Chapter 911

"I don't know if she's dead, but something must have happened. Mia said that Anne didn't go home or visit the Royal Mansion. She also added that when she saw Anthony return three days ago, there was blood on his hands!"

"Three days ago? What didn't she say something earlier?"

"I bet she just wanted to find out more before telling us. But Anthony was very tight-lipped about it and didn't disclose anything. Even Fiona didn't know much," Dorothy said.

"Why was there blood on his hands? Was it Anne's?" Bianca guessed, "Something must've happened to her!"

"I thought so too," Dorothy agreed, "that's why I called you to tell you the good news. Maybe we'll hear the news about Anne's death two days later. You should take it easy and don't stress yourself. This is the best time to think about how to coax Anthony."

"Of course, I'm aware of that."

After the call ended, Bianca fell into deep thought.

It was just that she could not say Lilian told her the news.

Bianca hid in the corner and watched Oliver enter the ward from a distance. Ten minutes later, he came out and left.

The bodyguards guarded the door, and it was absolutely impossible to enter without authorization.

However, Bianca believed that Anthony would not stop her. After all, would it not be better for her to stay by his side while Anne was being hospitalized?

Bianca walked to the door and was about to cross the yellow line when the bodyguard stopped her. "You can't go in."

"Don't you know me? I'm Bianca Faye. I'm here to visit Anne. Is Anthony in there too?"

"Sorry, but no one can go in," said the bodyguard.

"Why? It's me, Bianca! Don't you recognize me? If you don't let me in and Anthony finds out, he'll be unhappy," Bianca threatened.

Yet, the bodyguards were unbothered, and they did not speak nor let her touch the door.

Anger gathered in Bianca's heart, but she could only hold it back. "Fine. Just tell Anthony that I'm here. Is that okay?"

Anthony had made the ward his home, and he stayed there every day to handle company affairs.

He would either only go to the company for important business or return to the Royal Mansion to visit the children.

Anthony returned to the Royal Mansion at noon, wanting to have lunch with the triplets, but they were not three.

Hayden said, "They went out to play."

It was no surprise that those two-year-old children went out to play.

Anthony's phone suddenly rang, and it was Ivan.

"Mr. Marwood, the children have come to Ms. Vallois' company. They're making a fuss because they want to find her..."

"Give me back my Mama! Otherwise, I'll get angry!" Charlie's babyish voice sounded domineering.

Anthony hung up the call. It seemed that they could not be coaxed anymore.

Kathryn was still there. She could not help but show a solemn expression when she saw Anthony coming in.

Kathryn had told Anthony everything on the phone, informing him that Anne...had short-term amnesia and did not remember anything.

When Anne saw Anthony, she kept avoiding eye contact with him.

This was understandable, as Anthony's presence was too overpowering.

"Do you know who I am?" Anthony approached Anne and asked.

Anne felt this tall man was oppressive and seemed a bit dangerous.

Then, she turned to look at Kathryn for help.

It was apparent that she did not know who this man was.

Kathryn said, "She doesn't even remember her own name. She had forgotten everything. I took her for a CT scan before you came, and her brain recovered well."

Anthony sat on the edge of the bed, taking a closer look at Anne. Then, he raised her jaw and stared at her. "Do you really don't remember me, or are you still playing tricks on me? Huh?"

"My mom passed away too?"

"Yes."

Anne blinked a few times and bit her lower lip, deep in her thoughts.

Anthony was so moved by her appearance that he wanted to step forward and take a bite. However, he just clenched her little hand tightly to restrain himself.

"T-Then why did you marry me?" Anne was curious.

Just as Anthony was about to answer, the ward door was pushed open with a loud bang.

He could not help frowning when he saw the three little ones jumping in.

When Kathryn heard this, she could not help but feel there was a hidden meaning behind his words. Was he not hoping for Anne to recover her memory?

She came to this judgment after combining Anne's various emotional disorders before the car accident. After all, the amnesiac Anne obviously did not mind Anthony.

"Yes, this is an uncertain factor. There's a possibility that she'll recover her memory at any time, and it's also possible that it'll be long before she remembers anything," Kathryn said truthfully.

