Anthony thought that, except for Bianca, everyone's life was worthless.

"Are you alone?" Anne asked.

"If you have money, people will look up to you. If you didn't suggest going to the villa, I wouldn't even want to tell you." Sarah always thought that money meant everything, so she liked money very much.

The nurse just came over and asked Sarah what she wanted for dinner.

Sarah ordered two servings and wanted Anne to eat with her.

Anne did not refuse.

"Anne, I'm sorry. I didn't expect it to be so serious. I only said a few words, and two of them argued about it. They shouldn't have let Anthony know about it. Bianca is a hypocrite!" Sarah said with disdain.

"She can't wait to find our faults and let Anthony deal with us! Don't do this in the future. Turn away immediately if you see her."

"However, I have to say that men are fond of such women. They pretend to be weak and pitiful. It's a useful trick!" Sarah looked at Anne, who did not speak, and said, "Why is Bianca targeting us? Is it because of Anthony's relationship with you? That's a thing of the past. What a relentless person she is!"

She thought, 'If her parents had held no grudge against each other, then Anthony wouldn't have such hatred for them.'

After all, Anthony's wife was the most honorable woman in Luton!

She would live a better life because of her daughter.
