Chapter 291

The manager hesitated for a moment. "Did you lose something?" "Yeah, we did," Bianca said.

"Something of great value," Michelle added.

The manager apologized, "I'm sorry, ma'am. There's an issue with our surveillance cameras, so we can't check. If it's something important, we can help look for it."

Both Bianca and Michelle paled at his words. However, there was nothing they could do if the cameras did not capture anything, so the two had to simply accept that Anne was lucky.

Anne sat by the window with Chloe on her lap, as they stared at the street lights together.

She listened to Chloe counting lights while drifting off to her own thoughts.

Anne thought back to what happened in the club.

She was not worried about Bianca finding out about Lucas or the children. The fact that Bianca managed to find her way to them meant that there was not other people inside the club because Lucas had informed the owner about it ahead of time, even if Bianca and Michelle wanted to investigate further, they would not be able to do so.

Bianca went to the Archduke Group In the evening, and Anthony was nowhere to be found because there was a meeting.

She went into his office alone.

Every time she entered his office, she would be overwhelmed by the joy and pride of being powerful and no one could take that glory from her, nor could anyone replace her in Anthony's heart, including Anne.

She circled back to stand behind the desk and though the screen was pitch black, the computer seemed to be on.

Wondering if she would find Archduke Group's action plan, she turned on the monitor and the screen lit up, only to find surveillance feed from nine different cameras.

'Why would this be in Anthony's office?' She thought, 'Isn't there a specific department to manage the surveillance cameras in the building? He shouldn't be paying attention to this considering how busy he is.'

In the midst of her confusion, she realized something odd in the footage.

'Why is Tommy there?' She wondered.

Shortly after, she spotted a few employees she had seen before, as she had filmed a commercial in Marwood Group before.

Just then, she spotted a familiar figure.

"Have you decided where you want to go?" Tommy asked.

"Berham."

"I will allow it."

Not wanting to say another word, Anne turned around to leave.

Behind her, Tommy asked, "have you really lost the ability to bear a child?"

"Yeah. Satisfied?" She said, before leaving.

She stood before the elevator and thought about what she needed to do moving forward. She had not expected Tommy to let her go that easily, and was wondering if he was plotting something.

Tommy was too cunning, so she reminded herself to be careful.

Once she obtained her passport and identification card, she would be able to leave.

Anne could not think of any reason for Bianca to refuse her request, if everything went according to plan.

She stepped into the elevator and gazed up thoughtfully at the red number display above her. She could not reach out to Bianca or she might risk letting Bianca know how desperate she was.

Anne's expression darkened as she realized that she should not have made a deal with a crazy woman.

"Also, I won't do anything to you, but J will torture Sarah. That ought to be even more devastating for you, right? I enjoy your pain! I heard that Sarah goes to a certain club every afternoon to play poker. I am going I here now. How do you think she would react if I showed her these shattered pieces of your passport and identification card?" Bianca chuckled as she got up to leave.

Anne tensed.

Indeed, Sarah enjoyed playing poker in the afternoon, because she took naps at noon and had to go to sleep early at night.

If Bianca showed Sarah the passport and mocked her for it, Sarah would not be able to control herself. If Sarah struck Bianca, it would be yet another disaster.

Anne stood abruptly and reached out to grab Bianca. "Wait-"

As soon as she touched Bianca, Bianca screamed and fell backward as though she was being pushed.

She bumped into another table and collapsed onto the ground.

Instead of hurrying upstairs, she sat by the garden facing toward the stairs, it was covered by bushes and was perfect for her to stay hidden.

If anything should happen, she would be able to spot it right away.

The sky was slowly turning dark and she saw the nanny heading out to pick the children up. Shortly after, the triplets appeared and went up the stairs.

Anne had only dared to look out for a bit, she was concerned that her children would see how she was sneaking around.

Shortly after the triplets had returned home, two cars drove into the area and a huge crowd darted toward the stairway.

Anne was absolutely terrified by how the sight resembled a zombie apocalypse. Luckily, she was not at home, or she would be in a dangerous position if she was stuck inside.

Anne turned and left the area swiftly, before calling the nanny to explain the situation.

