Chapter 901

When she arrived at the hospital, Anne got out of the car and ran toward the hospital.

“Hey, you haven’t paid!” The driver ran after her and grabbed her by the arm. “Miss. You’ve forgotten to pay.”

She came to and realized that she had left her phone and purse in the office.

“Say, you can’t possibly be trying to ride for free, right?” The driver questioned while studying the dazed look on her face.

“I’m sorry. I forgot to take my wallet out...”

“What? Seriously? No way. I don’t care. Call your family here to pay. I am not working for free!” The driver refused to let her leave.

“I...I don’t have a family. My parents are both dead...” She muttered with tears in her eyes. “Mister, can you give me your address? I will deliver the money over to you later.”

“Forget it!” The driver left with frustration.

"I've sent the photos to you, but you didn't reply, so I decided to call you."

Anthony did not hang up and opened his screen to open Ivan's message that contained a few photos, captured out of surveillance footage.

Lilian walked into the Authentic Clinic for a facial treatment and went to Bianca's room on her way out.

However, merely the fact that Lilian had made contact with Bianca with no other supporting evidence would be dismissed as visiting a friend by Lilian even if Anthony was to interrogate her.

"Keep an eye on her. Do not let a single movement escape your attention!"

"Yes!"

"Also, this woman is trained in this. Don't let her notice that she is being followed."

Kathryn hurried over to check on Anne and though Anne had lost consciousness, she was not physically harmed in any way.

“She is unstable because she’s pregnant. You need to let her do what she wants,” Kathryn said.

“Let her do what she wants? She wants to get rid of the baby! She wants to leave!” He roared in a dark expression.

The bodyguard had told him that she ran after seeing the triplets.

“Anything but those two things, then. You have to be patient.”

He tensed, because he had been patient and kept his temper at bay, but was that not enough?

Anthony waved his hand in annoyance and Kathryn went outside.

He stared at Anne’s slim face and decided that though he could not accept her leaving or getting rid of the child, he could accept any of her other wishes.

The next morning, Anne woke up early in Anthony’s arms. She got up and tried to get out of bed, when Anthony wrapped his arm around her waist. “Where are you going?”

If Anne wanted to recover, she had to leave Anthony. She could not stay by his side and had his baby.

She was not mentally ill, and she had human rights. All the hurt Anthony caused her began to magnify in her heart, on the verge of exploding...

When Anne walked out of the restaurant, she thought the sunlight was extremely piercing, and she felt very uncomfortable when it shone on her body.

"I want to go back..." Anne turned around and got into the car.

Anthony was afraid she would be in a bad mood, so he compromised and took her back to the mansion.

As soon as Anne got home, she went upstairs. However, just as she stepped on the first step of the stairs, she felt her body lighten and was carried by someone.

Yet, Anne did not react.

Anthony placed her on the bed, saying, "Take a nap. I'll be here with you."

"Get out..." Anne's voice was soft, only loud enough for Anthony to hear it.

His face slightly darkened, but he restrained his emotions and said, "Lie down properly."

"Didn't you say you want to rest? The company will always be there," Anthony said, "the most important thing for you now is to take good care of your body."

"I need to find something to do, or else I'll be overthinking." Anne looked for a reason.

"You'll go in the morning and rest in the afternoon." Anthony compromised.

"Okay," Anne agreed.

As long as she could go out and have personal space, she could think of a way to escape.

There was nothing for her to miss here anymore.

As for the triplets, they were better off with Anthony.

After escaping, she would abort her baby so she did not need to mother Anthony's child.

Anne slept much more peacefully at night with a plan in place.

Before this, she would have nightmares even in her sleep.

Anne had just passed through the square when she turned around and saw the bodyguards running toward her. She was so scared that she ran away immediately.

Anne could not care less if she was dashing through the streets with her high heels on. She only had one thought, to run as fast as she could! The further she ran, the better!

