Serena Lancaster

Jun filled me in on the tribunal's decision the night before. I made him promise to call me if he was almost home so I could meet him out front.

I was beginning to regret that decision the moment my phone rang at five in the morning.

"What?" I hurriedly grumbled, crankiness and sleepiness dripping from my voice.

"Well good morning to you too. I just wanted to tell you that your mate is almost home. I'm an hour away." Jun's deep, husky voice chuckled.

"Mm." I grunted, switching on a lamp. I was definitely not a morning person and Jun knew it. Why the hell did he choose to announce his presence at this ungodly hour? Yeah so what if I missed him and that my soul ached for us to be together again? I wanted to sleep.

Grrr...

I knew I wouldn't be able to go back to dreamland, so I decided to prepare for the day. To make myself up, I took a cold shower that's instantly regretted the moment the stinging droplets hit my body. I bundled myself up in a warm blue wool sweater and jeans, yawning every now and then.

When I exited the room, I saw that the castle was still empty there were a few no members getting ready to start their day. I walked my way to the kitchen and prepared a thermos of hot steaming milk for Jun—if he had been driving all night then he needed to sleep. I decided to wait for him outside and maybe glimpse the sunrise while I did.

I sat down on the cold stone steps as I faced the driveway, waiting for the moment when the green wood swing open and I'm reunited with my mate. It's been a few days since I've seen him in the castle. The sky was getting beautifully dark, and I felt my tired eyes start to droop.

I wonder if Jun has been able to do some thinking during this time. Maybe he's come to a decision about us? Maybe he's realized that I wouldn't be right to walk all of that up but kind everything under the sun? If he was over. But I was surprised at myself that I didn't prioritize whether he loved me or not, so long as he was well, healthy, and back in my arms.

The sound of tires against the rough stony driveway shook me out of my thoughts. I stood up, smiling excitedly as I put the thermos down on the steps. It felt like everything was in slow motion as the Rover parked and the engine turned in. The door opened and my breath caught as I saw Alpha Jun step out. He stepped out of the car, looking very tired attractive as the first time I saw him.

Sure, the longing was no much to bear.

I stood down the steps, not caring that I bumped the odd or that the two representatives from the tribunal were in the car with him. But my mate's arms that Eva has widened into life-size-sighting arm. Rover Jun gracefully, I threw myself in his arms and held him tight, burying my legs around his waist as he held on to me with one arm.

There were people actually looking at us, but I didn't care. My lips sought his and we kissed fervently as if we had been apart for more than an eternity. He bore the kiss and chuckled, pulling my head back.

"I sure was missed." He murmured, smiling against my skin. He was still dirty, and I was not ashamed to say that I could smell him from the other carriage by his, I reached for the thermos and handed it to Jun. He eagerly drank before coughing.

"Milk?" he asked, horrified.

"To help you sleep." I clarified. He rolled his eyes and gave me a kiss on the cheek, tearing his milk moustache on me.

Someone cleared his throat and I frowned at the interruption. I looked to the lit- and saw a tall, bespectacled middle-aged Asian man with a goatee. I recognized him as Yuri. That was odd—werewolves didn't mind glasses, unless they had been badly injured by silver.

Silver was our weakness, and it usually took out our healing ability. Yuri's face paralyzing our whole body and eventually killing us. Whoever this man was, he was lucky to be alive and moving.

"Sonny, I murmured. I made to detach myself from Jun but he held on to me tighter.

"Serena, these are the representatives from the tribunal. Dr. Jun Kazumi and Captain Kunal Kale." Jun said, still not putting me down. I narrowed my eyes at him. This wasn't an appropriate way to meet these people.

"It's nice to meet you, Princess." I glared to the lit- and saw a tall, very attractive woman carrying a large gray scallywag. She ran was a blindfully dark like the color of ember. Her long hair had a leopard print to it, and her eyes were a bright green. She was wearing a tight-fitting dark-colored vest dress that accentuated her perfectly thin body. She sported a silver bracelet. My jaw slackened.

She was the hot Asian gorgeous woman I've ever seen.

And she was in the car with my mate for more than five hours?

Unashamedly, I pressed myself even closer to Jun before nodding to acknowledge Yuri.

"It's nice to meet you both. I apologize for my current state, my mate has decided to treat me like a five-year-old." I grunt reluctantly said. "I look forward to having both of you in the palace."

"Dylan here will show you to your rooms, and she King has to granted you an audience at three in the afternoon so that leaves you time to get rested. If you'll excuse me, I have to discuss a few things with Alpha my mate." Jun dismissively said, nodding at one of the male six members, whose name was Dylan, I assumed.

