

Predestined 1711

Chapter 1711

For the next few days, Tina lived very peacefully.

No one texted her again, and no one called her.

The number that had contacted her before was still empty. After she made a call a few times and couldn't get through, she stopped calling.

Everything was calm again, but the calm was a little abnormal.

Another very strange thing is that she still can't contact Alyssa, but occasionally she can see Karl's Moments of friends, and they also send Alyssa photos.

Karl was basically a person who did not post in Moments before.

But it may be because of Alyssa's influence, or people who live happily will want to share it with others.

Karl's circle of friends is all related to Grace and Alyssa.

Had it not been for Karl's photo of Alyssa in his circle of friends, she would have even suspected that they had teamed up again to lie to her.

It is a good thing for Alyssa to go on vacation to relax. Although Tina still wants to know what happened at that time, she didn't want to disturb her best friend.

She didn't even think about going to Alyssa to ask about this.

In addition to Alyssa, Grace was also there.

However, Grace is just a child!

Besides, Grace was also a child with a bad experience. If something really happened at that time, she would definitely remember it.

If she asks her again, it might not leave a very good impression of her.

!

It was another day for Grace to leave school.

Tina was already preparing to join the group with all her heart, and she was basically on a half vacation, just a little more leisurely.

She went to pick up Grace from school almost every day.

Today is Friday, and she wants to take Grace to live at home, and then play together on the weekend.

Before going, Tina called Smith to talk about her thoughts.

"You should ask Grace about this matter, and see what she says, and whether she is willing to do it."

Smith is also a father himself and respects the children's wishes very much.

What was the relationship between Tina and Alyssa, Smith also knew very well, Grace followed Tina, he had nothing to worry about, as long as Grace was willing, he had nothing to say.

“OK.”

After communicating with Smith, Tina took the car to pick up Grace.

Grace flew towards Tina.

“Auntie!”

Like a bird with a broken cage.

“This is for you.” Grace handed a small handmade flower to Tina.

“You did it yourself?” Tina asked.

Seeing Grace nodded, Tina couldn’t help but reach out and touch her little head: “Thank you, let’s go.”

After getting in the car, Tina said to the driver, “Go to Best Day.”

A few days ago, she took Grace to eat at another restaurant, so let’s go to Best Day to eat today.

Grace had no objection to these arrangements.

Tina lifted her small schoolbag: “Why is it so heavy?”

“Because there are books inside,” Grace said, unzipping and showing it to her.

Tina looked inside and found that there were indeed many books inside.

“Why have you brought so many, you have finished reading?”

“Well, these books were lent to classmates, and they just returned them to me today.”

“Then buy some more copies.”

At this moment, the car happened to pass a bookstore.

The car stopped, and Tina got out of the car, only to find that this bookstore was the one near Best Day.

This is somewhat clever.

“Let’s go.” Tina went to hold Grace’s hand, and when she walked forward, she found that Grace did not follow.

When she turned her head, she saw Grace grabbing her hem with one hand, and whispered: “It doesn’t matter if you don’t buy it, there are still at home.”

Tina smiled and said, “There could be new stock, let’s check.”

Chapter 1712

Grace couldn’t think of rejection, so she had to follow Tina.

It’s just that the expression is a bit reluctant.

Although Grace was smart, she was the only best among her peers. Tina was an adult who had lived for almost 30 years, so how could she fail to see what a child was thinking.

After walking a few steps further, Tina walked and observed Grace's expression, and found that the expression was very solemn, her small mouth was tightly pursed, her brows slightly frowned, and the whole person looked very serious.

When approaching the door, Grace still looked around nervously, looking a little uneasy.

"Grace," Tina called her.

"Huh?" Grace looked up, the expression on her face was still a little flustered.

"What's the matter? Why don't you want to go to this bookstore so much?"

Tina squatted down, her eyes were level with Grace, her voice was gentle, and she fixedly looked at Grace's eyes.

Grace bit her lip and clenched her hands tightly together: "It's you! you were injured here last time, I don't want to go there again."

Her voice was small and uneasy, but the meaning expressed was very clear.

Tina was stunned for a moment: "It's okay, I'm fine again, it's just an accident, it's like you would fall down in your yard, it's just an accident, so you still play in your yard every day. Right?"

Grace nodded first, then shook her head suddenly: "It's different."

"It's the same," Tina said.

Grace didn't speak anymore, so she lowered her eyes slightly, looking pitiful.

Tina couldn't bear to see her like this, and said, "Okay, let's not go inside, let's go eat directly."

It seems that it was the last time she was injured here that left a shadow on Grace.

Grace was five years old, but she had already remembered things and understood many others.

If she wanted to ask, could she get something out of Grace?

However, Tina still couldn't open the mouth, and finally didn't ask anything.

!

After taking Grace to dinner, Tina said that she wanted Grace to play at her house.

Grace got close to her and nodded in agreement.

When Stephanie came home at night, she screamed loudly when she saw Grace sitting on the sofa in the living room putting together building blocks.

"what--"

Grace covered her ears, and when Stephanie calmed down, she said old-fashioned: "Aunt Grant, calm down."

“Grace, are you going to sleep at Ms. Tina’s house tonight?” Stephanie ran to Grace, staring at her as if her eyes were stuck to Grace.

Grace silently moved aside: “Yes.”

“thatâ€¦!”

When Stephanie spoke, she was interrupted mercilessly by Grace: “I will sleep with Auntie.”

“thatâ€¦!”

“You go take a shower.”

Tina just went into the house to find Grace a small blanket, and when she came out, she heard their conversation.

“Hurry up and take a bath. Come and finish with Grace after washing.” Tina knew that Stephanie also liked Grace and urged her to take a bath first.

Tina sat down in front of Grace and accompany her to puzzle together.

Working hard, Grace suddenly looked up: “Does Aunt Grant have a boyfriend?”

Tina thought for a moment. Although Tom and Stephanie haven’t said it clearly yet, with Stephanie’s IQ, they definitely can’t run away. In the end, they will fall on Tom’s mobile phone.

So she said, “I think she has.”

Grace sighed, “In other words, only one person is still single.”