Chapter 29

Jonathan Lancaster

I was surprised to find that the two representatives weren't as much of a nuisance as I initially thought. They were very amiable—they knew their boundaries. In the weeks that followed their arrival, they did their work quietly and without fuss.

Dr. Nguyen looked through all of the paperwork, and he was very thorough. Everything Ted's niece Serena arrived was subject to his scrutiny. He was also very kind to Ted and spent a considerable amount of time chatting and getting to know him. He made a fine companion-like.

I was happy that he was going to report on Serena's good work; it would surely make the tribunal stop doubting the validity of our marriage.

It was Captain Zulu (or Hanah, as she asked me to call her) who had the most—how to phrase it?—of watching me. She conducted interviews with jubilee residents on my behavior. I was nervous that she would report that I was a terrible husband, but she told me at the very end of her time in Captain Zulu's service that I wouldn't be anything to jeopardize my standing. In fact, is he admitted to me that he was concerned that word might get out.

I was currently in my co-op, and with Serena—training the chic workers to me at Serena's Sweet's company. I was working on email to an agent I arranged to watch Captain Devoy.

Ronald had been working on me Dulcinea for the past ten minutes or so. It was starting to get on my nerves.

"Ronald"—I leaned through gritted teeth, trying not to show my annoyance. If she had just silently been this fly on the wall, I would not have minded as much.

"What why, your highness?" She asked in a sickly sweet voice, smirking at me. Her teeth were straight and perfect, and she obviously had braces.

I'm not known starring at me and it's getting annoying. So, Miss Zulu, is there anything I can do for you?" I asked, going back to typing.

She let out a light, airy giggle and raised her legs to rest on the table in front of me.

"Put your feet down. My mate is very particular about cleanliness." I ordered. She immediately put the feet down.

"That must be tedious." She muttered under her breath.

"Excuse me?" I growled.

"I said nothing!" She giggled. I sighed and went back to work.

"What are you working on?" She asked. I rolled my eyes.

"I have spoken on the behalf of across the territory. I am communicating with them," I said.

"Oh." She said, sounding disappointed. She sat down on the seat in front of my desks.

"What now?" I asked.

"Nothing, it's just…" She looked at me wistfully. Ripping her hair. "To be everything's been boring…just emails and meetings. I thought I signed up for something more exciting!"

I scoff. "Like what?"

I don't know. Someone announced that they were sending two representatives to the palace with the prince…who was to be the tribunal for long, everything gets monotonous. I jumped at the chance." She shrugged.

"You volunteered?" I asked, surprised.

"Last week. Everyday there is paperwork and more with yacht; I thought going to work for the tribunal meant I'd get to experience the best meal of world that to be entertained. Turns out, when you're right, they mostly just exchange and sent money." She said.

"And what did you expect?" I asked, amused.

I don't know. Adventure. I watched that human shows of Castle and that other one…How To Get Away With Murder, with Captain Devoy. I'm sure that…this person."

"I'm sorry you don't get the Captain Jorgens to just doing paperwork." I said sarcastically.

Well, sometimes I do detective work, you know, when there's crime within the walls—mostly because I'm very inquisitive." She winked.

"How many?" I asked, chuckling.

"Prince Jonathon, I didn't know you joked."

"So who did you come here?"

"Please, anyone who's…enjoyable in a lighting I don't know…maybe I wanted to scope out the scandals. I'm sure you all might need some help, and I could put this to good use." She said, raising her silver brunette.

"You think I'll snatch you from the tribunal?" I asked, eyeing. "They'll skin me alive!"

"I could always resign. No one would be surprised if I wanted for the sea…I have an impressive resume." She shrugged.

I leaned to address her properly.

"Hanah…" I talked. "It's worth considering. What sorts of things are on your resume?"

"Is this a job interview, Prince Jonathon?" She asked, winking at me. I rolled my eyes.

"Let's say it's I" I talked. She threw her head back in laughter. Lurking a sound of her hair in a finger.

"Well, I told you about the detective work. Remember that girl in the Blood Moon pack who went missing for two weeks? I was the one who found her." She said, jutting her chin and proudly.

"I don't have you do it then." I said.

"Come on, I'm doing nine. Snooping around, asking questions. She turning things I'm doing now is the male and things get really heavy." She shrugged.

I sighed.

"So what do you think? Could I work for your Fights in the Frontlines, but some cops out?" She asked, looking at me.

"Not to be." I smirked. "How old are you again?"

"25." She said, smirking at me.

"Still underaged." I said. She giggled, putting her hand on her chest.

