Chapter 1411

As Ashlynn walked over, Corentin grabbed her arm and pulled her to face him.

Ashlynn stood before him, looking annoyed. "What are you doing?"

"Since when did I have another woman outside?" Corentin asked.

"Is it important?"

"Are you jealous?" Corentin's amber eyes stared at Ashlynn as if to see through any of her micro-expressions.

Ashlynn was amazed at how Corentin could say such words so shamelessly. Still, she wanted to know more about Corentin's thoughts.

After all, it was not a bad thing to understand this man more.

"Salvatore, have you ever loved me?" Ashlynn suddenly asked.

Corentin was taken aback, and he stared at her, not answering.

Ashlynn looked down, and a hint of disappointment flashed in her eyes. "I know the answer is no. I was willing to marry you at the beginning because I loved you, but you didn't understand nor respond to me. There were times I would think of how I could make you fall in love with me, and I couldn't help but wonder how you would be when you're attracted to a woman."

A slight expression appeared on Corentin's face, with a hint

Corentin stood there without going over, looking a little dazed and distracted.
He could not help but ask himself if he had a love for Ashlynn. Was it love?
What was love like? He grew up in the slums, and no one taught him what love was.
Not long after he married Ashlynn, he was framed and sent to prison.
He thought Ashlynn was obsessed with him, but... she ended up surprising him by sending him directly to the guillotine!

Yet, she dared to tell him... she loved him? Could he believe her?

Ashlynn found herself being stared at. When she turned around, she saw Corentin looking at her strangely. Then, he walked over.

“Are you done?”

Corentin sat beside her and glanced at the TV. “What were you watching?”

“Nothing. I was just watching a random show.” Ashlynn yawned. “If you’re done, let’s go to bed!”

Ashlynn's suspicion was also wrong.

Instead, Corentin followed the person from Tianya Group who was released and found a deserted island.

How could he let go of such a good opportunity?

Pow, pow, pow.

The sound of gunshots could be heard.

It directly woke Anne and the others sleeping, and they sat up suddenly with a look of guard and vigilance.

A few burly chaps came in holding guns, "Get out!"

For nearly two months, they were forced to wake up from sleep several times and then complete various assigned tasks.

It was apparent that the number of people was getting smaller and smaller, and there were more empty beds.

Anne had thoroughly accepted the 'law of the jungle' here.

The first time she killed someone, Anne still could not accept the fact. However, her mind gradually became stronger after having nightmares, and she would no longer tremble in fear.

"Mm!" Anne backed away again and again.

Before she could catch his breath, Kitty pounced on her again with her claws-like fingers, going straight to her vitals.

Anne's body sank suddenly and appeared much shorter than Kitty. Then, her palm passed through Kitty's arm, hitting her jawbone and grabbing her neck.

Anne turned around and slammed Kitty into the tree.

Bang!

The green leaves on the branches were shaken, and a few fell.

Some fell by their sides, and some slid over their faces. With the murderous atmosphere, the leaves sliding by felt like blades.

"I don't want to kill you..." Anne's voice trembled, and her hand holding Kitty's neck shook harder.

"T-Then let me go. We'll go our separate ways and find other prey, okay..." Kitty began to beg.

Anne did not speak, and her eyes became cold-blooded as she held a stick in her hand and stabbed Kitty's temple.

Kitty died without making a sound.

Anne let go of Kitty's neck, letting her slip to the ground.

"Yes."

Chapter 1415

Anne was very dissatisfied with this answer.

It was nothing more than making a joke out of human lives!

“Were you screened like us too? Were you the most amazing one?” Anne asked.

“Don’t try to understand me,” the man in a robe said, “You can leave now.”

Anne knew that there was nothing more to say, so she turned and left.

The fight against those foreign enemies was also a test.

For less than ten of them who survived, there was no difference between the foreign enemies and those killed by them.

They were all enemies.

They ran into the woods, and this kind of actual combat was too familiar.

The man hiding in the grass started shooting with his gun, and the companion not far from Anne was headshot directly. Anne was instantly tense, and she rolled over to avoid the bullets.

The bullets hit the nearby trees and ground.

Anne hid behind a tree, identifying where the target was hiding.

The man hiding in the grass found no one around, so he could not help but lean closer.

It was the first time Anne saw Yuri dressing this way, and she chuckled. "You look pretty cool."

