Chapter 701

Anthony narrowed his eyes dangerously and glanced at Anne.

Anne did not mind when Anthony answered his phone but stiffened when she sensed his eyes on her. She started guessing who had called and whether it involved her.

'Did Dad wake up?' She thought. 'No, it doesn't look like it judging from the look on Anthony's face.'

"Are you certain?" Anthony questioned hoarsely.

"Yes. No one else has touched the samples," Kathryn said confidently.

Without another word, Anthony hung up and proceeded with eating his lunch.

Anne wanted to ask him about it, but held back because the children were still around. "Mama, will you stay with us in the evening?" Chloe asked.

"Who said anything about venting my anger on you?" He scowled impatiently.

She bit her lips and thought to herself, "Tell that to the look on your face!"

"I'm going to buy food for my mom. Can you just drop me off on the side of the road?" She just remembered that she was going to buy food for Sarah and was worried that Sarah might be starving by now.

She always forgot about everything else whenever she was with her children.

"Why didn't you say anything in the mansion?" He asked darkly.

"Are you willing to let them prepare food for my mom?" She retorted.

Anthony's expression darkened as he commanded with a cold tone, "Stop the car."

I'm sure you've gotten quite a lot out of him already, right? Whatever he gave you in the past or promised you through his will, none of them are valid anymore!"

"Dream on!" Sarah refused to allow it.

"The paternity test results are right here. You can't deny them!" Dorothy said.

Anne turned around and stared at Nigel, who remained unconscious on the bed.

Could it truly be a misunderstanding?

She resembled her mother and did not look much like Nigel, so one could not say with certainty that they were related by looks alone, unlike the way with Chris, Charlie and Anthony. However, her heart still ached.

She cared and loved Nigel with all her heart; could such emotion blossom simply because they were once proved to be related by a piece of paper.

Sarah was anxious as she did not want Anne to sign the contract. After all, once she signed it, they would have nothing left. Moreover, signing it would be tantamount to admitting that Anne and Nigel were not related.

Would they actually be unrelated?

That would be impossible...

Anne walked to the desk and took the document.

Sarah was about to stop Anne from signing anything when she saw Anne tearing up the document.

"Anne!" Bianca's face became twisted. "Do you think anything will change just because you tear it?"

"I won't acknowledge your DNA paternity test." Anne glanced at the mother–daughter duo coldly.

"Even if you don't trust us, do you not trust Kathryn?" Dorothy asked, "Sarah herself doesn't even know whether you're Nigel's daughter!"

It's clearly written in Kathryn's DNA paternity test, and the doctor who testified admitted that my dad's DNA paternity test had been manipulated. Even so, Anne and her mom are stubborn and refuse to accept the truth despite this powerful evidence. Anthony, what do you think? Bianca hid her panic.

Anne stared blankly at Anthony, then at Bianca. The two stood together as if they were on the same front.

If that were the case, would Anthony favor Bianca if they redo the test?

Kathryn was Anthony's employee. Would she...

Suspicious grew in Anne's heart.

"I want to re-select the doctor, and I'll watch the whole process," Anne said, "I–If the result is still the same, I'll disclaim my Dad's will."

After Sarah saw the result, she cried with joy, “I knew I wasn’t wrong. You’re Nigel’s daughter, and Nigel can’t be wrong...”

Dorothy’s face was ashen, and when she saw Bianca entering the room with the same uneasy expression, she knew everything was over.

Those assets ended up in the hands of Sarah and Anne...

After Anne comforted her mother, she walked up to Anthony and showed him the DNA paternity test result. “This is the correct result. I want to look into the last DNA paternity test and the so-called witnesses.”

The doctor swayed, obviously a little flustered.

Anthony looked at the result and asked calmly, “Are you doubting me?”

Anne did not answer him, and it was apparent that she was suspicious. Otherwise, why would Kathryn make such a DNA paternity test?

Kathryn hurried over. “Mr. Marwood, I did the DNA paternity test myself, and no one else helped me. I thought about it...while waiting for the report, I only left for a short while because of a patient. I doubt that someone did anything to the result at that time, right?”

Bianca walked to Anthony in a panic and explained, "Anthony, that was not what happened. I didn't know this at all. I was angry and sad when I learned that Anne wasn't my real sister on the DNA paternity test. She shouldn't have lied to all of us and disappointed us. Of course, I was mostly angry because no one wanted their feelings to be played with. But I can swear that I never did this kind of thing! Anthony, you have to trust me!"

Anne watched as Bianca pretended to explain anxiously, and she asked calmly, "Are you doing this for Dad's property?"

"As I said, I didn't know anything!" Bianca glared at Anne furiously.

"Whether you were really unaware or secretly manipulating it, only you know best." Anne would never believe Bianca's argument. "Every time you did something bad, you'd always act this way. I've seen enough."

"You..." Bianca stopped arguing with Anne and looked at Anthony. "Anthony, you know best what kind of person I am. You have to trust me."

"Go back and reflect on yourself!" Anthony said with a cold face and got up. Then, he ordered, "Kathryn, find out who did it."

"Yes, Mr. Marwood."

After that, Anthony walked out of the ward without looking back.

"I was really hoping that the fight just now would make Dad have some sort of reaction..." Anne became teary. "I knew I was his daughter. The feeling of wanting to be close to him is not fake."

"He'll wake up. He surely will," Sarah said, "but shouldn't you be managing his company now? Anne, do well. I'll look after Dad."

"When Dad wakes up, I'll return the company and other property to him," Anne said.

She did not want those things, and she just wanted her father to wake up.

"Mom, you haven't eaten yet, right? I'll buy you some food."

"After the crazy incident, I'm starving," Sarah said.

"We still need to eat."

Anne went out to buy Sarah food and called Robert to talk about visiting the company.

There was a knock on the door, and the door opened. Soon after, Tommy walked in with a stern look, holding a fruit basket.

Sarah was surprised and glanced at Anne.

"Why are you here?" Anne asked.

"I thought you were finally willing to get rid of Anthony and relax abroad. I didn't expect you to come back." Then, Tommy put the fruit basket on the table, looked at Nigel, and asked, "What did the doctor say?"

"They're still trying to find a cure," Anne said.

Tommy did not say anything but just stared at Anne. Later, he asked, "Grab a bite with me?"

Anne hesitated and looked at Sarah, saying, "I'm going out for a while."

Nigel was the ‘rich man’ whom Dorothy did not expect. However, she tried her best to remarry him as she saw that his financial resources were improving, which could fully satisfy her ambition of being a wealthy madam.

Yet, Sarah and Anne took everything in the end, so how could she be willing to let it go?

“No ifs!” Bianca’s reaction was so violent that the coffee cup in her hand shook on the coffee table, suddenly lost its stability, and fell to the ground with a thud.

Dorothy was taken aback.

“What ‘ifs’? If Anthony wants to get married, the wife must be me! No one can take my place!” Bianca’s gaze was fierce. “I’m far better than Anne in terms of appearance and talent. Anthony will only marry me! It’s expected that Anthony will be angry because of this incident. In a few days, he’ll treat me like before again!”