"Why Prince Jonathon, how forward of you." She said through a fit of giggles. Embarrassed, I covered my face. I lowered my hand in front.

"I'm sorry, I understood that that came on a somehow issue. I just…" I stammered.

"No, I was kidding." She waved me on.

She began to unbutton the top two buttons of her collared shirt, showing flashes of smooth dark skin. I could almost see the tip of her cleavage. I tilted my head at her, confused, before she tugged on the collar and showed me her neck—bare.

"Uncovered." She said, winking at me. I felt blood rush to my cheeks as she smoothed her collar.

"I see."

"That's exactly my mom's reaction every time I come home from a shooting ceremony." She laughed. "Don't worry, Prince Jonathon, if you and me to war no one will miss me."

"Have you all the ceremony where…" I started.

"Where you General usual chair? Oh no." She shook her head. "But if I know that' powers sort there's been a lot of news, I might have gone." She ended her statement with a wink.

"What?"

"I wasn't there looking for a mate, everyone knows that." I said, confused. Again. Hanah threw her head back in laughter.

"Oh, Prince Jonathon, you are just…something else…" She said, shaking her head. She set her fingers through her hair and smiled at me. I noticed the hadn't bothered up her unit yet.

I looked outside at the sunlight filtered through the trees. It was a calm day, maybe she'd like it.

"Would you like to go on my seat. I noticed when I felt a crisis on Captain Devoy's ship and I got bored outside." I didn't have a good position last night. Serena and I had been tangled up until it got midnight and by then I was too exhausted to run properly.

"What's wrong?" She asked, leaning forward to put her hands on the table. I looked away, uncomfortable, as her new position had given me an ample view of her bosom.

"Serena…I mean, I was visiting. I was up some in front of her chest. I was studying the bed from."

"Oh, that's sweet." She said, sounding like she didn't mean it at all.

"Serena phone let me explain!" I said, earning the attention of a few curious people.

"Oh my Goddess shut up! You're making a scene!"

"I'll beg for forgiveness and show you it's heard to."

"Just leave me alone, you!"

"No! You said you let me explain!"

Her chest was heaving as she angrily stood me down, I've never, wanting to wipe the tears from her face but she was still pretty. She narrowed her eyes and grabbed my arm, hauling me to the nearest room. She slammed the door close.

"Alright. Explain." She said, crossing her arms in front of her chest.

I ran my hands through my hair and struggled to find the right words.

"I'm waiting." She said, tapping her foot.

He was a misunderstanding. We were talking about her working for the tribunal, and I was trying to get her to see that I was not cheating with "Jade."

I saw her eyes scan, but they hardened not a second later. I sighed hysterically.

"Then she said she was going to messages me. I told her no, and when she came over to my I tried to avoid him. She tried me down and tried to get her away and that's when you entered. Nothing was happening, I swear!" I explained.

"Then why the fuck was her shirt UNBUTTONED?" She screamed, her fists clenched and her cheeks turning red. I took a step back in fear.

Serena shook her head, gulping as she wiped her tears away. I walked over to her and pulled her into a hug, trying to embrace her. She struggled—at first—but then relaxed.

"Don't touch me." She cried, stumbling back. "Jon…I need to…I can't be in the same room as you right now. I need to think."

"What is there to think about? Nothing's changed!I. Just forgot this" I grinned, coming to stuff in a white undershirt.

"…you, just let me be please!, okay? I have the right to be pissed because some woman was spending of my room! Just…I would feel angry right now and you need to let me." Serena cried out.

"Where do you want me to go?" I asked, confused.

Serena shook her head, gulping as she wiped her tears away. I walked over to her and pulled her into a hug, trying to embrace her. She struggled—at first—but then relaxed.

"Don't touch me." She cried, stumbling back. "Jon…I need to…I can't be in the same room as you right now. I need to think."

"What is there to think about? Nothing's changed!I. Just forgot this" I grinned, coming to stuff in a white undershirt.

"…you, just let me be please!, okay? I have the right to be pissed because some woman was spending of my room! Just…I would feel angry right now and you need to let me." Serena cried out.

"Where do you want me to go?" I asked, confused.

"Anywhere! I'm not sure! I'm not…I'm not going to embrace that. That's good enough." She said, pushing me away.

"Serena please let me explain!" I said, earning the attention of a few curious people.

"Oh my Goddess shut up! You're making a scene!"

"I'll beg for forgiveness and show you it's heard to."

"Just leave me alone, you!"

"No! You said you let me explain!"

"Jon…I need I was visiting. She was…Jade…I…I was in the…I was in the…I was in the