Chapter 1441

What if she went to see the baby and Anthony discovered her?

Would she become a person without any rights again?

“What are you afraid of? You are not the same person now. If you want to break free from your restraints, you just need to do your best. And I will always be with you.” Yuri gently held her hand.

Anne looked up at Yuri’s caring eyes and felt warmth in her heart.

Since she became trapped in Tianya’s organization, Yuri had been with her and secretly helped her. Otherwise, she would have died during the days of training on the deserted island.

“Okay. But I’m fine, I can go back alone,” Anne said as she held her hand.

“Alone?” Yuri disagreed.

Anne said, “You have your own things to deal with. Don’t worry, it’s okay. Like you said, I’m not the same as before.”

“Call me if you need anything, and I’ll be right by your side.”

Anne was getting ready to return home, so she had to prepare some things, including disguises, fake passports, and the like.

In the killer organization, it was necessary to learn these things, and they were very professional at it, making it easy to pass through security checkpoints.

As Anne drove the car back, she noticed another car following her and immediately became vigilant, accelerating her own car.

Anne knew that when she left, the school was not yet officially in operation.

Over time, a lot has changed.

Even Anthony had another woman by his side.

"No, I'll just go there by myself," Anne said.

"I am worried about you. If those people show up again, you will be hurt," Tommy said, concerned.

"It will be safe in the country, just go back," Anne insisted.

Tommy did not say anything more.

Although the situation turned out differently than expected, it was not too disappointing.

"Call me if you need anything. After all, I saved your life. Your life belongs to me, sort of," Tommy said.

Anne agreed and nodded.

Tommy stroked her head and smiled, an eerie tenderness in his eyes.

Three days later, Anne bought a plane ticket and boarded the plane. Anne's mood was indescribably turbulent.

She turned on her phone and looked at the photos of the triplets in the photo album.

The triplets were now in the big class and would not start first grade until next year. They were currently playing with other children in the park.

Anne watched from a distance and noticed that they had grown up a lot in the past two years. They were not as chubby as before, and the older ones looked handsome and cold.

Tears welled up in her eyes as she watched them play, and she almost ran up to hug them tightly.

However, she hesitated, wondering if they would still want her after being away for so long.

As they stood in the crowd, the triplets suddenly had a feeling. Chloe turned and looked in this direction, her beautiful big eyes filled with confusion.

Anne came back to her senses, lowered her head, and covered her face with her mask, concealing herself in the corner.

Curious, the triplets walked over there, but the teacher noticed and stopped them. "Where are you going?" the teacher asked.

"There's someone there," Chloe said, pointing her finger.

Oliver's job is to keep watch for any suspicious people that appear around the triplets.

That was why he came to Anthony as soon as he saw something unusual.

In fact, he had watched the video several times, but the person's body was covered up, and their face could not be seen.

Besides, he did not think that the person could be Anne since the chances of surviving a fall into the sea were almost zero.

"It's her..." Anthony's hand holding the tablet was trembling, and his eyes were red with tears.

"Mr. Marwood, are you sure...it's really her?" Oliver asked cautiously.

He really could not understand how Anthony could be so certain.

Could it be just an illusion? However, he dared not say that out loud.

"It must be her! I said she didn't die, and she didn't die... Anthony's voice was extremely hoarse, and the joy in his heart was almost overwhelming.

After visiting the triplets, Anne did not go to the mansions or communities where she used to live.

She did not even go to the house that Nigel gave her.

Anne walked into the cemetery.

There was not even a little dust on the tombstone, which showed that the staff here were very attentive.

They respect all those who have passed away.

Anne placed the flowers in front of the tombstone and knelt down.

“Mom and Dad, I’m sorry I haven’t been able to see you for so long. Something happened and ruined my plans. Don’t be angry, I’ll come and see you as soon as I return to Luton,” Anne said as she placed the flowers.

In the cemetery in the morning, the air was fresh because of the surrounding trees, and a slight wind blew, shaking the strands of hair next to her cheeks.

With her heightened vigilance, she froze slightly.

The air was filled with a slight sense of unease as if someone was invading her personal space.

This feeling was so familiar... it was engraved in her bones.

Anne stood up slowly, and the scene of turning around seemed to be in slow motion. Her heartbeat was irregular.

Anne's expression hesitated, and she was clearly shaken.

She had come back just to look after the child, so naturally, she could not be satisfied by just looking at them from a distance.

If Anthony could find her here, it meant that he had figured out her whereabouts.

Anne had always been careful, and there was only one place where she could be found, which was at the school.

Presumably, the bodyguards deployed were not only at the cemetery but also at her apartment and the mansion in the community.

Any place where she might go back to would be ambushed.

Anthony being here meant that this was the place where she would most likely appear after he collected her information.

Anthony approached her and took her hand so close that he could feel her breathing.

It was a gesture of wanting to possess her:

The Rolls Royce stopped at the Royal Mansion.

Anne got out of the car, looked around, and found that everything was still familiar to her. The place had not changed at all.

The pain in her heart caused her breathing to become slightly labored.

After all, it held too many memories of her struggles, pains, and...emotions.

"Go in." Anthony stood beside her, staring at her for a moment before speaking.

After Anne followed his instructions and went inside, Hayden stepped forward to greet her, appearing very excited. "Mr. Marwood...Mrs. Marwood is back!"

It seemed that the Royal Mansion had received news that Anne was still alive in advance.

'Mrs. Marwood.' Anne felt her heart throbbing at that title, but her face remained expressionless.

"Hayden, it's been a long time."

"Yes, it's been almost two years. It's great to see Mrs. Marwood again!" Hayden had tears in his eyes.

"Where are the children?" Anne looked around and did not see the triplets. Her eyes were full of eagerness.

“I just came back to check on the kids, and I don’t have anything else to say,” Anne said.

Anthony stared into her eyes without saying a word.

The air was heavy with an oppressive silence.

After a while, the deep voice broke the silence. “What about after you see the children?”

Anne’s plan was clear, but the words stuck in her throat when asked.

Did he have to ask?

Two years was enough for a person to change.

“Where do you live now?” Anthony asked again.

Anne did not wish to answer that question, and she turned her face to look over the fence into the distance. “Anthony, let’s talk.”

Chapter 1450

Fortunately, she did not need to worry too much. Although Anthony would not let her go, she was not as weak as before, and it would be easy for her to leave.

Anne stayed in the room for a while, then went to the triplets' room.

She found out that the triplets had slept in separate rooms, no longer sharing a room.

The three rooms were next to each other.

She went in and checked each one. From the layout, she was relieved to know that Anthony had taken good care of them.

However, she froze when she saw the photo on the bedside.

Anne picked up the photo and could not take her eyes off it.

There were the triplets in the picture, there was Anthony, and there she was...

It was taken on the yacht, the only time she went out to sea. Several photographers came and had various shots taken.

If the triplets had a picture like this on their bedside, would they still remember what their mother looked
