Chapter 921

“Why didn’t the ball I kicked hit Chris?” Anthony asked.

Charlie looked confused. ‘That’s right. Why didn’t it hit him? Why did it always hit me?’

“Have you seen adults playing soccer on television?” Anthony asked, “There were some soccer players who would use their heads to headbutt the ball and bump the ball back in the end, weren’t there? You’re just too young now. If you’re grown, you could have headbutted the ball back just now.”

Charlie’s big eyes lit up as if he had understood what he heard.

“The way you attacked was correct,” Anthony praised him.

Charlie’s little cheeks instantly reddened.

‘Papa has praised me. What should I do? What should I say?’

“Crying as soon as you fall down is something you need to fix,” Anthony reminded him.

Charlie desperately wanted to make the tears on his face disappear at once.

He said while feeling it was unfair, “I...I won’t cry any more next time...”

Anthony saw that snot had come out of his nose from crying, so he reached out his hand and wiped it clean for him. “You’re so filthy.”

“Oh. Thank you for your efforts,” Anne said after clearing her throat.

“I’m very happy for the trust you put in me, Ms. Vallois,” said Xander.

After that, Anne came in contact with Ken and her assistant, Deirdre Doyle.

She had lost her memory, so she could not recall which person was not right. She just wanted to do her job well after she recovered and live up to her father’s expectations.

She had forgotten her loved ones, but that did not mean she had no idea what her responsibility was.

After they left the company, Anne thought that they would be returning home. She did not expect that they would go to the Archduke Group as well.

Anne was secretly astonished throughout the whole way from the entrance to Anthony’s office.

It was after she entered his office that she said, “Your company is so huge.”

Her company could not compare to the Archduke Group at all.

When Anthony saw her shocked little face, his black eyes trembled slightly and he walked toward her.

His tall figure towered over her and his gaze was almost going to pierce right through her.

What was Bianca?

She also wanted to ask that question.

She was originally the only woman that Anthony cared about. Why was it that everything that belonged to her was transferred to Anne?

She could not figure out what seduction technique Anne had used on Anthony to make him so infatuated with her!

Dorothy asked Mia, “What else? Tell us everything.

“There’s another thing—Ms. Vallois seemed to have lost her memory,” said Mia.

“What? She lost her memory? What melodrama is she putting on?” asked Bianca.

Not only was Anne involved in a car accident, but she even had so many gimmicks

Anne looked at her head closely and all she saw was a piece of square gauze.

In other words, nobody saw her ugly scar when she went out for a spin during the day.

“Are you satisfied?” Anthony hugged her from behind. He wrapped his arms around her tiny waist and stuck himself so close to her that his deep voice could be heard right next to her.

Anne's face flushed a little. "Mm—hmm. The gauze can only be taken away after my hair grows out."

Anthony touched her chin with his long finger and turned her face to one side, so the gauze on her head could not be seen anymore.

Anne's watery eyes met Anthony's deep black eyes, and she could not help but covered a little.

She was completely defenseless when his thin lips landed on her lips.

Her long lashes trembled a little and her eyes were wide open as if she was a frightened butterfly.

She grabbed Anthony's pajamas with both her hands as she wanted to push him away. However, she felt that she should not either, and like an innocent girl, her breath was taken away by the devil.

When she was released, her entire body turned to jelly and she leaned against Anthony's arms.

How could Anthony be satisfied with that brief peck? He turned from being passive to taking charge and his thin lips were almost going to press against hers.

Before their lips touched, he heard someone clawing at the door...

“Papa, Mama! Are you awake? The sun is already up!”

“We want to enter!”

“We brought breakfast!”

It was after Anne was held and kissed a bunch that she managed to get off Anthony’s lap. Her face was completely flushed.

Anthony got off the bed, glanced at her deeply with his black eyes, and he went to open the door.

Once he opened the door, he saw the triplets standing outside the door with their little heads lifted and little mouths wide open like baby birds waiting to be fed.

Chris, especially, was holding a plate with breakfast on it in his hands.

