Chapter 1421

"It's not like that. He has been here keeping me company recently and he didn't even go to his company* What Ashlynn said was true. "I deliberately asked him to go somewhere else."

Beth grabbed her hand "Silly girl, why did you take a bullet for him? Do you know how important you are? If something were to happen to you, how are your father and I supposed to live? We've finally found your after going through so much hardship..."

Ashlynn could not bear to look at Beth, who was holding back the tears welling in her eyes. "Mom, Dad, I'm sorry. Corentin is my husband. I don't wish for him to be injured. But it's fortunate that I'm fine. It's frightening, but I'm not in danger. I promise both of you I won't do this anymore in the future."

Beth calmed herself and asked, "Where did you get hurt?"

"The bullet entered my body from my back but avoided any vital organs." Ashlynn wore a gentle smile on her face.

Her family saw that her face looked slightly flushed, so they knew she was recovering quite well. It was just that they felt extremely worried for her.

Why must their daughter go through so many disasters and hardships?

"I wish that all of your disasters would come at me instead and not torture you anymore." Beth touched her face gently and with sorrow. "I really was almost scared to death..."

Ashlynn knew her mother was feeling sorry and guilty.

If she did not do all these, she would feel even worse. Therefore, she simply let her mother be.

"Where is he?" asked Beth.

Ashlynn knew who she was asking about, so she said, "He went out to answer a call."

"Ms. Ashlynn, how are you feeling? You should be getting discharged soon, right?" Aunt Cher asked while arranging the food.

"In two days."

Ashlynn glanced at all those things. "You didn't just come here to pay me a visit, did you?"

"I believe you must be very curious about me."

"Why do you say so?"

"You wouldn't have let me in if you were not curious," said Teagan.

Ashlynn thought that it was fortunate that her mother was a smart person. Otherwise, such a woman would have taken her mother's place and married her father!

"I used to be together with Marshall. We dated for two years and we were very in love. If Beth didn't come between us, how would I end up being dumped?" Teagan looked sad, which looked very easy for others to pity her.

"Why are you telling me all this? These are all in the past now. My parents are very in love, and they have two children, my younger brother and myself. We are a complete family. You should go and search for your own happiness instead of staring at my family all the time," said Ashlynn, "It's immoral for you to do so."

"I should say that she's just an idiot," Corentin added.

He seemed to dislike foolish women very much.

After he sat down, he said, "You'll be discharged from the hospital tomorrow."

"I can already be discharged?" Ashlynn was overjoyed. "I can finally be discharged. I've been staying here so long that I'm bored out of my wits!"

When Corentin saw her showing her true expressions, his gaze could not help but look gentle, which was unknown to himself.

"You're not allowed to get out of bed at home."

"It's still better than staying in the hospital," said Ashlynn.

God knew how unbearable it was for her to stay in the hospital.

"The person who has been accompanying you didn't even say anything. You're quite a demanding patient," said Corentin casually.

"If you're not happy, I'm not going to force you either..." Ashlynn looked upset.

Corentin sat down on the edge of the bed and stared at her with his amber-colored eyes. "Who said I'm not happy? I'm extremely happy."

As he said that, he bit her soft lips, and only let go of them after they turned bright red.

Ashlynn's breathing slowed down and she was trembling.

With difficulty, she said, "No...mmm..."

Corentin pulled her clothes down, hovered on top of her, and gently bit her ear. "I'll give it to you when you're fully recovered."

Ashlynn instantly understood what he meant.

He made it seem like she was the one who wanted it.

Did she behave that way?

However, she did not say anything.

That made Corentin insatiably greedy. He touched her tiny waist and said in a deep and husky voice. "Can you feel my passion?"

Ashlynn was speechless. She endured it and closed her eyes. "As long as you're not in pain."

Corentin chuckled and kissed the hair around her ear.

He indeed was in pain. However, such pain did not seem to be bad either.

Ashlynn looked at the curtains by the window sill in a daze, and asked, "If...I was not resuscitated this time and died, would you be sad?"

Corentin, who was kissing the side of her face, paused for a moment, and then said, "You won't die."

"I'm a human. There's always a possibility that I might die when facing danger. You didn't answer my question." Ashlynn was not satisfied with what he said.

Corentin answered her after falling silent for just a second, "...Yes."

Ashlynn's lips curled into a faint smile. She did not say anything. She just let Corentin linger all over her body as he pleased.

Before Ashlynn said anything. Teagan started introducing herself, "I am Ashlynn's father's girlfriend."

"Oh. I see." Alexis understood.

Just as Ashlynn wanted to deny it, she was pulled away by Alexis. "You've been downstairs for quite a while. The biscuits still need some time before they're done. Go upstairs to have a rest. I'll entertain this guest."

"She's not..."

“It’s fine. It’s fine. Leave it to me. Don’t worry!” Alexis ordered the servant next to them, “Take her upstairs to have a rest.”

Ashlynn shot a cold glance at Teagan. Indeed, she truly did not wish to interact with this person deep down.

Before she went upstairs, she said, “Just kick her out. There’s no need for you to entertain her.”

“I know, I know. Hurry up upstairs and have a rest!”

Ashlynn's eyes lit up as if she saw her savior when she saw Corentin coming in.

She truly did not know what to do with Alexis.

"Corentin, you're back. Why are you back so early? You're just in time though. These are the freshly baked biscuits that I made Try one." Alexis was very happy when she saw her son.

Corentin looked into Ashlynn's eyes, looked at Alexis, and sat down. "I asked you to come and keep Ash accompanied. Did anything happen?"

"What happened? Nothing happened?" Alexis looked very shocked. "If you don't believe me, ask Ash."

It was not right for Ashlynn, who was sitting next to her, to say that something had happened or otherwise

Ashlynn stood by the railings and looked at the police vehicle down below. The police were digging up a body by the side of the river, and then they placed the body in a bag.

There was also a police officer talking to Corentin.

Even if she could not hear them, she knew what they were talking about.

It was nothing more than pinning the crime on Alexis.

The truth was that it was indeed Alexis who killed her....

When Corentin turned his face to look upstairs, Ashlynn retracted her gaze, turned around, and entered the bedroom.

She sat on the sofa listlessly in a daze.

No one was sadder or more anxious than she was at that moment.

She truly could no longer stay there for a second more.

After a while, there was a sound from the door. Corentin entered the bedroom and sat down next to her. He wrapped his arm around her shoulder and pulled her closer. "You alright?"

A men’s clothing store caught Ashlynn’s attention.

The store sold luxury items for men. Even a pair of socks cost a few hundred dollars.

It suited Corentin just nicely.

After browsing around the shop, she chose two men’s ties in the end, which cost 20,000 dollars.

She even used her own money to buy it.

Only then she could truly show her sincerity.

After acquiring the ties, she continued shopping. She did not allow the driver to follow her as she did not like it.

It would be even more discreet for Corentin to kill this man here than somewhere else.

She was thinking that it was justifiable that this man was doing something so out of control, so she kindly advised him, "Go. I won't pursue you. When Corentin arrives, you won't be able to escape anymore, let alone die together with him."

"What did you say!" The man was agitated. He walked over and slapped Ashlynn on the face.

Ashlynn was speechless. He slapped her so hard that she turned her face, and it was burning in pain.
