Chapter 691

If Sarah was at the hospital as well, Dorothy and Bianca would definitely try to provoke, or even hurt her.

Anne was concerned. She did not want her mother to get hurt when her father was still unconscious.

The door to the meeting room flew open and there were men and women sitting by the long meeting table, to whom Anne assumed were the experts Anthony had hired.

Anthony sat at the further end with Kathryn on one side and next to him were Dorothy and Bianca.

Both Dorothy and Bianca stared at Anne coldly and she simply proceeded to take her seat next to Kathryn.

Anthony glanced at his watch and Kathryn took it as a hint to start the meeting. "Everyone should have a copy of the medical report. You all know that he is currently in a coma. Anyone here who manages to improve his condition even by the slightest will be rewarded handsomely."

Everyone knew what she meant by it, that payment was not an issue if they had the talent worthy of it.

“Relax, there won’t be an issue in applying that to a human being. The worst outcome would simply be no outcome at all,” the expert said.

“It’s settled, then. Kathryn, report the daily progress to me,” Anthony commanded.

“Yes, Mr. Marwood.”

Anne was relieved and overjoyed that there was hope, however slim.

“Even if you need to read the will, we don’t need outsiders here. Mr. Stahl, Nigel has nothing to do with Sarah. Sleeping with him a few times doesn’t count. If she insists on getting paid, we can pay her a thousand for each time she slept with him.”

The insult was distasteful and Robert felt extremely awkward to be put on the spot.

Bianca felt pleased to see the suppressed anger on Anne’s face and said, “Mom, we all know about it, so why bother saying it out loud? It’s so embarrassing.”

She was clearly implying that it was embarrassing for Anne and was being sarcastic about it.

“That’s the thing, though. Both Sarah and Anne are mentioned in the will,” Robert said.

“What?” Dorothy lost her senses. “Sarah, too?”

“Yes.”

“Why would Dad write such a will? He left them with his most valuable, and what did he leave me and my mom? I don’t care about money, but I won’t accept his either!” Bianca threw the paper onto the ground. “Me and my mom are supposed to be the beneficiaries.”

“I’m sorry, but this is what Mr. Faye intended,” Robert said, before turning to Dorothy. “Mrs. Faye, I believe that you’ve signed a prenup when you married Mr. Faye stating that you have no right to his money upon his death.”

“What?” Bianca gaped at Dorothy.

Dorothy lowered her gaze gloomily. “Yes! But what about Bianca? Why isn’t Bianca the first beneficiary? The money in his bank isn’t even one third of what his funds are worth. Does he take us for beggars? Mr. Shahl, something is wrong!”

“I was shocked as well and asked Mr. Faye if he was sure, but he insisted.”

Anne had remained quiet the entire time, but decided to speak up, “I think that something is wrong as well.”

Sarah was provoked. "We were overseas. What exactly can we do? Don't just make false accusations!"

"Tell me why my dad would write a will like this, then? I'm his real daughter who he had raised, the same daughter he remarried my mom for, yet he left you two everything. Does that even make sense?" Bianca questioned.

Indeed, it did not seem logical.

Anne's eyes darted back and forth between Dorothy and Bianca. "I think that you two did something horrible and enraged Dad into making such a decision."

Dorothy tried her best to conceal the guilt she felt deep down. She knew that Nigel had made such a decision because he found out that Bianca was not his daughter by blood, but that was simply far too cruel of him. As his wife, she had worked hard for their family and was left with nothing.

"He isn't that easily fooled, but it depends on who's fooling him!" Bianca said sarcastically.

"You-" Sarah wanted to curse at her, but Anne interrupted her.

"I won't give you anything."

Dorothy and Bianca's faces twisted in anger as they itched to tear Anne's face apart. Bianca refused to give up and since she could only rely on Anthony, she trusted that he would side with her.

"Anthony, Anne and her mom are clearly trying to take over my inheritance. They probably plotted this from before. My mom is the wife and Sarah is nothing but a homewrecker. How could the legal wife lose to the homewrecker?" Bianca said.

'What is this?' Bianca thought. 'Nigel didn't even mention us at all! Forget his wife, but he didn't even mention me? Is it because he raised me, so he feels sorry for Anne? Is that why he just gave me whatever cash he has in the bank and called it a day?'

"Dad is going to wake up at some point, so I don't see the point in signing this," Anne said.

"The company needs someone to make the calls and for you to do so, you need to sign this," Robert said.

"Just sign it first. Once your dad wakes up, you can always just give it back to him," Sarah said, deciding that it was still better than to leave the company to Bianca.

Anne nodded, before signing her name on the paper, and handing the pen to Sarah.

Bianca and Dorothy stared at them with anger boiling in their eyes, Dorothy felt all strength draining from her and fell back to the chair.

Bianca turned to look at Anthony. "Let's do the test here, in case 'someone' tampers with the results."

Both Anne and Sarah were enraged by her sarcastic tone.

"Sure," Anthony said.

Kathryn came to draw blood from Nigel and Anne, before taking the samples for a paternity test.

Bianca glanced at Anthony darkly and said, "Anthony, I don't feel so well, so I'm going home now. We need to wait for the results to come out, anyway. My mom and I are heading back."

All the pain was worth it in the end and she was determined to never disappear again. She would be with her children whenever they wished to see them.

As soon as she arrived and got out of the taxi, she spotted the Rolls Royce outside of the garage, which meant that Anthony was home.

She had expected Anthony to hurry over to console Bianca.

She walked into the living room and instead of the children, she saw Hayden approaching her. "Ms. Vallois..."

"Where are the kids?" She blurted out.

Hayden smiled. "At the back. Mr. Marwood is with them."

Anne immediately ran outside and since the Royal Mansion was enormous, it took her some time to reach the backyard. She wondered why Anthony needed a mansion this size the entire way as every second felt too long to her. By the time she arrived, she was panting and gasping for air.

However, when she saw the triplets playing on the field, she could not be bothered to look at Anthony, who was standing on the side.

She went to take the ball and kicked it toward the triplets, who ran after it right away.

Chloe did not know how to play football, so she could only run after it.

Anne stood in front of the net as the goalkeeper.

"Mama, here I come!" Charlie shouted.
