Serena Lancaster

I smiled, surveying the forest. Jon, Patrick, Valeen, and the other generals and I were under a thick canopy of the trees of the Lightning grounds. We were hosting a war game for the 21-year-old wolves about to undergo their Evaluation, and it was tense already. Twenty-four hours earlier, we set them free to run loose in the forest. The objective: for the first group to find a red flag, protect it, and bring it to them safely by 5pm.

"Isn't it weird seeing something like this while the rest of the packs prepare for war?" Patrick asked, tearing his ham sable to bizarre on the leaves.

"And, this might be the last time they're all kids together…" I sighed.

"Who's winning?" Serena's Ella asked, listening in.

The boys found the flag last night at around 10, but the girls stole it and ran midnight." General Kiran laughed.

"Awesome." I cocked my eyebrows playfully at Clayton. "Get ready to see ya, Cla-"

"Did you honestly bet money on this?" Jon growled.

I pet it. Presumed." I smiled apologetically.

"You're gonna bleed me dry." Jon sighed. "You have a history of losing bets."

"I hear ass your fault, and you don't get to joke about that– it's too soon."

I love it, Serena. It's been a year," Jon chuckled.

Uh Goddess –

A year had passed since the Claiming Ceremony. A full year since I became a princess– I was a Queen now. In twelve months, I successfully made the transition from planning to join the Eternal world to actually wanting to help the werewolf race.

I contemplated on the year that had passed. Being claimed, being brought to the palace, having a miscarriage, and training the she-wolves to fight. I had just let Serena, Kiran managed to Blood Moon, Valeen, and even Ella and Amelia, geared more tough on my father, and father in-law.

I also came more to the core of Fiona's Beta-ship with Michael. Over one feeds, was now enamored with a thing. A dog Did I just suddenly find myself in the middle of one of these raunchy historical novels? ;)

"Why so quiet all of a sudden?" Jon murmured, taking my hand to his and giving it a kiss.

"It's been a year…" I whispered. He bet me outside the tent. The others seemed preoccupied by eyeing on the teams as they set to be found in hard, so we walked until we spotted a familiar patch of yellow flowers.

"I don't know if I'm supposed to be smarter or stronger. I don't feel any of. Hmm, I just know I'm not the same girl I was last year." I murmured, crouching down to pet the yellow flowers. "Hello, Hector."

"What a task it has been," Jon sighed. I knew his life had been ushered as well. Feeding attacks, I nudged him on the shoulder.

"You know, if you waited a year, you could've claimed a Selena. You wouldn't have had to go on second hand." I joked. Jon grumbled, lunging at me. I tumbled back, and he put his arms around me as well rolled around the flower field. I lay on top of him, my head above his beating heart.

"I would've claimed you anyways." Jon murmured.

"No you wouldn't have, shut up." I mocked. At my words, he rolled on again until he was on top of me, pinning me down. His hand then chuckled my wrists above my head and I was powerless to move.

"Take it back." Jon hissed, raising his other hand and wiggling it its.

Uh-no.

"I am…" I started. "Don't you dare…"

"One last chance." He warned. I bared my teeth at him threateningly. He growled and kissed my cheeks before shouting for my name.

"I JON STORM." I rolled through the graphics. "NOT IN FRONT OF OUR BABY."

"I'm sure Hector doesn't mind." Jon teased, continuing his tickling attack.

"FINE YOU WIN, YOUR MAJESTY!" I shouted. Jon triumphantly kissed.

"Yes. I." Jon demanded.

"You would've claimed me no matter what." I said, rolling my eyes. Jon hunted himself up and helped me up as well, brushing down his pants.

"You're such a douche, your majesty! I'm not. Jon growled.

"You know I don't like you calling me that." He said. I smirked.

"I only call you that when I'm pissed, have you noticed, King Jonathan?"

"Unfortunately."

Just then, we heard a bunch of screams somewhere west. Jon and I pricked up.

"FUCK!" We heard a high-pitched shout, accompanied by a bunch of other female screaming. Instinctively, I knew it was Fiona's voice accompanied by thundering paws and feet across the forest floor.

"My team's about to win!" I joked excitedly, pushing past Jon and running towards Serena camp. Jon ran as well. When we made it to the tent, the others were already running their teams to see who had the flag.

Even Valeen seemed to be in a good mood.

It wouldn take a long time before she would be very comfortable with being around a lot of people. She still flinched whenever the men got too loud, but Patrick's presence reassured her. He was totally unbothered.

"THERE THEY ARE!" General Ella shouted.

I grabbed my binoculars and stared at the running forms. I gasped. "One of the boys has the flag!" I cried. General Jon. pumped his fist in the air. I could see Patrick grabbing his phone, probably to text Fiona.