"When will you come back? Should I call Mr. Newman?" The nanny asked worriedly.

However, the nanny told her that there were a lot of people, and they were not going to leave soon.

Anne was sitting in a small supermarket that operates 24 hours a day. At the long table by the window, she had a cup of instant noodle in front of her.

While eating, she could feel a sense of homelessness.

She had never been so embarrassed in her lifetime!

"Hey, is that her?"

"Looks like her."

"It's her."

Anne turned her face and saw three girls staring at her face, grimacing and scowling.

Before the three of them could take out their phones, Anne did not finish her cup of noodles. She pulled on her mask and ran away immediately.

It was dark at night, and she ran with people chasing behind her.

In the end, she managed to get rid of them.

Chapter 297

Anne bit her lips. Indeed! Her mother was a mistress, so she could only be brought up to be an improper woman!

Bianca came from an honorable family, so she would definitely be a gentle lady with good manners!

That was exactly what he meant!

Thus, no matter how she explained it, Anthony would always favor Bianca, and it had nothing to do with what kind of woman she really was!

Anne originally thought that Anthony would take her to the Royal Mansion, but she did not expect the car to go more and more to the remote area. They got far away from the hustling and bustling of the city.

She even saw the sea.

It was a mansion by the sea.

Anne got out of the car, and in front of her was a duplex mansion facing the sea, with a garden of exquisite scenes embellished with palm trees with large leaves.

One could imagine spending the day leisurely in the shade of palm trees.

She knew that Anthony owned many mansions, but this was the first time she went to one outside of the Royal Mansion.

Anne closed her eyes subconsciously, and then she felt the cool antiseptic being sprayed on her forehead.

A strange feeling rose from within her heart.

Anthony was really applying medicine on her.

But why? In the video, it really did appear that she pushed Bianca.

Logically, Anthony should be torturing her now!

This man was really extraordinarily elusive.

Although she was wronged, Anthony might not believe her. However, she still tried to clear up her name in this calm atmosphere, "What I said is true. I didn't push Bianca. She wanted to see me. The box in the video had my passport and ID card in it, and they had been cut into pieces. You can go back and see if those things are still there to know if I lied."

The shadow before her eyes moved away.

Anne saw that Anthony picked his phone up and made a call, "Go and see if Anne's passport and ID card are in the study drawer." After hanging up the phone, his sharp and black eyes looked at Anne. "You're lying or not, we're about to find out."

Anne wanted to prove that she was right, absolutely right.

Less than a minute later, the phone vibrated again.

Anthony looked at her without saying a word, as if he was waiting for her to speak first.

Anne found herself ridiculous. What was there to care about anyway, the one half naked here was not herself.

Even though she thought so, Anthony's overly sturdy and muscular physique still made her look away.

"I never thought about fighting Bianca." Anne stabilized her emotions and said, "You said before that I should get out of Luton, right? I'll leave tomorrow. But before I leave, can you remove the things online? I don't want to get that look everywhere I go."

"Are you negotiating with me?" Anthony's face was cold.

"It's not that I want to negotiate, but if I don't leave, it will only be more troublesome in the future. I believe that you don't want your Bianca to be hurt, right?" Anne could only bring up the person he cared to make him agree.

"Are you threatening me?" Anthony's voice suddenly fell.

The oppressive air flow made her difficult to breathe.

The suffocating silence was interrupted by the vibrating phone on the bedside table.

Anthony walked over and picked up the phone. He went to the floor-to-ceiling window and spoke into the phone, "You haven't slept yet?"

Anne could tell the identity of the caller as soon as she heard this tone of his.

What was in his mind?

She was inconvenient now, so why did Anthony want her to sleep together?

He would not want to do so forcibly, would he?

Besides, Anthony did not say anything about helping her to remove the internet posts.

She would have never come to beg him if it was not. for the sake of her children.

Anne thought perhaps it was better to speak softly?

"How long are you going to stand? Go take a shower." Anthony walked out of the cloakroom, already in his pajamas, exuding strong aura.

Anne recovered and walked to the bathroom.

There was a rustling of water in the bathroom.

Anthony found that the door was not closed.

Anne stood under the shower, drenched and alluring.
