Chapter 741

Tommy asked, "Where is Anne now?"

Lilian did not know what he was going to do and said, "It seems that she is going to go to sea with Anthony today, but something happened to Sarah in the hospital, and she came back alone."

Tommy frowned, got up, and turned off the computer. "I am heading out for a while."

It was obvious what he was going to do.

He had no intention of covering up at all.

Lilian sat there motionless, her eyes cold and murderous.

Tommy was obsessed with getting close to Anne.

It was not like that at first.

Anne was accompanying Sarah in the ward when there was a knock on the door.

Anthony, standing by the guardrail of the yacht facing the sea, almost crushed his phone.

What an obnoxious woman!

He felt a tug on his trousers.

He lowered his head and saw Chloe looking at him with her puppy dog eyes. "Is Mama not coming? How about we go back? I just don't feel right with Mama absent."

She looked pitiful.

Anthony's heart softened. "Mom will come over." She would, even if it meant he had to kidnap her here!

"Go, Papa!" Chloe clenched her small fists.

Anthony showed a gentle yet stiff smile.

This was not a difficult task for him.

Anne took some clothes and returned to the hospital. She soon fell asleep on the sofa in the room.

In the middle of the night, someone entered the ward.

The black shadow stopped in front of Anne for a while, bent down to pick her up, and left.

Before she had time to tell Anthony off, the triplets jumped into her arms. "Mama, it's really Mama!"

"I thought Papa was lying!" said Charlie.

"I guessed right! Mama wanted to surprise us, so she came while we were asleep!" Chris said.

Anne looked at Anthony, staring at him. She could not say she wanted to leave now, could she?

Anthony waved at his bodyguards, who understood and got off the deck.

Not long after, breakfast was served.

"We've all eaten," Anthony said.

"Yes, Mama, hurry up, you must be hungry!" said Charlie.

Facing the three children and the aggressive Anthony, Anne had no choice but to accept her status quo.

She had to accept what was handed to her.

The three kids were so happy to see their Mama, so they surrounded her while she was eating.

"Want something to eat?". Anne asked her kids.

"No, we ate a lot in the morning." Chloe shook his head.

Anne was shocked and yelled, "You didn't stop him? Even if you couldn't stop him, you could have at least woken me up!"

"Why would I wake you up? You like being with the children, don't you? The children must be very happy to see you!" Sarah said.

"How could I leave you there alone? If Dorothy and Bianca mess with you, I won't have time to help you!" Anne said.

It would take at least half an hour, even by helicopter.

"Probably not. Anthony's bodyguards are guarding the door."

"The door of your ward?"

“That’s right, I wasn’t sure at first, but when I asked Dr. Brown, she said that it was to prevent people other than doctors and nurses from entering. Dorothy and Bianca won’t be able to disturb me. It seems that Anthony wanted to make you feel at ease. Just go out and have fun.” Sarah was in a good mood.

Anne was surprised. This was great news.

“How are you now? Does your head still hurt?”

“It doesn’t hurt very much. It’s just a slight concussion, and I can just lie down and rest.”

“Then rest, and don’t get out of bed without the doctor’s orders!” Anne told her.

“I know, I know, you can have fun with peace of mind!”

“Well, if you encounter any problems, just call this number. I won’t let them bully you.”

Bianca and Dorothy, who were standing in the corridor, saw the bodyguards at the door and were furious.

Anne was brought into the room and pressed against the sofa by Anthony’s powerful body. She felt short of breath.

“What do you want...uh...”

Anthony did not give her a chance to speak and kissed her.

Feeling Anthony’s impatience, Anne became flustered and turned away. “Anthony, I don’t...”

“Give me a reason why I shouldn’t do this.”

A reason? What reason would work?

“You have to break up with Bianca,” she blurted out.

Sure enough, Anthony’s movements stopped, and he looked at her with deep, sharp black eyes. “What did you say?”

“I don’t want to be the third person in your marriage, and you can’t force me.” Anne looked resolute.

Anthony pinched her jaw and raised it, narrowing his back eyes dangerously. “I want you. Do you think you have a say in this matter?”

“I don’t have the strength to resist you, but I will never forgive you.” Anne met her cold black eyes fearlessly. “If you can’t, then let me go.”