"WAIT THAT BLONDE GIRL SNATCHED IT FROM HIM!" Patrick shouted.

The excitement I grew as we watched our team run towards us. It was a few skirmishes, and just as the boys were about to be victorious, a brown wolf lunged and captured the flag between its paws.

The wolf came barreling down base camp and touched the tattoo proven. We didn't have time to react to what was going on. Valeen's stained teenage girl's clutching a red flag right in her chest.

"We won." She croaked. The rest of the boys and girls ran towards base camp and stacked to a halt. The girls screamed in happiness, jumping up and down. The boys looked like they were confused as to what happened. Jon and I looked at each other, and I shrugged.

"And I'll be!" General Ella roared in laughter. "The girls won! Great job, though boys."

Looking at the boys, they didn't seem to be too preoccupied by their loss. They celebrated alongside the girls. It was so endearing to watch.

"Congratulations, ladies! You'll certainly blow them pantsfalls away." I grinned, hugging each of my girls.

"Thank you so much, Princess Serena!" They chorused. I waved their thanks away.

"That was all you, girls. Well done!" I said, my eyes brimming with tears. "Come, let's get you all fed."

Does this mean we'll go with you to the ceremony?" One of the girls excitedly asked.

"Wait, what? Who told you about that?" I asked, frowning.

"Well, we're in the same groups but" Another girl shrugged. I threw my head back in laughter.

"You each get up. certificate for ice cream. Claim it on your evaluation." I smirked. They all groaned. "Sorry girls, you're still 21 sem. I can't blatant you guys across the border."

The girls and boys continued talking animatedly about their adventure in the forest. It was so cute, being with all of children. If they were our future, then we don't have anything to worry about.

"Who did you have in mind, love?" Jon asked, thumbing through the pages of names of wolves with silver ranks or higher.

"Hmm…let's see. I need people who I'm comfortable with – people who understand how I work. I was thinking my friends Jenn and Christopher, they have silver ranks. Melanie and Paula can run the operation back to Alpha Adam's territory, we're gonna need them and we're where we can't see." I murmured, pulling out my friends' files.

"I think that's a good idea. Jon said. "Your friends are both in the Pack. They'll keep you safe."

"Jon asked Priya Patel." I said, fishing for his out. I opened the folder and saw her pretty, familiar face. I suddenly remembered how she was the one helping during the Claiming, and how she so loved to watch my earrings.

"The Alpha's daughter? Really?" Jon curiously asked.

"She's a tough one– silver rank. Unmated, seems like I would've won shaped of any Beta I'd chuckled, giving Jon the file. Jon rolled his eyes.

"Alright. She's good in close combat, I'll give her that." Jon nodded. "I'll have them in a gathering by tomorrow for the briefing."

"Which of your men will you send with me?" I asked, hesitant about the answer.

"My agreed three of my men, right?"

"Yeah, I thought about that…" I sheepishly said.

"Serena…" Jon warningly said.

"Hear me out. Christopher's a mate. Those women probably have a box of mates, so we should all the very best have an equal number of mates and females."

Jon sighed, but thankfully he nodded understandingly.

"Fine then. Darlen. You have good rapport with him, and I trust him with your life. Again because he's a mate, he's the last of the north better than anyone else except for Valeen."

"You're giving me one of your best agents? Are you sure"

"As for the Queens Serena, if I could, I'd send a battalion with you." Jon harshly exhaled. "But since I know that's a bad idea."

"Thank you for trusting me with this, Jon. Not every King, Heck, not every mateworld when their mate this." I said, cupping my hand on Jon's cheek. I loved resting my head on his shoulder. He was so much taller than me, and I loved how it through our bond as I felt his warmth.

"Of course I am. I'm married, locking down to world war conclude– He was looking at me way too intensely. I felt his warm lips press against mine. I loosened into the kiss, melting as my mouth moved his neck.

Jon's strong arms crushed my form to his and he put his hands on my bum and it. et me up, wrapping me legs around his waist. He trailed kisses down my neck and pushed off the tent. He sliced, setting my down. He fumbled with the buttons on the back of my dress and I swatted his hands away playfully.

"Jon…we have…work. to do. I tried to bite back a moan as his hands rushed my body.

"The king demands your attention, my queen." He growled against my skin.

Holy shit

I threw my head back and let myself enjoy this intimate moment with my mate. War was coming, and I needed to feel my mate's skin against mine to reassure myself that everything would be okay.

Thank you for being here on such short notice," I exhaled nervously. I stood beside Valeen as she scanned a map of the north. I inwardly smiled, she was definitely doing so much better. When she first got here she was extra skittish that I wondered how she ever got the guts to even ask for further.

She revealed her father had been poisoning her mind. He taught her that werewolves were dangerous, that they were monsters. And that she should never trust anyone. Even though she was in close contact us, she had indeed condemnation and rejection from both sides.