While running, she kept an eye on the cabs on the road, wanting to hail one!

However, there were no available cabs.

Anne was almost hit by a car while rushing down the road.

After Anthony got the news, his face turned livid and threatening, "Hurry!!"

The driver could not step on the gas because the road was full of cars and sidewalks.

When Anthony saw this, he swiftly made a phone call, turning all the traffic lights along the way red. With that, the other vehicles would stop, and his Rolls Royce would be the only car driving fast freely.

Anne finally hailed a cab, and she anxiously asked the driver to drive quickly after getting in.

The bodyguards got into the car and chased after them.

Unexpectedly, all the traffic lights on the road turned red just after they drove for a few minutes and turned into a junction.

The tall buildings on both sides blocked the sun and made her surroundings dark.

There was light ahead as if guiding her that she would be saved as long as she ran into it.

Anne even appeared joyful.

She ran out of the small trail and rushed directly onto the road, completely unrestrained as she crashed into the traffic.

Anne stopped in her tracks. Then, just as she turned to look, she saw a car rushing toward her.

She stared at the car blankly ...perhaps it was too late to show any expression.

Everything was happening in slow motion.

“Anne!” Anthony rushed over as fast as he could, darting into the traffic and approaching her regardless of his own.

Ivan pulled her away, signaling her to leave Anthony alone.

Did she think none of them saw the blood on him?

It was just that no one dared to step forward and say anything.

As Anne was undergoing surgery, Anthony stood outside waiting. Hour after hour had passed, yet Anthony still stood there motionless, not even sitting down.

Suddenly, there was a sound at the door, and it opened.

Anthony's body shook violently, and his voice was so suppressed that it was hoarse. "How is she?"

The nurse became nervous. After all, she was only out to take something. Nonetheless, she still answered, "D- Doctor Brown and the other doctors are still trying their best to rescue her."

"I'm asking you 'how is she!'" Anthony clenched his fists, approaching the nurse.

Ivan hurriedly persuaded, "Mr. Marwood, Ms. Vallois is still undergoing surgery inside..."

Ivan also hinted at the nurse to leave.

As soon as Anthony got out of the car, the three little ones hurriedly surrounded him; standing before his long legs.

“Papa, why are you home at this hour?”

“Papa, did you go on a date with Mama last night?”

“Where’s Mama? We haven’t seen her in so long!”

Before Anthony could answer them, Chris noticed the blood on his hands and asked, “Papa, is that blood on your hands?”

Anthony clenched his fists and said, “No. It’s just paint. Let’s talk about it later. I’m going back to my room.”

Then, he directly left the triplets.

The triplets looked at Anthony’s back, confused.

Why were their Papa’s hands stained with paint?

Was he painting just like them?

Anthony turned on the shower, letting the water wash over his body. The clothes he took off were thrown on the floor next to the shower.

Despite the pressure, Kathryn said, "Mr. Marwood, sure that Ms. Vallois is not waking up because of her brain injury, and her recovery is slower, delaying her from waking up sooner. But I can guarantee that she'll definitely wake up.

"A week, a month, or a year? I can't wait that long," Anthony spoke.

"I don't think it'll take a month," the dean said.

"You think?" Anthony glanced at the dean coldly.

The dean hurriedly lowered his head and said, "Ms. Vallois's injury is not serious. O-Otherwise, I wouldn't be so optimistic. Mr. Marwood, please wait patiently..."

"If I'm not patient, you won't be here anymore." Anthony was indifferent.

The dean broke out in cold sweat.

"Could it be that she doesn't want to wake up? Some people don't have such a strong will to survive, so their recovery will be slower..." The director stopped in mid-sentence when Anthony looked at him.

He did not know what he had said wrong.

Kathryn was really afraid that the director with low EQ would be thrown out of the window of the eighth floor by Anthony, so she chimed in, "Mr. Marwood, Ms. Vallois will wake up. Don't be too anxious. Everything will be fine."
