

Chapter 249

Anne's mouth twitched.

No wonder Joanne personally came to ask her if she liked Lucas.

She was probably against Lucas liking men and pounced on the chance to turn him straight.

This meant Joanne would probably accept her even if she knew she already had children.

She would probably choose a daughter-in-law with three children rather than a son-in-law.

Lucas had never dated a girl, let alone go on a blind date. Anne always wondered if there was something wrong with his character.

Apparently, there was nothing wrong with his personality.

Great move from Lucas.

"You know, the chairman and the chairman's wife found me and asked me to resign. Although the five million cheques thrown in front of me were very tempting, I resisted temptation. I told the principal about it, and they got even angrier, thinking that I was a scheming man and wanted more money. What am I to do?"

When Anne thought of that, she felt speechless.

The lengths Joanne went to...

After the children were settled down, Anne left.

On the way to the subway, Anne sighed, worrying about her relationship with Lucas.

Lucas was solving the problems, and she was the one creating problems.
