Chapter 571

Anne could not say anything.

She indeed wanted to find a family for the kids. It was not wrong for her to think this way, was it?

However, she did not dare to say it.

Anthony's eyes were menacing in the dark. "Anne, I really should strangle you to death!"

"Don't... forgive me, I am only scared that... I would anger you if I gave birth to the children without your consent..."

'What do you think now?' Anthony looked at her like a demon.

She was so afraid as though she would be dead in his hands within the next second!

She knew how much strength this pair of hands had, and it was nothing that she could withstand!

Anthony's glare in the dark almost pierced right through her, and the next second, he released her.

Anthony immediately recalled Chloe's expression, which looked exactly like hers.

Even though he thought about that in his mind, his expression remained cold.

As though Anne did not hear it, she stood still.

Anthony was suddenly triggered, he stood up.

As he walked out, he grabbed Anne and dragged her out!

"Let go of me! Anthony... Let me go! I want to see the kids! Anthony... Ah!" Anne was flung out of the hallway.

Anthony looked at her expressionless. His presence was intimidating. " There's no advantage in annoying me!"

After warning her, he left for the hallway.

Anne wanted to pursue but was stopped by Hayden. "Ms. Vallois, Mr. Marwood is not wrong. This is doing nothing good for you."

"Isn't he already annoyed? What does he look like when he is angry? About to kill me?"

"Ms. Vallois, calm down and listen to me. You cannot just face it head-on when he is pissed. That way, you will only annoy him further! Please go home first. You can come back after Mr. Marwood gets over it. After all, you are the mother to the kids. Mr. Marwood would still consider it, right?" Hayden suggested.

Anne eventually calmed down.

Nigel checked the pillow behind her and said, "Are you not using the down feather pillow that I bought you?"

"Luckily, I had the down feather pillow. Otherwise, I would be awake the whole night," Anne said.

Nigel laughed. "Just let me know whenever you need anything."

"I will."

Sarah sat by the bed, Nigel sat on the couch, and they both watched as Anne ate.

Soon, Sarah asked, "What kept you busy recently?"

Nigel said, "It's more or less the same thing every day."

"Why are you still working so hard? Your daughters are grown, and your soon-to-be son-in-law is the most powerful person in Luton. Even if your wife is a big spender, you will not need that much money," Sarah said.

"No, I am just used to living this way."

"You are still the same as before," Sarah said.

Sarah was immediately provoked. "Dorothy, stop making false accusations! My daughter lives chastely, and that would never happen! Besides, I wouldn't possibly be unaware if she has children. You should get Kathryn to look at you if you've gone mad!"

Nigel, too, felt that Dorothy's words were unbelievably ridiculous.

"Am I making a false accusation? Ask her, then. Ask her if she's given birth to triplets; ask her if those kids belong... to Anthony!" Dorothy did not want to mention that they were Anthony's children, but she was far too frustrated. Ever since Bianca had told her about it, she could not remain composed.

Nigel and Sarah looked at Anne dazedly and turned to glance at Bianca, who was trying her best to contain her anger.

"Anne, this can't be true, right? Dorothy is a fool. We can't just take her word IV

Anne froze at the mention that Anthony and Bianca were getting married when the issue with the children had not been resolved yet.

"Mom, let's go!" Bianca said.

'That's it?"

"So long as I'm breathing, I won't let them get what they want!" Bianca said before turning to leave.

Dorothy scanned Anne and Sarah and said, "Don't dream of getting Anthony to value you simply because you gave birth to three kids!"

Sarah chuckled darkly. "Who are you talking about? No one wants that!" She turned around to scold Anne but could not bring herself to say anything when she saw the gloomy look on Anne's face.

"By the way, you need to hurry up and get pregnant as well. Seriously, why aren't you pregnant yet? Should I take you to a specialist?"

'I'm perfectly fine!' The car stopped in front of the mansion, and Bianca stormed into the house angrily.

Dorothy followed closely. "Bianca, we can't afford to be prideful now. Anthony has just taken Anne's triplets into his wings, but he probably doesn't feel much for them since he wasn't there when they were born. If you get pregnant now, your child is going to be more precious to him than those three.

'Alright!" Bianca shouted in frustration.

Startled, Dorothy quieted down.

'I will go to the hospital someday, stay out of this." Bianca narrowed her eyes viciously. 'So what if she has children? We don't know if the kids will grow up safely yet!"