Jun carried me inside the palace and straight to our room, ignoring the questioning people there at us. I burned my face in his neck, embarrassed. I'm sure that I'm not the only one who has ever been in my lips to the mark I had given him, causing him to growl lowly.

"Can't you wait until we're in the room?" Jun grunted.

"Can you?" I shot back.

"Cheeky. You have to be sensible one this time." Jun whispered. He pushed open the door to our room and threw his kit bag onto the floor. He threw me on the bed, making sure I landed gently so I bounced from the impact.

He shrugged it. his jacket and took o. his shirt, his hand turned bone making my mouth dry. I closed my mouth. I needed to sleep, not further entrance himself!

"Hey, enjoy the view!" Jun said, not like I laughed as he removed his pants, leaving only his plain black boxers. He grabbed a pair or sweatpants from his closet and hung it over the headboard.

"I'll sleep after I've had my meals." He growled, grabbing me so that I was perched on top of him in bed. He wasted no time in leaving his warm hands all over my body, his fingers practically leaving the clothes o. my body. Not my blood heat up in a second.

This was all. Arent from the other times he had sex with me. I felt his hands on my body, and I felt like I was on fire. I moaned as he pushed his fingers deep and he rocking with me in my body. He was so hard, so he was so hot, dominating me as his knees looked possession and frustration.

Jun was getting rough. This was so hot.

I decided to put be my mate have me. The she outfit I now no longer wanted. I pushed myself up and off his lap, ignoring the pain are scratching. All the blood in an emerged in the progress. Captain Kunal's Eva.

She was the most sexually confident girl I had ever met. Alpha Jun's blood in me in which meant that my well was just short are begging me to practically lick me was head to toe.

Wouldn't Jun just love that?

As Jun claimed me, I felt Jay singing in my heart. My mate. Boredom. Jonathon Lancaster, the man who always put Jay before self, was letting his desires take center stage and it was nowhere was the object of that desires.

At his arms, I felt like the most beautiful woman in the world. And I was the most confident I'd ever been in my life. I knew that this was what the world—confidence.

Jun lay sleeping in bed, his loud snores evidence of his exhaustion. I was curled up next to him, my arms protectively thrown over him. My fingers absentmindedly traced comforting patterns on his chest, lightly, scattered a. our. His neck to chest, following the hairy trail.

I gently detached myself from him. It took some a lot to do it without waking him, but I managed to slip out of bed with the minimum of creaking from it. Then, I got out of the bed and washed myself up in the bathroom. I put on my clothes and brushed my hair in a plait.

I padded through the room, grabbing Jun's suitcase with the intention of unpacking his things. I immediately moved to his dirty clothes into the laundry bin. The thick stack of papers I found I placed to the one table in our study—I'd go through them later. I put the phone on the bedside table, turning it all alarms.

Suddenly, I spattered something with. I picked it up and turned it over, gasping slightly as I put my palm above my mouth.

It was a picture of me.

It was that picture he had taken during that fire weekend we spent together, when we were at the hospital table and I was talking to Eva. All about Instagram. I remembered it clearly and it seemed like such a lifetime ago. The girl in the picture knew nothing about Jun, Jay, Eva, shy around her mate and didn't really know a lot of things about the world.

Now? She was considering leading a small group to smuggle females out of the North.

I held the picture close to my heart—I couldn't believe Jun had this printed out and he brought it with him to the tribunal. My eyes brimmed with tears and I hastily wiped them away. I placed the picture back in his bag and put it away.

Shaking myself, I took the paperwork and sat by the chaise beside the window. It was the minutes of the tribunal. That all. Jun had already told me about, so I sat through the other paperwork. Finally, something caught my eye the terms of boxer! Yang's jurisdiction over River Lycan.

Wait, what?

Jun never told me that he had given Desert Fang rule over the river. That river was vital to Patrick's mission to defeat Jay. Without the Alpha's lightning, All the plans being made were essential to that river remaining relatively ungoverned. I walked over to the study and grabbed a map of the territories.

I suppose there were smaller and rivers connected to the big waterway, but it was not much of a problem—and if there were problems, I was sure Jun would have told me. I sighed, relieved and sat down with the signs with Patrick, and how would he Prince possibly explain the presence of a rogue south of the border without annoying pawns and fleece?

Why did Jun give him this?

I walked to Rogue Core Number. Patrick stands out the to let Scarlette Cave and bring the delicious down to the beach port where they could take a boat to Lightning. That route would take them longer, and who knows what they'll encounter in a land-based journey? The whole river-bound journey was rooted to the fact that the pawns would help mask their scent!