Bravo.

When can't get the chance to prove my bravery?

Shade, she was realizing that no one in the palace meant her harm – well, not with Patrick always lurking beside her ready to take out any perceived threat.

"She's a girl. She can't be brought her to a place where she's fighting." Valeen argued, her voice rising in pitch. I sighed inwardly, preparing to face the hostility to be faced.

"I said her combine with her therapy. It's gonna take time." I said, continuing pushing my hand on the shoulder.

"She wasn't like this when it was just the two of us, hiking in forests when we first met." She had to have used Blackmail.

"She's been taught all her life that we all want to hurt her. She was probably surprised to have any treated her– probably why she fell in love with you." I smiled.

"I don't want her to be like this."

Whenever Patrick wasn't around, she seemed to look around nervously, as if an animal would maul her anytime. But now, she seemed to be more relaxed, to the point that objective of this meeting was myself and not myself.

If only the other wolves in the room would stop staring at her but thankfully Valeen didn't notice.

"Valeen's statement included details about a she-wolves rogue females we kept prisoner and I specific loved more when to leave Varsahm's camp. A gathering has been aware of this. mistakenwhile almost a year. but thanks to Valeen, we can now take action."

"While the fighting is going on in the central and western borders wars…" I pointed at the scale rested in the middle of the north. "I will be leading a team east, across the border to rescue children and she wolves from this den. I'm hoping you will all join me."

I paused to hear their reactions.

There was a quick silence, followed by a chorus of talking. Questions were being thrown, and I didn't know where to start.

"QUIET!" Jon roared, causing everyone to shut up. "Your Queen is speaking."

There was a chorus of murmurs saying. sorry. your majesty.one slowly raised her hand.

"I'm sorry, you want us all to head to this den across the borderand leave these females to safety…all of us?" Jane asked.

Melanie and Paula will be running in operation from base camp in Alpha Adam's territory, relaying our movements to Jon and the generals. In case anything happens to our maps, they'll have our exact and rates. Jenn, Christopher, Priya, Ayne Bet yen, and Darlen– you will all be going with me to the actual rescuing."

Silence engulfed. My friends looked at each other and I knew what they were thinking. They were thinking about the last time we got into a fight and the prospect of getting used to war. That girl was not a fighter and she was barely over an Alpha's daughter. But she was with the Queen.

However, I saw something else in their eyes that made my confidence soar. pride.

"How many females are there?" Darlen asked. I looked at Valeen…

"Twenty-feittle ones, three sick ones," Valeen murmured. "When the last rogue, my mother, left Beast all the children sent to the nurturing center. Only the sick ones remained with me."

Wait, where do the children usually stay?" Christopher asked.

"Until they turn eighteen? Hmm." She pointed at a cave in the deep north where there was several center. Christopher went snow his breath.

I spoke up.

"I realize this is a lot to ask, and you are all entitled to say no, but I have known about the state of these females for a long time now and I've always wanted to help them. I've been working with the Alpha Council to find a way to rescue them and bring them to safety. Now, I'm not going to force anyone to come with me. That anyone strategy, and this is the best we've come up with."

There was silence.

"You will all have to miss the Claiming ceremony, but I promise you a month of alone on leave to this countries. So, there's no Alpha Adam's pack in two days. Then we wait until the generals give us the go."

Valeen gave me the nervous! way and I paused to so to them. "Our votes."

"Paula and I will stay in Alpha Adam's pack?" Melanie asked.

"I need you to keep an updated on what's happening to the this of the refugees. Also, Alpha Adam's territory will be relaying to the rest of the pack. Keep me updated on what's happening."

"And it's just going to be the six of us actually trekking across the border?" Darlen asked, his hand at the bronze bracelet, nervously staring at the others silver ones.

"Yes. It sounds gross and almost less attention." I said. "Jon was adamant that we protect, Serena."

Darlen was surprised, and bowed down respectfully to Jon.

"Your right, Kensington." Jenn murmured. Darlen and Ayden! Yes yet chuckled. "Can we do this?"

"The King seems to think so." I winked at Jon.

"You're so bowed with this prince! Your majesty!" Agent Bet yen asked.

Jon took a deep breath and addressed everyone. The talking suddenly came to a halt and everyone looked to him first.

"Protect the Queen at all costs! I am trusting you all to take care of the most precious thing in my life. Bring her back to me safe, and I will make sure you are all handsomely rewarded." Jon growls said.

"Are you with me?" I hesitantly asked.

One by one, they said their yes's. I sighed in relief.

"We leave for the Northern Pack in two days– 5:30 am sharp. Pack light." I said, putting my hand over my quickly beating heart.

This is really happening.

A/N
