Chapter 751

He meant that all the seafood that was caught was not allowed to be eaten.

He was just leaving them hanging when they wanted to eat seafood!

Anne sighed. She really had forgotten about her seafood allergy. She even mentioned that she wanted to eat stewed eggs with sea urchins!

When she turned around, she saw that the bodyguard was about to throw the sea urchin into the sea, so she hurried over to stop it. "Can you not throw it away? I can't eat them, but other people can. I want to give them away."

The bodyguard was in a dilemma. After all, Mr. Marwood ordered him to throw it away.

"It's okay. You put it aside, I'll go and tell Anthony about it." Anne caught up with Anthony. "Anthony, Anthony, can we not throw away the sea urchins? I'll pack it up and take it home to give them away!"

Anthony looked at her sharply as if he wanted to penetrate her soul, and he said, "Keep them then."

Anne looked at Anthony and could not help but feel happy.

He had not given specific orders on whom to give the sea urchins to, so she supposed she could give them to whoever she wanted!

Lunch was prepared by the time they all had a shower. There were all kinds of delicacies, but there was no seafood.

The triplets could not wait to sit on the table, and their bodies twisted and turned before they sat down.

"It's time for lunch!"

"I am hungry!"

"So am I!"

“Will Papa sleep with me?” Chris looked eagerly at Papa, who was sitting on the sofa.
“You guys go ahead. I’ll catch up later.” Anthony glanced at Anne.
With a sullen face, Anne took the children away from the deck.
She wondered if Anthony was just being perfunctory to the children or if he meant it.
Although they were on a yacht, the bed was quite big.
When Anthony entered the room, Anne and the children had already fallen asleep.
He only came in five minutes later than they did.
She slept deeply, and the children slept beside her.
He stared at them for a long time.
However, Anthony placed his hand on the pillow, pinched Anne’s chin with the other hand, and said dangerously, “What a wonderful idea of having the children sleep with you so that I can’t sleep with you.”

Ashlynn walked over without looking at them, passing in front of them.

The men whistled at her, but she ignored them.

A finished cigarette fell in front of her, making her pause in her tracks.

Then, she kept walking.

One of the gangsters stood in front of her, preventing her from leaving.

“Hey gorgeous, where are you going? Do you want my brothers to accompany you? They are free now.”
The gangster stared at her with lewd eyes.

The few men who were leaning against the wall also circled behind Ashlynn, flanking her back and forth, preventing her from moving forward or retreating.

“No need for that. Can you make way?” Ashlynn asked.

“No need? Are you sure?” The gangster in front moved closer to her.

Ashlynn took a step back, walked away, and quickened her pace.

The gangster in front of him stretched out his hands toward Ashlynn as he her hand was getting closer and closer to her, laughed arrogantly, Bintley stopped on the side of the road, and a tall man got out "What is going on?" over and stared blankly at the man. It was business!" the driver behind Corentin came over and punched him in the face. The gangster wailed and about to come forward together, but they were all brought up to Ashlynn, who was rubbing her wrist,

Chapter 754

Ashlynn glanced at the Bintley on the side of the road and asked, "Why is Mr. Lloyd here?" Corentin chuckled. "Did you not see me in the ward? I was looking for a place to eat nearby. I did not expect to see you being bullied by gangsters. Fortunately, I bumped into you. Otherwise, it would be troublesome for you." "Thank you very much," Ashlynn said again. "That's all?" "What?" Ashlynn did not understand what he meant. Corentin suggested, "I haven't eaten. How about a meal together? You are my niece's assistant. You should know where to eat delicious food in Luton, shouldn't you?" Ashlynn would have been unwilling before, but he saved her just now, and because of that, he had missed his meal.

This person was Anne's uncle, but she still felt insecure.

“I’ve already eaten. I can recommend a place for you though,” Ashlynn said, looking for an excuse. “How about this? I’m going back to Athetin tomorrow. Can we have dinner together?” Corentin asked. Ashlynn’s eyes flickered, and she asked, “Why...why do you want to have dinner with me?”

Corentin looked at Ashlynn while sipping red wine. He put down his glass and asked, “Is this your first time drinking red wine?”

“When I used to work somewhere else, I needed to drink and socialize. I did drink some back then.” Ashlynn put down her wine glass and said, “You saved me and invited me to dinner. You won’t fail to surprise me.”

Corentin’s slender fingers held the stem of the cup and gently shook it. “Then can you explain to me why you are so scared every time you see me? We don’t seem to know each other, do we?”

"I'm sorry, I was rude. It's because you and my husband... look very similar. My husband was a persistent murderer who was punished by law and is now dead. That's why I was scared when I saw your face, which looked exactly like his," Ashlynn explained to him.

"Are we really that similar?" Corentin raised his eyebrows, expressing his curiosity.

"Yes, it's just that you wear glasses, and he doesn't." Ashlynn reigned in her panic and looked at Corentin's face.

