Chapter 351

Sarah took a breath and asked, "Do you think Anthony's mother was killed by Ron?"

Anne was stunned. "Why do you ask that? Did you think of something?"

She started thinking furiously.

If this really was the case, the person Anthony should hate was Ron!

Was it possible?

"There was a time when Ron slept at night and had nightmares, saying that he wasn't a murderer. He was talking about Anthony's mother, right? It was not long after her death," Sarah said.

Anne could not imagine such a thing happening between husband and wife. "Maybe he missed her?"

"Leave this matter to me. No matter what, I must go and find out the truth so that Anthony doesn't look at us as if he were looking at garbage!" Sarah was very dissatisfied. Then she took out her mobile phone. "By the way, there is still something for me to do..."

Anne looked at Sarah's phone.

Chapter 352

After two days, Nigel took Annie to see the house.

It was truly an apartment with great privacy.

The garden scenery inside was great, and she did not need to climb five flights of stairs.

Although Anne did not ask about it, she knew where this place was.

It was not a new building. This house was built over ten years ago but was well maintained.

It was not outrageously expensive, but only locals would get a chance to buy it.

This was to ensure the safety of the residents.

Anne did not feel uncomfortable about this arrangement.

However, she did not love it either.

She did not like the fact that she had just known Nigel for a short time, and he had already bought her something this expensive.

Her mother was really...

Perhaps Nigel saw through her, or perhaps Nigel also wanted to hug this daughter who had never been hugged before.

When Bianca was young, he often hugged her.

He gently hugged Anne into his arms.

Anne blushed, and her heart beat a little faster.

The affection of her family made her eyes watery.

Seeing that scene in the dark, Anthony turned and left with a cold expression.

After seeing the house, Nigel sent her back.

Anne went upstairs and stepped on the steps happily.

Up to the fifth floor, then to the sixth floor.

Just as she stepped onto the sixth floor, her body froze.

She felt the familiar aura of dominance in the air.

Anne stopped, turned around, and saw nothing.

However, the fear that came from the heart was still there.

Anne had hope in her eyes, but she did not dare to expect too much.

"Pleasure me and satisfy me." This was what Anthony wanted in return.

Anne's heart sank.

She knew that she would not get it for free.

Seeing the resistance in her eyes, Anthony's black eyes suddenly became dark and cold.

"Ah!" Anne could not resist his powerful hands, staggered, and slammed into the wall.

When she turned around, Anthony was nowhere to be seen.

The headlights only illuminated the lower body, and the upper body was invisible in the dark.

Ron waved. "Shoo her away!"

The driver honked the horn, but the woman did not move.

Ron was annoyed by the driver's stupidity.

He had always wanted to fire the driver but always gave him another chance.

Could he not accomplish something as easy as telling someone in the middle of the road to move out of the way?

Ron got out of the car, pretending to be drunk, walked over, and yelled, "What are you doing standing here? Do you want money? Believe it or not, I'll report it... ah!"

Before he could finish speaking, Ron sat on the ground in fright when he saw the face of the woman.

The driver got out of the car at this time. "Mr. Marwood, you...Ah, ghost!" Before he could finish speaking, he was shocked when he saw the woman in front of him with a pale face smeared with blood.

Ron heard a thud behind him.

Looking back, the driver had passed out on the ground.

"No, no, I... I was watching from the side, don't you blame me for it. If you had completed the divorce, then nothing would have happened... I'm sorry, Julie, after all these years, I had always been in remorse, so regretful... Why did I not help you, I am sorry..."

Sarah turned the recording off, looked at Ron, whose face was pale, and asked, "What about now? Can you remember it now?"

Ron listed his terrified but enraged eyes. "That woman was you!"

"Who else? Did you really think Julie Watson appeared ?

Ron, I really did not expect you would kill your own wife!"

"I said it. I did not kill her!"

"Isn't standing by the side and watching, assisting the murder?" Sarah asked condescendingly.

The first person that came to his mind was Anne.

Only Anne was the closest to Sarah.

Anne received a phone call from Sarah, suggesting they have a meal together.

“Did you get new clues?” In the expensive restaurant, Anne looked at the person grinning ear to ear in front of her, and she could not help but ask.

Sarah said, “No, nothing to find out about.”

Anne could not help but feel a little disappointed.

To be detested by Anthony felt as bad as being targeted by a demon.

Sarah knew what Anne was thinking, but she chose to ignore it.

After all, the shareholding in Marwood Group was more appealing.

Chapter 358

Anne turned to look at the things around her house. She even went into the bedroom.

She felt that something was not right but could not tell what.

Could she have forgotten to organize the pillows on the couch?

Anne felt strange.

She walked out of the house and found her spare key hidden under the plant.

The key was still there, but she did not keep it there anymore.

If Sarah could find the spare key laying in here, she was certain that other people would be able to find it too!

However, would Ron enter the house?

Why would he enter? Her hypothesis could not really make sense, so she stopped speculating.

Anne rested a few days and returned to the Marwood Group the next morning.

She already knew that she had become famous.

The search term 'Anne Vallois' had been trending on the internet for a few days.

Chapter 359 When Anthony’s sharp and terrifying gaze swept past, Anne immediately held her head low alongside Xander.

“Mr. Marwood.” “Hmm,” Anthony responded and continued walking straight. Xander and Oliver followed him. At the back of the parade was Anne.

Anthony’s attitude was as though nothing had happened, cold and indifferent. Anne still had her guard up. She wished to be able to turn invisible.

Everyone else was already in the meeting room. No, in fact, Tommy was absent, but this was nothing strange. He was always absent.

Anne sat behind Xander, facing the laptop on her lap.

Once the meeting commenced, she was busy typing down the minutes.

When it was Xander’s turn to present, she projected the data onto the screen. Whenever they talked about the flaws in the numerical data for the Finance Department, Damian’s face would twitch as though feeling guilty about it. Anne kept her focus on the laptop as though she only had eyes for the laptop.

She did not dare to look around. She was afraid to look into a scary bottomless pit if she did so.

As long as she kept dodging it, nothing would happen. “I have a matter to announce.” Finally, Ron voiced out. He did not care what other people would think, except for Anthony. Anthony’s gaze alone was already enough for him to be sweating. “I give away half of my shareholding. There is no implication to the other shareholders. It is merely a change on my end.”

Anthony did not say a word, but his gaze could kill.

Damian was curious. “Who did you give it to?”

Ron felt his throat heavy. “To... Sarah Vallois.”

What? Anne reflexed. Her laptop almost fell off her lap. She looked at Ron with disbelief, and she even tried to observe Anthony’s expression out of fear.

Anne regained her consciousness and stood up.

She followed Xander to the meeting room door. Her gaze was, however, fixated on Ron.

“Director. I will return to the office later.” Anne stood still at the door and did not proceed.

Xander did not say anything but even helped her to bring her laptop back.

Anne returned to the meeting room and slammed the door shut. She walked up to Ron and interrogated, “What do you mean? Why did you accuse my mother? What do you want? You said you wanted to compensate. If you really wanted to, why not ask your son to let me go?”

She was breathing heavily, and her chest was pumping up and down.

She could not remain calm.

Ron snickered. His tone was devilish. “Getting to know both your mother and you is the biggest misfortune of my life!”

He stood up, looked at Anne, and said, “Your mom gave you the backup audio, didn’t she? Why are you acting like a good samaritan here?”

“What backup audio?” Anne did not understand.

“Too bad I couldn’t find it at your place two days ago. Otherwise, how would I allow the both of you to be stepping all over me like that? Don’t you celebrate too early about getting the
