So aggressive. Do you want to shower again?" Corentin's shirt was unbuttoned, revealing the alluring figure underneath the fabric.

Not at all embarrassed by his words, she remained calm and focused on their discussion about Anne.