Frustrated, I tossed my head on the table and banged it repeatedly yet gently.

"What's all this?"

"I...maybe I can wait until Patrick gets back safely? I don't...I'm sure Alpha Jason will try and thwart that, if it, held enough. Working with him without the it formal being on his side. Sjin! Jon let out a ragged breath.

I looked to my lips. "Then I guess it's up to Patrick to do this well. Two hands are tied, Jon. I know you like being in control but you're gonna have to trust your brother completely on this one." I said.

"I'm messing up our timeline. Before the turnover is complete."

"Jon, are you serious? That's going to prevent more problematic figure Byron hasn't finished shipping the pipes to the defective beyond the border and there are millions..." I rambled, but Jon cut me o.

"I know, Serena!" He snapped. I flushed at his tone, and he immediately gave an apologetic look. "I'm sorry, I just...this has been occupying my mind for the past twenty-four hours. Can we talk about something else?"

Oh no.

I realized how much of a horrible mate I was being. He had just gotten back from a very grueling trip and already I was harping at him about something that he was almost helpless to stop. He was barely rested. He didn't need this right now.

I stopped forward and pressed myself against him, wrapping my arms around his middle. He sighed and kissed the top of my head, pulling his hands around me. My ear was pressed up right against his heart and I could hear it beating resolutely. It was strong, and reassuring. Much like Jun.

"I'm sorry. I'm so sorry, Jon. I didn't mean to nag." I mumbled into his shirt.

"You meant well." Jun sighed.

I tugged on his hand and pulled him into the couch, climbing onto his lap so that I could look him. I began to kiss the mark I gave him, trailing up to his cheeks, jaws, and finally, I claimed his lips gently.

They should apologize more o.." He mumbled, smiling against my mouth.

I stared back and smirked at him. Working. I hopped o. the couch before he could grab at me.

"Hey you're not done apologizing!" Jay growled.

"We need to eat." I set the tea-bread up and caught Jay in the waist. He stung me over his shoulders like a sweeter. I laughed. I wasn't nervous or scared like I was when he first carried carrying me back. I was comfortable. Safe. Loved. I was comfortable with him. I was happy with him. I was comfortable. I was relatively comfortable. I was upside down with a great view of his behind, so my hair hanging and blood rushing to my head.

That was down, said I smiled, pounding on his back. He didn't seem to feel it as he just laughed. He dropped me on the bed and attacked his mouth, checking me less.

"It seems you're right." He murmured. "Come, let's have lunch."

Jun pulled me to my feet, making sure to keep his hands on my body. He was so touchy-feely today, but I didn't mind. I was happy that he did. I wondered what was wrong, but I let him continue with his ministrations. He raised my sweater so that it was bunched up right under my breasts.

I looked at him, confused. From the way he was looking at me, I knew his intention was not to ensure me. He stopped and swallowed, growled. I looked down and saw what he was staring at. I took a deep breath.

There were bruises from when we made love earlier. Because I was a werewolf, they were already a dark purple and not necessarily bad by the next day. They were in the shape of his fingers. I had gotten bruises from our tumbles before, but he was significantly rougher on me earlier.

Not that I was complaining.

I tugged my shirt down and pulled Jun up.

"Jon, it's okay. It happens." I shrugged, taking his hands in mine and feathering kisses all over them. He immediately snatched them away.

"I hurt you." He growled, attempting. That was his outfit taking. It was angry that harm had been caused to his mate.

"You didn't hurt me, Jon."

"I did, look at my bruises! No one can hurt you, not even me! I'm so sorry, Serena, I promise to be gentler next time! I won't do it again." He hurriedly said, pulling me closer to him.

"Really? Jay, hearing you would." I sighed, rolling my eyes. He looked at me curiously. I seethed playfully at him.

"Jon, please don't worry about it. I promise, if I ever feel like I'm in pain, I'll tell you. Okay?" I said.

He sighed dejectedly, pouting.

"Alright." He muttered, sorrow still roaming his beautiful face. I gave him a peck on the lips and he instinctively tightened up.

"Now, sorry, it's time to eat." I happily said.

Guys, I'm way behind schedule writing the last 5 chapters of this book, so y'all need to pump me up! I have a play opening tomorrow (yes, I'm a professional writer) so I'm gonna be pretty busy the next few days. I won't be able to respond to your comments as quickly but rest assured I read all of them and I will reply in time.

What do you think? Is our boy Patrick up to the challenge?
