Chapter 1571

"That's absolutely the right thing to do. After all, you do like children very much," said Anne, glancing in the direction of the study.

The person who was there earlier had just left. He probably wanted to see what kind of topic they were talking about that was unfavorable to the atmosphere.

Anne, however, was a trained assassin, so, of course, she was sharp enough to notice it.

Anne reached for the fruits on the fruit platter, and when she handed it to Ashlynn, she deliberately said softly, "Did you find anything else?"

"I took advantage of the time Corentin was in the shower at night to check his phone, but I didn't find anything at all. However, both Paul and Owen really exist. I can recognize them even if they have been turned to ashes," said Ashlynn.

"If Corentin realized he had been exposed, you won't find anything in his phone. He would've long gotten rid of everything," said Anne, "you have to be careful of Corentin at all turns. After all, you have a child in your belly."

Ashlynn lowered her head, glanced at her flat lower abdomen, and said, "It's fine. Corentin really wants this child very badly. I'll be fine. It's just that...what kind of relationship do you think Corentin has with the toxins?"

While Anne was listening to that, Corentin’s call came in.

Anne knew this was a call she had to answer no matter what. “...Uncle.”

“What did you tell your grandpa?”

“Uncle...you can’t be influenced by Tommy. He’s going to get you killed,” said Anne.

“Is that so? Since you suspected it, you should’ve come to ask me personally instead of going to someone else.” Corentin’s voice was rather cold.

“I’m sorry, Uncle. I was thinking it’s not that good if I directly asked you, who had been wrongfully accused,” Anne said apologetically.

“Come over and let’s clear the air.”

After she hung up the call, Anne, who was mentally prepared, went to the mansion.

Corentin has asked her to go over, but he would not harm her.

Otherwise, he would not have picked his home which Ashlynn would be present as well.

Of course, Anne would never be on a video call with him when she was in the shower!

Just as she was about to say something, the call ended. While she was confused, the video call immediately came in.

Anne had no choice but to answer the call. The top half of Anthony's body was showing on the screen. On the other hand, her flushing little face after just getting out of the shower was also completely seen by the person on the other end of the call as well.

His black eyes darkened a little.

'Take off your clothes."

Anne's face got even redder because of his words. "I don't want to..."

"Take off your clothes or I go over now. Pick one." Anthony was domineering and forceful, which was extremely in line with his style.

Anne panicked. She knew Anthony very well.

If she really did not take off her clothes, Anthony would appear more than an hour later.

Anthony leaned the top half of his body forward on the screen and his face could be seen gradually getting bigger.

That kind of pressure and sense of being invaded made Anne feel she was face to face with him instead of seeing him, who was far away, on a monitor screen.

Her heart was pounding because he 'got closer' to her.

"Why are you so shocked? It's not like I've never seen it before." Anthony's voice was a little rough.

His eyes were so deep as if it was a terrifying abyss.

Anne knew not only Anthony had seen her body before, but he had done things that went even more overboard! Otherwise, where did their children come from?

However, she simply felt embarrassed!

How could this man not feel uncomfortable at all? How shameless of him...

Anne scanned the surroundings, then said, "I'll tell you, but you can't tell anybody, especially my uncle."

Ashlynn's heart sank, then she prepared herself mentally. "...Go on."

'A while ago, Ivan captured an infected person who had lost his mind. It seems like his mind is much clearer now after the doctor treated his body and did therapy with him. We should be able to find out who's playing tricks behind the scenes soon."

'You think the person is Corentin?'"

'That's not it. It's just that I'm worried my uncle will be forced to reveal something again, so we can't tell him."

'I hate making guesses at every turn as well. I hope that the infected person can regain his consciousness sooner and tell us the truth."

Anne felt terrible seeing Ashlynn feeling uneasy.

Why must a pregnant woman endure such pressure? If Corentin truly was the person behind the scene, then he truly deserved to die!

However, she wanted to take Corentin's side as well.

"When are you available?" asked Ivan.

"Let's do it tomorrow morning!"

After he set the appointment, Corentin went to look for Ashlynn.

Anne was around, so he bought two servings.

"Thank you, Uncle."

"You should thank Ash. If I didn't buy it for her, you won't be able to enjoy this either." Corentin smiled.

"Yes. Thank you very much." Anne smiled.

Ashlynn could not help but glare at Corentin. "You said it like there's none for Anne. You're her uncle, aren't you supposed to buy for her? If you didn't buy her any, I won't have a bite of it as well."

Corentin sat down, and said with a smile, "Are both of you on the same side now?"

It was unclear if he was simply making a casual remark, but it sounded as if it had a double meaning to their ears.

In any case, both Anne and Ashlynn did not show any reaction on their faces.

How could he have so little regard for human life?!

Corentin's expression darkened. "Do you think I would be so foolish to let everyone know this has something to do with me?"

Anne was slightly stunned. "Do you mean you have no clue about it at all?"

"Anne, it's not good if you keep suspecting me."

'I wasn't suspecting you before this. You were the one who admitted it yourself.'

Corentin lightly tapped the table with the pen in his hand. "Why don't I admit it now, then?"

Anne was at a loss for words. Could this truly have nothing to do with Corentin?

Could it be...

'Anne.' Ashlynn, who was behind Anne, came over and stood up for Corentin. "It can't be Corentin's doing."

He did glance at the phone when the call came in, and the number was not shown.

It was truly unusual for him to receive such a call after the infected person was burnt to death.

Therefore, Corentin returned to the study once again.

He stood next to the table and held the phone in his hand.

There was no way he could call back a number that was not shown.

A minute later, the phone rang again.

It was as if Corentin had figured he would call him again. Corentin answered the call but did not say anything and just waited for the person on the other end to say something.

"Hello, Mr. Lloyd. Since you're answering the phone at this hour, surely you won't be disturbed by others."

"Are you not even going to tell me your name before you start the conversation?"

"You should've figured out who I am. Isn't that right? There's no need to beat around the bush when talking to a smart person like you."

Corentin indeed already knew it was Tommy before he answered the call.

Corentin lifted his face a little, and a sullen expression flashed across his face.

He figured that it was Tommy's doing.

They had already agreed to work together, but he actually still pulled such a trick on him.

'Mrs. Hilton, this is a misunderstanding.'

'Misunderstanding? I'm at the chemical plant now. Get over here!'

After he hung up the call. Corentin was so angry that he kicked the coffee table next to him.

After that, he left the company without anybody noticing and went to the chemical plant.

Throughout the entire journey, he kept thinking about how he should resolve the problem of him being exposed.

When he got to the chemical plant, he saw that the car parked outside was not Beth's. Instead, it was Marshall's car.

He went inside, and as expected, he saw Marshall and his wife.

They looked displeased and very disappointed when they were looking at him.

'Corentin, are you even a human? Marshall and I are your wife's parents!" Beth was furious.

However, Corentin did not respond at all.

"Do you really care about Ash if you're doing this? If she learned that her parents were killed by you, how much pain would she feel and how deeply would she hate you?" Beth felt both furious and in pain.

Marshall no longer wanted to speak to Corentin anymore because he noticed the woman was walking toward them with murderous intent in her eyes.

He hurriedly held Beth's hand. "Let's go!"

Both of them ran out of the chemical plant. The assassin simply walked out of there in an unhurried manner. Not long after, two miserable screams could be heard coming from outside.

Corentin walked out and saw the couple, who was still breathing, lying in a puddle of blood.

The assassin was standing next to them. Blood was still dripping from the knife in her hand. It was a terrifying sight.
