

PRETENDING TO BE POOR

Chapter 16

Ursula didn't mind if she was too straightforward or vicious.

Rachel looked down at the printed documents and wanted to throw them on Ursula's face and grab her head to scratch her.

Rachel held back the urge. She could vent her anger but she would also suffer afterward if she fought with Ursula.

Rachel sneered and said, "Ursula, look at you, you're jealous and afraid of me."

Ursula smiled in disbelief, "I am jealous and afraid of you? Hahaha... Why should I? Who are you? Are you a goddess? I'm better than you. It is you who are jealous and afraid of me!"

Ursula was emotional now, which was just what Rachel hoped for.

And Rachel was less angry now.

She smiled faintly and shook her head because Ursula was irritated.

Rachel left with the documents. It's a waste of her time talking with someone like Ursula.

They were not in the same league and Rachel didn't need to argue with her.

Ursula was angrier when she was ignored. She shouted at Rachel's back, "Rachel, why do you shake your head. What do you mean? Tell me you are jealous and afraid of me."

As Ursula was shouting, Rachel went back to her seat, put on her headphones and continued to work.

But shouting in the company wouldn't help, so Ursula decided to find someone to help her retaliate against Rachel.

Vincent could only push Rachel around, but Ursula's uncle could fire Rachel.

Ursula went upstairs to the vice president's office. She implored Charles, looking aggrieved.

"Uncle, help me. Fire Rachel! She should not be in this company."

Charles doted on his niece and felt bad to see that she was so aggrieved.

"Ursula, don't be angry. Did Rachel pick on you?"

"As you can see, she was rude last night. And she messed around with me today. I will always be in a foul mood if she stays here. I feel uncomfortable when I see her. And Vincent liked her at school."

"Really? But it's all over. Vincent doesn't dare to betray you. I am the vice president, but I cannot interfere in the work of the personnel department. I have no right to fire Rachel.

"Can't you find an excuse? She is on probation and it's no big deal to fire her."

"Then... Let her fail the probation and then she has to leave."

"But she will stay for another two months."

"It's not long. Just bear with it."

Ursula pouted sullenly and was not satisfied that Rachel would not be fired at once. But she was glad that she could make things difficult for Rachel in the two months and then fire her.

Rachel had no idea of Ursula's thoughts.

After work, Rachel could finally get a break. She immediately went home to cook dinner.

In the evening, she sat with Shawn on the sofa and watched Shawn's favorite financial news after dinner.

Rachel was used to his hobby. She didn't know what he was thinking or if he could understand the news.

She wouldn't ask him.

Rachel's phone suddenly rang. It was from Vincent

She was not in good mood when she answered the call in front of Shawn.

"What's the matter?"

"Rachel, this is Vincent. I am sorry that you are so tired and busy today, but I can't help you. Really. I am angry..."

Rachel frowned and listened to him in confusion.

Vincent started to express his thoughts,

"I'm angry that you defended your husband. Rachel, why did you get married so early? Does he deserve you? If you wait for me, I'll let you live a better life.

Rachel felt angry and disgusted.

"Shut up! Vincent, who are you? Don't disgust me!

"Rachel, I am serious. I like you all the time. Don't you know?"

"Like me?" Rachel sneered

Shawn squinted and looked over.

Rachel scolded Vincent angrily, "Vincent, you are engaged. Don't tell me that you forget you're getting married with Ursula in a month. What do you mean to say it?"

"I don't love Ursula, but I can get promoted with the help of her family. Rachel, if you divorce and stay with me, I will take good care of you. At least you will be happier with me than with that guy."