One serving was, of course, not enough, so the rest of the food was on the plate carried by the maid behind him.

Mia kept her head lowered and she did not dare to look at the man in the room.

“Papa, we brought food for you and Mama!” said Chloe.

Anthony had no expression on his face. His emotion did not fluctuate because of such a matter.

He only said, "Continue keeping an eye on her."

"Yes, I've always been keeping an eye on her," said Oliver.

Anne played with the children in the morning and they even asked when she would be going on a date with Anthony. This showed they often went on dates in the past.

It was just that she did not remember anything anymore and had to rely on things that happened around her to try to figure it out and imagine.

Anthony called her at noon to ask if she had lunch and if she was feeling unwell. He said that he would be returning as soon as he finished handling his matters.

In fact, in the first few days, Anne indeed was nervous because she was unfamiliar with this world and she relied on Anthony.

At that moment, it had already been almost more than a week, so she had already gotten used to it and was no longer feeling uneasy anymore.

She also has her three children keeping her accompanied, so she asked Anthony to go on about his business, and there was no need to worry about her.

Anne's face still had a sweet smile after the call ended.

"Perhaps he has put them away," said Anne.

"What put them away? There's no such thing at all. I know it best," said Bianca, "I was the person staying here in the past."

Anne looked at her in surprise and she got even more confused.

"I used to be Anthony's fiancée. Anthony and I had a conflict, and he got pissed off. Therefore, he kept doing some things that I can't understand. Saying that you're Mrs. Marwood, for example. He must be deliberately pissing me off." Bianca looked depressed.

"But I gave birth to his children," Anne defended herself.

"That was an accident. In fact, the source of all the problems was your mother, Sarah. She married Anthony's father, so of course, Anthony hated you. I don't know what happened, but both of you met each other abroad. After you slept with Anthony, you ran away. No one knew that you had given birth to the children at all. Anthony only learned of the existence of the children later. However, we were already engaged at that time..."

Anne did not expect that she would hear such a story.

It was as if she had brought the children over to tear her sister and Anthony's relationship apart.

However, that was not what Anthony said...

"That's right. Have you seen the piano in the Royal Mansion? That's what Anthony bought for me in the past. Let's go. I'll play for you. Perhaps you might recall everything."

"She isn't. The DNA paternity test showed that she and your father are not related by blood. It was all made up by Bianca's mother," said Anthony.

"She's not?"

“You can do a kinship test with her,” said Anthony.

Anne believed what he said. After all, the result of a DNA paternity test could be verified.

However, there was still something that was even more beyond her understanding and was so important to her deep down.

“You said...we’re married, then why haven’t I seen any of our wedding photos?”

“We didn’t have a wedding,” said Anthony.

“Why?”

“Come here.” Anthony did not answer but brought her to the study instead.

He sat on the chair, made Anne sit on his lap, and then turned on the laptop in front of them.

Anne glanced at her and nodded. "It turns out Anthony and I have gotten our marriage certificate. I've seen it myself."

Mia then proceeded to carry out her duties. She took the opportunity to go to the servants' quarters and tipped off Bianca.

Bianca exploded in anger. "He bought that for me! Did he not spare my feelings at all?"

"Also, I asked Mrs. Marwood, and it turns out she and Mr. Marwood have gotten their marriage certificate," said Mia.

"That's impossible!"

"I think Mrs. Marwood would not have said that if it's false," said Mia.

Then...you carried Chloe...I can’t recall what happened after that anymore, but what I said is correct, right?”

The lines of Anthony’s features were not that cold and stiff anymore. “That’s right.”

“I feel I’ll be recovering my memory very soon.” Anne held back her shyness and kissed Anthony on his thin lips.

Anthony felt as if his chest had received a heavy blow, which made his black eyes instantly turn into a daze.

When he regained his senses, Anne was already long gone.

Anthony’s gaze was deep beyond measure. He took out his phone and gave Kathryn a call.

Kathryn said over the phone, “This is a sign of her memory recovering.”

The air around Anthony became eerily cold. Of course, he did not wish for her memory to recover!