“What good does it do you to go against me?” Anthony suppressed his desires for Anne. “Are you sure you won’t ask me for anything in the future?”

“I can ask someone else.”

“Who? Lucas?” Anthony stood up, his face shrouded with a sinister expression. “I won’t let him live!”

After speaking, he slammed the door and left.

Ashlynn saw the face under the umbrella, walking toward her. She was so frightened that she backed away and bumped her back against the tree behind her.

“What a coincidence,” Corentin said.

“Hello, Mr. Lloyd...” Ashlynn’s eyes flickered.

Corentin glanced at the tree behind her, raised the corner of his mouth, and asked, “Don’t you know that you can’t stand under a tree when it’s raining?”

Ashlynn noticed that his polite smile was different from Salvatore’s evil smile. She said, “I didn’t see any lightning. I was just taking shelter temporarily.”

“Get in the car. I’ll see you off.”

Ashlynn was flattered. “Thank you, Mr. Lloyd, but I can take the subway.”

“The subway is still some distance away. Do you want me to take you to the subway?” Corentin kindly said.

“No...no, goodbye, Mr. Lloyd!” Before Corentin could respond, she walked out of the shelter of the tree and rushed into the heavy rain.

Corentin stood there holding an umbrella, along with the continuous sound of pattering rain. With his amber eyes, he watched Ashlynn, who was wearing a bag on his head, gradually disappear in the distance.

Anne watched from the side. Anthony really got whatever he wanted.

This part of the sea did not seem to be deep.

"Papa, will this fish be too lonely? I'll catch some smaller fish," Chloe said.

"It will eat the small fish," Anthony said.

"What!" Chloe looked terrified.

Anthony asked, "Do you still want to raise it?"

Chloe looked at the leopard coral trout swimming around in the fish tank, hesitated for a while, and then nodded. "Will it starve to death if I don't feed it?"

"Yes."

Charlie came over to comfort her. "If you don't want to raise it and throw it in the sea, it will still eat other small fish."

“Mama doesn’t want to play with us...” Chloe looked sad.

Anne gave in when she saw the expressions of the three children that went from happy to disappointed.

“Okay, let’s go,” she agreed.

After putting on the small oxygen cylinder and the respirator in her mouth, she hesitated again.

She felt like she was going to hell instead of going to sea.

Seeing the triplets being taken into the water by the bodyguards, she was terrified. “Is the oxygen tank okay? You three have to bite the respirators in your mouths and don’t let go. Did you learn how to breathe just now? What if... what if they can’t breathe underwater?”

“Mmmmm!” Chloe bit the respirator and said.

Anne laughed dryly and did not understand a word she said. She supposed it was words of encouragement.

The triplets waved to her, and jumped into the water one by one in a blink of an eye, disappearing into the water.

She would not be able to see this from an aquarium.

Anne raised her hand, and a small pink fish pecked her finger, tickling her and making her laugh uncontrollably.

Anthony looked at her, his eyes darker than the bottom of the sea.

Anne still did not dare to let go of Anthony's hands when her feet touched the ground. After all, being in the water was different from being on land, and she could not stand firmly if she did not have a foothold.

Her body swayed with the currents of the water.

Looking up, she saw the triplets not far away, squatting to pick up shellfish on the gravel.

Charlie was holding a fish that looked like a centipede in his hand, and Anne was so startled that she pointed his finger at it.

Charlie let go after playing for a while, and the fish slid into its den.

Anne did not care about it, thinking it would not be dangerous there.

If it was dangerous, Anthony would not have let the children come here.

Anne turned her head to look elsewhere on the seabed, the whole area was blue, with small bubbles popping up nearby, and she could not see into the distance.

Just as she was thinking about it, she felt the hand on her loosen, which scared Anne, and tightened her grip on Anthony's hand.
Anthony pointed to the stone next to the huge coral and then pointed behind him.
Anne saw the bodyguard following behind, holding a camera in his hand.
How could he know what he was thinking?
Anne squatted on top of the stone with Anthony's help.
Then Anthony let go of her hand, went down, and waved at her.
Anne squatted on the rock and instantly knew what she needed to do for the photo.
