"Don't worry. We'll find her." Anthony stood on the dock, and his sharp black eyes appeared more dangerous than the sea.

'Okay. I'll wait for your good news. But, are you still in Santa Nila?'

'Yes. I'll go back later.'

'Finding Anne is important. I'm fine.'" After Bianca hung up the phone, the worried expression on her face disappeared immediately.

Her acting was fantastic.

Anthony stayed in Santa Nila for Anne, wishing he had found her body.

Dorothy held back her anger and said, 'Fine, I'll go back first, and 111 come to see you in two days. Please take good care of yourself. Fortunately, you still have another daughter, so you won't be in despair.'

Nigel's expression did not look better because of her comfort. 'Just leave.'

Dorothy walked toward the door and glared at Sarah viciously, thinking that Sarah had it lucky!

Nigel walked over to the edge of the bed. Even though Sarah was tucked in bed, he noticed she was tugging hard on the edge of the quilt. Then, Nigel gently relaxed Sarah's fingers, but he remembered that her hand was not like that before, and he could not help but wonder what Dorothy had done just now.

Suddenly, Nigel's phone rang, but he found that it was an unknown number.

'Who's this?'

"It was not high...don't exaggerate!" "I noticed that you've been absent-minded lately. What's the matter? Is it because you're worried about your family?"

"My sister is missing, so how can I not worry? Besides, Anthony is also there...I don't know what the situation is, and I really want to go there, but I'm afraid of delaying his affairs..."

"You're so kind, and that's why you worry so much."

As soon as Bianca turned around, her eyes lit up when she saw the man coming in. She was thrilled and exclaimed, "Anthony?"

"How's your finger?" Anthony checked her little finger and asked. "What was your assistant doing? So careless!"

Bianca's assistant was so frightened that she retreated to the side.

"It was not her fault. I was on stage, and she couldn't accompany me anyway." Bianca defended her assistant. "By the way, is Anne found?"

Anthony's obsidian eyes were so calm that Bianca could not see through his emotions.

Anthony thought even if Anne were in hell, he would drag her back!

Lucas came to accompany the three little ones, and when he was about to leave, the nanny whispered to him at the door, 'That's right. Ms. Vallois' mother had a car accident, so she went to Santa Nila to take care of her. The kids are a little upset as she hasn't video-called them in the past two days.'

"Did you call her?" Lucas asked.

'Yes, but her phone is turned off.'

"Her phone is turned off?" Lucas suddenly felt that it was strange.

Why did Anne turn off her phone? She was only there to take care of her mother.

Lucas went downstairs and took out his phone. Initially, he hesitated, but he still called Anne and found that her phone was indeed turned off.

Nigel was a light sleeper who reacted when he heard movement.

When he heard someone calling his name, he looked at the bed in disbelief and stood up in a hurry. "Sarah, are you awake? Don't talk. I'll call the doctor over."

Then, Nigel hurriedly rang the bell beside the bed. Not long after, the doctor and nurse arrived and gave Sarah a full body examination.

Sarah no longer needed to wear an oxygen mask and could breathe normally.

"It's a miracle! I thought you'd be in a coma for at least half a year! You're recovering very well," said the doctor.

Nigel asked, "Nothing will happen again, right?"

"She'll be fine since she's awake now. But if you're worried, she can stay in the hospital for a few days for observation."

What was her relationship with Lucas? If it were about the children, they would not need to talk about it by the roadside.

Lucas sensed someone was staring, and he looked over to find the Rolls Royce drove past.

There was only one person in Luton who had that type of license plate.

The night was shrouded in darkness, giving people a depressed feeling. The Rolls Royce that obviously did not belong to the area, drove in and stopped downstairs.

Anthony entered Anne's home. It was simple and clean, and Anne's elegant yet babyish scent lingered in the air. Then, Anthony walked into the room and sat on the edge of the bed. Suddenly, he felt his stomach cramping, causing him to frown in discomfort.

He opened the drawer and found antacid, but he did not remember having it here before. So, did Anne specially prepare it for him?

'What a cunning woman.' Anthony stared at the bottle of antacid in a daze, almost crushing it with his grip.

Anthony stood before the hospital bed, staring at the sleeping Anne like a dangerous beast.

Anne was pale, her face and the back of her hands were all wounded, and even her lips had lost color. Although her breathing was steady, it could be seen that she was seriously injured.

Ivan, who was in a wheelchair, felt deeply guilty. "I'm sorry, Mr. Marwood. When I noticed the helicopter was out of control, I immediately dragged Ms. Vallois and jumped down. Unfortunately, due to the distance being too high, she suffered a concussion when she fell into the sea. Fortunately, I was still conscious after the jump. I waited a long time for the passing yacht to pull US up, but I couldn't hold back and fainted immediately when I reached the deck, so I couldn't notify you in time."

Anthony kept staring at Anne, not looking away even once. "Can she move? •

The doctor beside him said, "She suffered multiple fractures, and her condition only stabilized recently, so it's best for her not to move for the time being."

Anthony ordered, "Oliver, have Kathryn bring her team here."

Oliver replied, "Yes, Mr. Marwood." Then, he left and made the call.

The doctor and nurse knew they were no longer needed in the ward, so they left.

Anthony leaned down slowly, staring closer at Anne's face. Then, he gently rubbed her pale lips, leaned in, and kissed her.

Curious, Bianca walked over and picked it up. Then, she found it was actually Anne's information in detail, including the particulars of her graduating from high school and life abroad. However, the further she read, the stranger it was—Anne was pregnant and gave birth to triplets.

Bianca was shocked. Anne actually gave birth to triplets? It was definitely real, as the document included the hospital bills as evidence.

After that, Anne returned with her three children, who were all at Pinnacle Academy.

It turned out that Anne gave birth to another man's children! Anthony must be suspicious, so he let someone investigate!

What a surprise!

So, the triplets she saw in the community that day were Anne's children! No wonder she did not like them!

If Anthony saw the document, would he fly into a rage? Thankfully, Anne was dead, otherwise, she would have been tortured mercilessly by Anthony!

The smug and sarcastic Bianca froze when she turned to the last page, which was filled with the personal portraits of the triplets.

Anthony was not at Archduke Group. He most probably had gone to Santa Nila to find Anne, who died a messy death.

How diligent of him!

She did not care that Anne had died. What she was afraid of was that he would also care about Anne's children.

It was no wonder why Anne was so unbothered that she could no longer bear a child and she was not saddened at all.

It turned out she had already completed the mission of bearing children!

However, since Anne had three children as her insurance, why did she want to hide them?

Bianca understood it once she gave it a thought. Anthony hated Anne so much, so Anne certainly was afraid that the triplets would get involved in the mess!

Bianca could not take things lightly and not care about them because of such a reason.

No matter how much he hated her, those were still Anthony's children!

How could they be the same?

The information had been changed, but she still had to get rid of the triplets. She could not let them stay in Luton.

She scanned the surroundings as soon as she entered, so she did not seem like a good person.

Bianca looked at her and sneered, "You're the nanny who's taking care of the children, right? I am Anne's half-sister. We share the same father. I'm also Anthony's fiancée. I want to talk to you."

As she said that, she sat down on the couch as if she was at her own home.

The nanny was stunned by her self-introduction.

Did that mean that someone has already found out about the children?

Because she knew who Anthony was.

The nanny did not know what she should do for a moment as the other party had the upper hand.

She could not get in touch with Ms. Vallois, so she could only look for Mr. Newman, right?