Anthony was deep in his thoughts and did not answer her. Soon after, he got up and left.

Before Anne was discharged from the hospital in the afternoon, the three little ones and Anne had lunch in the ward. With their parents with them, they were much happier and ate more:

Anne, who was sitting by the side, peeked at the triplet's chubby and adorable bellies.

"Mama, eat this!" Chloe took a piece of meat, wanting to feed Anne.

Anne was a little embarrassed. However, she still opened her mouth and ate the meat when she noticed the children's expectant gaze.

"Mama, is it yummy?" Chloe wanted feedback.

"Yes. It's yummy."

"Mama, you should eat more. Then, our baby brother will be happy!" Charlie said.

Anthony carried Anne into the car, whereas the three little ones followed behind them and got into the car with the help of the bodyguards.

Soon, several cars drove away from the hospital.

The nurse standing by the corner saw it and called Bianca.

“What? You saw Anne getting into the car? She’s not dead?” Bianca was putting on a facial mask, and she was so angry that she tore off the mask.

“Yes, she’s fine. She was discharged from the hospital, and Mr. Marwood even carried her into the car,” the nurse said.

Bianca bribed the nurse because it was impossible for her to keep watch of the hospital every day to notice any movements.

The news came like a bolt from the blue, and Bianca threw her phone furiously. “Why aren’t you dead?! Why?! Why?!”

Dorothy heard the commotion and ran over, asking, ‘What’s wrong? Is the facial mask not good?’

Bianca was fuming. “Anne was discharged from the hospital...she’s fine now! She was safely discharged from the hospital and carried into the car by Anthony! Was it even a car accident? Anne must be pulling tricks to seduce Anthony! I thought she was really going to die! She’s just making a fool out of me!”

“You’re right. She’s just pretending to be hit by a car. However, she unexpectedly lost her child, shooting herself in the foot,” Dorothy agreed that something was up too.

Anne wanted Anthony to leave, but he was her husband, Yet, if she let him stay, she would feel embarrassed.

She felt embarrassed, as if she was about to undress in front of a stranger...

Anthony noticed that she was afraid, so he walked over. Don’t take a shower. Take a bath instead, okay?”

Anne nodded, staying quiet.

“Are you shy?” Anthony lowered his head and inched closer.

Anne dodged. “A–Are we really married? I’m not really used to this...”

“How do you explain the children?” Anthony stared at her bashful face.

If it were not for fear of scaring her, he would not just talk and not do anything.

Anne knew this truth, the children were the best proof.

However, she still felt awkward.

“Don’t be nervous. You might not be used to it at first, but it’ll be fine after a few more times.” Anthony turned to fill the bathtub with water for her.

"Did we...sleep like that in the past?" She asked softly as she was slightly self-conscious.

"Mm-hmm. Don't be nervous. It'll be fine after a few more nights." Anthony lightly caressed her back with his hand.

He did not make things up this time. They were indeed in this position when they slept together in the past.

It was just that she was forced by him.

As Anne was caressed by Anthony's big palm, she gradually relaxed.

She then felt that the arms, in which she was laying, were like a nest built for her and had given her a great sense of security.

Anne thought of something and touched the gauze on her head. "Will I press against the wound if I fall asleep?"

"No, you won't."

Anne did not know why he was so certain.

Not long after she nestled against the sturdy chest, she could not help but look up at Anthony's face.

Chapter 920

Anthony was slightly dazed as he looked at them.

He walked over, covered Charlie's belly with the towel properly, and sat at the edge of the bed.

He checked out the gauze on Anne's forehead.

He had asked Kathryn in the morning and she said it was fine if she pressed against it when sleeping. The wound was already healed when Anne was in a coma. She could do as she wished as long as it was not hurting her when pressure was applied.

Anne was fast asleep but she suddenly opened her eyes.

She seemed to have sensed someone sitting by the bed but she did not see anybody.

Only the three adorable triplets were sleeping all over the bed.

As Anne looked at their small and chubby cheeks, she could not help but pinch them. They were so tender.
