

62: Crew

All eyes were on Luna and Selene as they walked down the stairs looking like a dream come true. My heart soared in my chest with feelings I can't place. I can't believe these amazing gorgeous ladies were mine.

"I know right." Nash growled possessively inside my head making me grin wolfishly.

"Can you help me thank the Moon Goddess while you are at it?" I said to him, pleased to no end.

"Why, I have done so." He patted my back like the old grandpa he is.

Nick was the first to snap his attention back to me as if asking whether I could see the change between them. Adrian is still asleep which is why he isn't in either of their arms making this look all the more incredible to me.

Luna exuded strength, her grip firm as she walked hand-in-hand with Selene, the journey towards the dining table deliberate and graceful. While Luna appeared composed, Selene's cheeks flushed with a crimson hue under the intensifying attention.

Even Lilith, usually in a hurry, slowed her pace to take in the captivating moment. Her hand hovered around her toast and the other held her mug with the curiosity of a seventeen year old.

I didn't acknowledge Nick or Daniel as their attention turned to me with the: "what the hell is going on here, Crew?" and focus on my mates. We are finally letting them know about the bond we share after keeping it to ourselves for days.

The sanctuary of our solitude became a haven, a realm where the delicate threads of connection between us could unfurl without the interference of the outside world. In those precious moments, time seemed to stand still, allowing us the luxury to explore the depths of each other's souls.

It was an intimate journey, a dance of understanding that surpassed the boundaries of words. We delved into the intricacies of our hearts, untangling the intricacies that had remained obscured. The air, heavy with the fragrance of shared vulnerability, became a canvas upon which we painted our affections.

Awkwardness, once a subtle barrier, dissolved like mist in the warmth of our shared moments. With every shared gaze, every tender touch, the unspoken tension melted away, leaving only the unfiltered beauty of our connection.

Most tenderly, we addressed Selene's insecurities, each whispering reassurance an elixir to heal the wounds she carried. It was a collective effort, an unwavering commitment to fostering a love that transcended doubts and fears.

In the embrace of our intimate cocoon, we found solace in the knowledge that our bond was unbreakable. Alone with my mates, free from the echoing demands of the pack, I reveled in the uninterrupted connection we shared.

The troubles that often clung to my shoulders like a burden were momentarily forgotten, and all that remained was the pure, unadulterated joy of being entwined with the ones who held the key to my heart. My entire being.

It was a symphony of love, an ode to the sacred moments we carved out for ourselves in the sanctuary of our shared solitude. A smile danced across my lips in pride.

I don't know when things had escalated with Selene but I have always loved her right from the beginning. The mating bond hadn't snapped into place then but I knew there was something deep between us which was why I had given her space.

The duo finally reached the table and sat down to my right, their hands still clasped together. Selene's head was bowed as she tried to tuck a strand of hair but it was in a braid so she couldn't do that. She is so adorable my chest hurts.

I was too busy staring at them to notice the pin drop silence in the room and the attention currently dancing around me. Every single one of them is watching me but I wasn't going to shy away from what I was doing. Admiring my mates which I am allowed to.

"Uh, what is going on?" Lilith asked with wide eyes only for Nick to send her a sideways glance that had her shutting up and straightening. Interesting.

Wait, when did they start sitting like that? Nick and Daniel were always sitting together so how on earth did Lilith get closer to Nick and Daniel by her other side?

"Hey, Crew, mind shedding some light on this spectacle? What on earth is happening?" Nick's voice cut through the charged atmosphere as Luna and Selene joined us at the dining table.

"Looks like you have got some explaining to do, guys." Daniel chimed in, eyeing Luna and Selene with a mix of confusion and curiosity.

I grinned, acknowledging their perplexity. "Sit tight, fellas. There's a lot you're about to learn."

Luna and Selene also straightened on their seats but their hands were still entertained and I wish I could join that little bonding. They exchanged subtle glances before Luna spoke up, "We're not your typical trio, but we're about to make some history."

Nash's low growl echoed in my mind. "This is going to be interesting. That is the fg truth too. Not a regular trio."

As I began unfolding the tale of our shared bond, the room was enveloped in a hush, broken only by the occasional gasps and exchanged glances among Nick and Daniel. Lilith is raptly watching me, her food and school probably long forgotten.

The revelation of Luna, Selene, and me being mates echoed through the room, leaving an indelible mark on the faces of them. I can't wait to see the expression on the Moonlit Council members' faces after they find out that the woman they weren't so keen on accepting is actually going to be their Queen.

The savage woman that never hesitates to keep them in check so they don't cross the line. I don't think they are going to love this, which is all the more reason why I can't wait to let them know.

Luna interjected with a gentle smile filled with love and emotions. "Love can be unconventional, but it's the strongest force that binds us."

Selene's eyes met mine, her gaze reflecting the journey we had traversed together. "We found something extraordinary in each other, and we're not letting it go."

They absorbed the news, their initial shock giving way to a mixture of understanding and acceptance. It was a revelation that transcended the norms of werewolf lore, and as the reality sank in.

The once-charged atmosphere transformed into one of celebration and camaraderie, marking the beginning of a new chapter in the kingdom's history. I hope the pack members are going to understand this just as my friends did not that they have any other choice.

"No way!" Daniel said after I told him Selene was actually a Lycan.

"Wait, you are telling me Selene is also a Lycan?" Nick asked with wide eyes staring between Selene and me like he is looking for similarities between us.

"I knew that." Lilith grinned as she clapped her hands, joy shining in them. I'm sure she is just too happy for us.

"How do you know that?" Nick snapped, he looked close to snarling but he reigned it in. What is up with this guy?

"When I first met her, I was in my lycan form during the full moon." Selene said before Lilith could talk not that she was going to answer with the way Nick had snapped at her.

"Now you won't be feeling special." Daniel laughed but I joined him because I never felt special for being the only Lycan King, only privileged.

We told them everything that had happened related to Adrian too and they all listened attentively. Lilith agreed to be late to school just to listen to what had transpired behind their backs.

"I don't think it is a good idea to let the Moonlit Council members know that Selene is Lycan just yet. Those vultures cannot be trusted." Nick said, leaning back on his chair with a contemplative look on his face.

"I agree. They are growing more and more scary by the day. We need to tackle them as soon as possible before they do something we cannot control." Daniel agreed, waving at Lilith who had finally left the table for school.

"Can't you sack all of them or something? I'm tired of us walking on thin ice because of some oldies." Luna said with a roll of her eyes then served Selene steak knowing it was her favorite.

"I never liked them even for a second." Selene frowned then sent Luna a shy smile as she added spice to her steak.

If it were possible, my heart would have expanded and burst in my chest right that moment. I couldn't ask for anything more than this.