"Is that so?" Corentin raised his hand, took off his glasses, and put them aside.

All of a sudden, Ashlynn sat up straight, her body tensed as she looked at the familiar face that had haunted her for years.

"We look really similar, apparently." Corentin chuckled but did not put his glasses back on.

Ashlynn grinned. "Sure."

She gave it to Ashlynn because Ashlynn was her personal assistant whom she trusted.

If she had given it to someone else, people might be unhappy and think that she was biased.

Anne worked the whole morning and went to the hospital with Ashlynn in the afternoon.

Sarah's body was fine, so it was almost impossible for her to just stay in bed.

Therefore, when they found her, she was next to Nigel, massaging his calf muscles.

"Mom."

Sarah was delighted to see Anne. "When did you get back?"

“Did I not tell you before? It is because we are family. There’s also another important reason...” Corentin looked at Ashlynn, who was placing the coffee in front of him.

“What is it?” Anne asked.

“My father’s no longer in his best health. I know my father. I wanted to take this opportunity to improve my father and brother’s relationship. No matter how much you defend your father, you will never know what they think of each other deep down. Perhaps they just need a bridge to resolve this,” Corentin said.

“My dad ran into an accident and is in a coma. What can get my grandpa, whom I had never met before, to appear?” Anne was a little sarcastic.

“He’s an old man and could be a little stubborn. Therefore, I am now trying to be the middle person to build that bridge for them. Plus, he did not know that your father had run into an accident that was so severe,” he said sincerely.

“He did not know about it?”

“As I said, he is no longer healthy. It is better for him not to be triggered by events like this. Nevertheless, he knew why I was here and did not stop me. That explains what he thinks about the whole situation.” Corentin sipped the coffee and then asked, “Aren’t you curious about what happened between them back then?”

Ashlynn was stunned, then she subconsciously turned to look at Anne. She realized Anne also looked as though she was caught off guard and immediately understood that she was not the one who told him about it.

Therefore, she denied, "There's no such thing. I did not receive the sea urchin."

"How is that possible? You told me that Ms. Vallois gifted you sea urchin, didn't you?" Mr. Walker was still smiling.

It was impossible that Ashlynn had told him about it. She immediately realized that someone was attempting to frame her. "When did I say so?"

"Yesterday, after work!"

"Where? I may have a bad memory. Otherwise, we could check the surveillance camera footage in the office," Ashlynn said as she distributed the documents.

"Your memory is indeed bad. We met outside on our way to the train station."

Ashlynn finished distributing the documents, sat down, and said, "There are surveillance cameras, too, along the way to the train station. We can check that."

"Why are you so serious about it? There's no one snatching it away from you anyway. Say, didn't you carry the foam box all the way to the train station? Ms. Vallois is so nice to you. We don't have that kind of privilege!" Mr. Walker continued joking.

Bianca’s menacing eyes glanced at her. “A good person? Who are you to judge me? Even if I am a bad person, Anthony will still want me! You are only a play toy to Anthony, and you are not even on par with the masseur girls at the roadside shops. At least they get paid for it. What did you get? You are not worth a single penny! Also, I will be staying overnight in the Royal Mansion more often. It’s better for you not to interrupt Anthony and me.”

Then, she left.

Of course, Anne knew what she was to Anthony, but she would not let Anthony touch her ever again.

Since Bianca was going to spend her nights at the Royal Mansion, she could bring the kids out!

That afternoon, she went to the Royal Mansion and brought the kids to Sarah’s mansion.

She did this for two reasons. Firstly, she did not want the kids to be in contact with Bianca, and secondly, the kids could distract Sarah so that she would not keep thinking about Nigel.

She watched the triplets having fun with their grandmother from afar, then picked up her phone to call Anthony and informed him about the kids’ whereabouts.

“Is this a hit and run?” Anthony’s voice was deep and threatening.

“Didn’t you say that I can decide for the kids? I am only informing you out of respect. I am not disturbing you, am I?” Anne said obnoxiously.

The next morning, Anne entered the office.

She was stunned when she saw the man sitting on the couch but immediately regained herself and strode across indifferently to her table, then sat down in her chair.

She asked, "Coffee or tea?"

Anthony's dark eyes locked onto hers. He thought, what an insincere question.

There was only this one single woman in this world that dared challenge him!

"Where are the kids?"

"They are at my mother's. We shall see how long they would like to stay. I guess there is no need to send them back so soon?" Anne thought, 'Didn't you already know about it? Why would you even need to ask? I bet you already knew about it all along.'

"Don't cross the line."

Anne pursed her lips, and she still did not dare to provoke him too far. She said innocently, "They went out on the ocean and were keen to share their experience with their grandma. I think they will be visiting their grandfather in the afternoon then. How am I crossing a line? Why are you here this early? Did Bianca go back already?"