Meanwhile, at the desk in the restroom of the Archduke Group, everyone surrounded the table and appeared to be playing a certain game.

'Write your answer on the paper, and the majority wins. The minority is buying the others coffee. No peeping!"

The manager walked in. "What are you doing?"

"Do you want to join?" The receptionist invited him.

The female employee beamed at how adorable their voices were. "Can I squeeze your cheeks? Any one of you would do..." She was just dying to pinch their cheeks, as she already knew they were going to be soft to the touch.

Just then, the office door flew open, and Anthony came back from his meeting.

The employees immediately bowed their heads and left, not daring to overstay their welcome.

"Who gave you all these snacks?" Anthony glanced through the fruits and biscuits on the desk, concerned that the triplets might not be able to eat their lunch.

Chloe stepped on the chair and reached out to him. "Papa, eat this."

'I don't eat sweets...' He opened his mouth and accepted the biscuit.

Charlie walked over and looked up at Anthony. "Papa, are we not going to school?"

"No." The look in Anthony's eyes darkened.

Anthony observed them in silence, realizing that they did not need his help at all, which meant that it must not have been too hard for Anne to care for them.

Had Anne not hidden the children away from him, he would have discovered them a long time ago. If the triplets did not find him, he would still be in the dark, and the thought itself filled Anthony's mind with the urge to strangle Anne to death.

Not having the mood to work, Bianca went to the Royal Mansion in the afternoon.

The triplets had just woken up from their nap, and Bianca spotted them by the piano as soon as she stepped into the living room.

Charlie sat on the chair while Chris and Chloe played with the keys happily.

Bianca's expression darkened.

Anthony had bought the piano from overseas for her sake, and it had cost a large sum of money. It somehow felt like an insult to Anthony's effort to let the children play with it.

'Don't play with this.' She walked over and closed the cover of the piano.

"You can't possibly be doing that out of the kindness of your heart, can you? " Anne could not accept to think of the triplets calling someone else their mother, not to mention when it was a vicious woman like Bianca.

"Anne, you only think of people badly because you are a horrible person. No matter what, I'm their aunt by blood. I won't hurt them, so you should rest in the hospital. Don't worry. I will take care of the children!" Bianca said.

'Bianca, you...' Before Anne could finish, Bianca hung up, and Anne immediately tried to call her back.

Bianca stared at her phone and rejected the phone call with a smug smile. From now on, she would be the perfect stepmother so that Anne would get nothing in the end.

There could not be any issue between her and Anthony before they officially got married. No one could be Anthony's wife but her.

Anne tossed her phone aside, unable to remain calm.

'What should I do? Are my children going to belong to Anthony and Bianca now? Will Anthony really do that? That's right. The triplets are his children, and once he marries Bianca, she will naturally become their mother! It's not odd anywhere in the world. I've given birth to them and raised them. Why should I have to hand them over?' she thought.

Chapter 580

However, when she found out that the mansion belonged to Anthony, all jealousy she felt toward the owner of the Royal Mansion faded. She still had her own pride, after all.

Even as she was standing before the mansion, she could not help but stare. As soon as they were inside the living room, they spotted two boys and a girl near the couch; Sarah and Nigel had ignored Bianca's presence.

The boys looked exactly like Anthony, while the girl was an exact replica of Anne.

Sarah's eyes reddened.

The triplets were looking at the entrance of the living room. Their doe-like eyes were filled with curiosity as though they were wondering who had just walked in.

Nigel could not tear his eyes away from them. Hearing about the triplets and actually meeting them in real life was completely different. One would need to be sharp to notice the girl's resemblance to Anne.

"My god..." Sarah covered her mouth and finally realized that Bianca was braiding Chloe's hair. She narrowed her eyes and pulled Chloe toward her before crouching down. She then proceeded to pull Chris and Charlie over to scan them up and down. "You all look so beautiful. How is that possible... You must be Chloe, right? Are you Charlie? And you are Chris, am I right?"

"Who are you?" Chloe asked curiously. 1

"I'm your grandma, and this is your grandpa," Sarah introduced herself and Nigel.

Bianca rolled her eyes at how shameless Sarah was.

Nigel crouched down and whispered gently, "Can Grandpa give you a hug?"

Sarah said, "You can't do that right off the bat. They might get scared."
