

63: Third Person

As she walked into the woods, she smiled a vicious smile at the thought of all she had heard that day. She knows just the right thing to do to get information from those that think they were above everyone else.

She is going to tell that member of the Moonlit Council and Shark who has been waiting to hear some news from the penthouse. Nothing has really been happening for days though after Adrian was found, she knew something was up with them.

So the three of them are now mates, Adrian has special powers and Selene is a lycan. They have been hiding something this crucial and she didn't know anything about it. Well, she does now and they will act on it as soon as possible.

It wasn't the Moon Goddess that took Adrian at first. It was the Moonlit Council members they were working with (James) who took him away with plans to kidnap him and make Crew succumb to their wishes but things didn't work as planned.

Even the Moon Goddess is trying to take care of the child because she has given him powers. That won't stop them from taking him when the time fits though. They are just waiting for the right time to strike which will be very soon before it's too late.

She is going to tell James that Crew is planning to do something goddamn awful to the council members. Maybe sack them like it has been advised as if she wasn't part of the people talking about hating them. Perks of being an undercover villain.

She is known as Villa to Shark and James because they all wanted to hide their names. They don't know who she really is and she closes her face everytime she goes to see them after that first time though she wore makeup then.

Villa strolled into the dimly lit woods, her steps exuding a malevolent confidence. A wicked smile played on her lips as she ruminated on the valuable information she had acquired earlier.

The secrets of the penthouse were now at her disposal, and she relished the power it afforded her. With a calculated stride, Villa approached the designated meeting spot where Shark, the vengeful antagonist thirsting for revenge against Crew, eagerly awaited news.

Alongside him stood James, a Moonlit Council member harboring ambitions for greater authority in the kingdom. They were sitting inside the cozy home that no one could find if they didn't know it existed. Just outside the border but where no one could see at the same time.

Villa smirked behind her mask as she approached.

"Gentlemen, the time has come. The secrets they've hidden are darker than we could have imagined but good for us."

"Tell me everything, Villa. I've been waiting for this." Shark leaned in, his eyes sharp and ablaze with the need to revenge.

Ads-free >

She glanced at James with her malicious eyes.

"Adrian, Crew, and Selene. They're mates, and the kid's got powers. They've been hiding it, and we didn't even know."

"Powers? What kind of powers?" Shark abruptly leapt from the couch and growled low.

She stared at him for a second seeing at that moment that he is really a handsome fella with a bad past. With his dark blonde hair and almost innocent blue eyes, he is a sight for sore eyes. Standing six feet something, broad shoulders and beautiful tanned skin.

"That's not all. The Moonlit Council members planned to use Adrian as leverage against Crew, but their scheme went south. The Moon Goddess herself is involved now, protecting the child." Villa's eyes narrowed at that too.

"The Moonlit Council? How did they get involved? I don't know anything about that." James said, confusion and anger all in one.

Villa gave a sky grin they couldn't see. "Not the Moon Goddess, but their own council member, Lucas, took Adrian initially. They aimed to manipulate Crew, but it backfired."

Shark's fists both clench angrily. "So, what's Crew planning?"

Villa lowered her voice as though she was conspiring. "He's planning something big against the council members. Word is he might sack them. A move that's been whispered about, even by those who pretend to support the council."

James is feigning surprise now, he knew Crew hated them lately. "Sack us? This is preposterous!"

"Well, that's what's going around. Thought you should know, James since it is gonna affect y'all." Villa shrugged her shoulders.

Shark was grinning maliciously when he said. "This changes everything. Crew won't see it coming."

"Exactly. We strike when the time is right, before Crew makes his move. Now he is in bliss of having two mates?" She said though she could feel the aftermath of her o*m.

The trio exchanged glances, the intensity of their shared hatred for Crew binding them together in a sinister alliance. The revelation of the penthouse's secrets had ignited a spark, setting in motion a plan that promised chaos and retribution.

Villa's eyes gleamed with malicious satisfaction as she continued to unravel the intricate web of deceit that enshrouded the penthouse. Her role as an undercover villain provided her with an advantageous position, allowing her to manipulate the dynamics of power within the kingdom.

"Crew and his little family think they can play saviors, but we'll expose their vulnerabilities and tear them apart." She added.

Shark nodded twice. "Tell me more about these powers Adrian has. If we can control that, we control Crew. Or maybe use the child for powers too."

"The Moon Goddess herself has bestowed powers upon the child. Something extraordinary. We can use it against them, but we need to act swiftly." Said Villa.

James, calculating as ever, is only thinking about himself. "The Moonlit Council must regain control. If Crew takes drastic measures, we'll lose our influence."

"And lose we shall not. I have a plan. We'll exploit the brewing tensions within the council, manipulate their fears, and turn them against Crew. That should shake him a bit and distract him." She said, pleased with her idea.

"Let them believe they're sacking them. We'll make our move before they realize the truth." Shark sat back down on the couch with a grin.

James stroked his chin. "Clever, Villa. It's time we tip the scales in our favor."

"But remember, this information is a double-edged sword. We need to play our cards right and strike when Crew is at his most vulnerable. That time isn't now." She added as she turned to leave.

The trio huddled in the shadows, their alliance forged in the fires of shared animosity. The prospect of bringing down Crew and his formidable family fueled their determination. Villa, Shark, and James, united by a common vendetta, plotted in the darkness, their whispered conspiracies weaving a tapestry of impending chaos.

"When the Moonlit Council regains control and Adrian's powers are in our hands, Crew will fall, and our reign shall begin." Villa whispered at last.

She intentionally didn't tell them about Selene being a Lycan. That is her information to keep for now. The malevolent trio dispersed into the night, each with a role to play in the impending upheaval. The woods echoed with the sinister laughter of those who revealed in the impending downfall of their common foe.

The stage was set, and the pawns were in motion, their destinies entwined in a dance of deceit and retribution.

Author AR

"

y'all are not commenting sad with tears in my eyes and it is not motivating at all. can you pleaseeee let me know what you think? thanksss. and yep, the #Vote# too :)

"