"Then I'll dress this way in the future! After all, it doesn't matter what I wear," Yuri said.

Anne was about to say something when they heard footsteps outside again.

The people who came in were their companions. When they saw them wearing suits and the men on the ground, they asked, "What are you doing?"

"It's nothing. We're just trying to confuse them," Yuri said, "Go to the other side to search. We'll go to the left."

The two companions did not suspect anything and went to the other side.

Yuri and Anne looked at each other and ran to the left.

A corner of the loft blasted as soon as they reached the stairs. Stones flew around, and the entire staircase collapsed.

Anne, who was running forward, could not stop in time and almost fly out.

Yuri was the same, but she managed to grab the window next to her with one hand and Anne with the other. Then, she dragged Anne back as hard as she could.

Anne threw herself directly into Yuri's chest, and her face turned pale with fright.

"Are you okay?" Yuri asked.

Anne gasped and stood, turning around and looking at the big hole under the stairs. Fortunately, you had fast reflexes. Otherwise, I'll definitely be seriously injured from Anne lost consciousness and did not struggle. Instead, she sank to the bottom of the sea just like a piece of iron.

Half an hour later, the intruders were beaten back. When they counted the number of people, they found that two people were missing—Anne and Yuri.

"Go and look for them!" The man in the robe was rarely angry.

Yet, they were nowhere to be found even after searching the entire deserted island.

Not even their corpses.

“Could it be that they’ve fallen into the sea?” The burly chap guessed, “At that time, someone saw the two of them hiding in the loft. Then, the loft was blown up, so they’re probably dead.”

Even though the man in a robe wore a mask, they could still see his jawline twitching.

“The people I trained won’t die so easily. Go and them again!”

“Without my permission, you’re not allowed to die!” Corentin’s face was gloomy as he gritted his teeth, and his facial muscles were pulsing.

However, Ashlynn’s breathing was weak, and she could not even hear his threats.

Ashlynn entered the emergency room of the hospital as quickly as possible.

Corentin waited outside. He was wearing a black coat, but the white shirt inside and his hands were mostly stained with blood, and it was a shocking sight.

He took a deep breath, and his gaze was a little lifeless. Then, he waved his hand.

One of his subordinates walked toward him.

With a hoarse voice, Corentin ordered, “Block the news, and don’t let anyone disturb her.”

“Yes, Mr. Lloyd.” The subordinate went to do as he was told.

Corentin’s body went weak, and he sat on the bench, staring at his blood-stained hands in a daze.

He felt as if his chest had been punched violently and his heart could not stop spasming.

"Do you think I'll believe in such sweet talks? When you set me up, put me in jail, and got me the death sentence, I didn't see any sense of mercy in you." There was a sense of hatred in Corentin's hoarse voice.

"I didn't know you'd be sentenced to death at first. I just wanted for you to turn a new leaf and use the divorce agreement to provoke you....I didn't expect that you'd be sentenced to death. I'm sorry."
Ashlynn repented. She lifted her hand and carefully grabbed Corentin's fingers. "Salvatore, I will always remember how good you are to me. What I saw comes from the bottom of my heart as well. I hope...you can live well and be happy for the rest of your life."

Corentin stared at her. His gaze was so sharp as if it was about to bore through her body and soul.

After a minute that seemed like ages, he released his hands, got up, and left the ward.

Ashlynn breathed heavily in relief as the pressure on her body was pulled away.

She turned her face and looked at the closed door with her mind in a mess.

Then, she leaned on the pillow without any strength.

What she said, of course, was false. She used such a dangerous and extreme method to make Corentin soft-hearted, and she won the bet

It was absolutely terrifying. She lifted her hand and gently touched his wrist. "Don't let yourself get hurt." "I should be the one saying that." Corentin's gaze looked profound. "Got it?" "I can't stand idle when you're in danger," said Ashlynn. Corentin's heart skipped a beat. After staring at her for a few seconds, he asked in a slightly hoarse voice, "If it was someone else standing next to you yesterday, would you also risk your life like that?" "No." Corentin watched her even closer as if he wanted to uncover all of her expressions and emotions. After that, he put Ashlynn in his arms and his hand avoided the injury on her back. Ashlynn nestled in his arms without moving. She felt Corentin's strong heartbeat. It seemed to be very, very close to her....
