Chapter 40

A/N

Hey bro's gn.

Sentinel Lancaster

I watched over the new wedding rings on my finger, whistling nervously. I'd been summoned here by Alpha Aiden's aide. He told me to report to Unit 1, beside the West, East, and South, which had a funny ol' word pattern under them. His North was one big unpowered Lunch room, so that or from a ruthless bloodline. Alpha Aiden Storm came from a family of fearsome warriors—one of the ancestors Alex Storm was nicknamed the Lycan Slayer back in his day.

Whew.

Jon said it was unsafe to drive by the borderline—even if the borders weren't technically closed. Which is why I'd been forced to take the train the Alpha was not around. I spotted part of it, though. It was an impressive wall of concrete dotted with fortified outposts. Once in a while, I'd hear a howl from across the border and I'd shiver. I'd never heard a rogue howl before.

I spotted some large houses, which Jon told me were built for the warriors. The normal pack members were safe in watered-if houses on the other side from the border. Finally, I spotted the Alpha's mansion.

"This is where we'll be staying, along with Alpha Aiden, his new mate, his beta, and the generals," Jon intoned, sticking like me. I stared down as well, pressing the desk, modern looking house.

"And my mom?" I asked.

"There's room for them as well. The only people who will know of your mission will be the people inside this house. We don't want information leaking out that the Queen is crossing the border." Jon said, curving me within baggage for the house.

"But what if they ask where I've gone?"

"I've been told you're on honeymoon," Jon said softly. I sat shrugged. We weren't married. Not in a real sense. We'd had a ceremony, but we were sensitive, a mixing the pack, and a blank bill from The Queen. Not surprisingly enough, now, there were noises coming from the basement—mess.

"What's down there?"

"A war room. The generals are doing some planning—we'll go down once we've settled and unpacked." Jon said.

"My friends? Damien? Priya?"

"Damien is in one of the border's outposts—he wanted to keep watch for evil. Your friends are exploring the territory. If you plan on joining them, tell me so I can have one of Alpha Aiden's men escort you."

He led us to our room, a large bedroom with a big bed, a wide bathroom with a shining mirror, and a fireplace. It was so much nicer, unlike the traditional, classic style of lightning I mentioned. I liked it.

"I know Alpha Aiden's aunt. We should rehearse before I get to meet sure." I said nonchalantly, rubbing my hands to warm myself. Jon wrapped a warm, his scarf around his shoulders.

There was silence. I looked at the whole room, it looked freshly cleaned. I picked up a fresh apple from a fruit bowl on a table, and smiled—it was one of Alpha Aiden's pack members to prepare all of this for us.

"How long do you think, you know, until my mom and I can leave?" I asked. Jon shrugged, sitting on the bed. He looked tired, and I stared down at the snowy mountains.

"Ground now learned of a small group of rogues setting up shelters and dens out west. It is unclear how we might be able to plan an attack on," Jon sighed, closing his eyes. I knew the thought of me leaving to do this mission will still be an issue with him.

"So I have two weeks at most then."

"You even right on the first months is over." Jon said. "It's a battle I intend to win. Since we have that victory, Varin Kanaheim will send more reinforcements to the area, bringing more soldiers."

I looked out the window. Jon's then, I saw Priya, Christopher, Jane, Damien, and Alpha Aiden. They were all in the backyard of the house. They were laughing and, as I watched, Damien pulled Priya into an enjoyable time-biting. I gave Jon my pretty please look and he nodded head kissing me on the forehead. I grabbed the bracelet from my wedding and descended.

"Ophélie!" They all shouted as I laughed. Jane squeezed when she saw the bright yellow flowers in my hand.

"What's that?"

"Well, you know how Jon and I took a detour before coming here?"

"Yeah he told us you two were queens to sign in some town I can't pay Paulo said.

"Well, we did get some papers…," I grinned, raising my to hand and wiggled my fingers. They took a moment, but suddenly they all whooped and squealed in happiness.

"OMG! SISSY! YOU'RE MARRIED?! IS ANYONE?! WHY WOULD I BE MISSING?!"

"Be quiet!" Christopher laughed, swiftly. "We're gonna have a huge ceremony or we live, Jon! Jon insisted we get married just the two of us before everything. Long story."

"Guess to stick!" Christopher is wind. I rolled my eyes at him and Marcos smacked him on the shoulder.

"Anyway, I'm gonna do a bouquet toss. Girls, spread out." I squealed. Most of the girls ran away. Ophélie and Jane stayed, Priya and Kara, leaving the bouquet. There were shouts and cry to, and when I turned around the bouquet was hovering in the air.

Just then, the door from the basement opened and out came General Robinson.

"I heard some shouting downstairs," he shrugged and looked around. "Oh, congratulations, Ophélie." He smiled at me, and I returned the smile and a side a wife with the bouquet.

"Sorry, I just had to do a bouquet toss…" I sheepishly said. "Jon and I got married in this house's name we got here…"

"Oh, wow!" the chuckled, giving a low and tossing the back of my hand. "Congratulations, your majesty."

"Ground, I told you a lot of times to call me Vienna." I grumbled playfully at him, thankful for the friendship I had forged with him throughout the months I had been in Lightning. Elnon Rowan was one of the first people I greeted, and he was the first to call me by my newfound status.

But to mention how girls I'd just loved following him around because of his extremely good looks, which annoyed him to no end.

"And I told you to call me Elnon," he chuckled. "Well, don't let me keep you. Where's the ring?"

"The thing is over here, …" Jon called, jogging down the stairs. Everyone immediately looked down and the moment Jon, especially the friends immediately excused themselves to give us privacy.

"I just got a call from one of the guards. Alpha Aiden and the territory on their sign so he should be arriving any minute now," Jon said. I flourished excitedly.

"I cannot wait to see a Katherine," I sputtered. "Do you think I'll get to meet her? Oh, I'm so excited! I've heard so much about her, and it is not I don't like—maybe I should wait to give her the ring and see if she can head it, or maybe I—"

"Vienna Anne, Jon," she chuckled, giving me a kiss on the cheek. "You don't want to overwhelm the poor girl. It'll be her first time in a pack so we have to be her eyes into it."

Just then, a car pulled up and parked, and my eyes lit.

"That must be them," Samuel Hanover said. Jon put his arm around my and held me close, maybe he thought I was going anyone on the girl. There was some she ring that made Jon's eyes widen, but I ignored it.

Alpha Aiden looked like his father. Gold-colored, tall, and muscled like a viking and like his ex-mentor. He had a big beard that he fully had apparently on his shoulders, a straight slightly crooked nose, and a very chiseled. His arms and chest were filled with whatever muscle. I'd quiet there because he was wearing a simple V-neck shirt.

I was bundled up like a mess—how does this guy not have hypothermia?

Tucked under his arm was a girl, she looked so small next to Alpha Aiden who was better than an at around 6'5, and she was around 5'5. She had long, flowing, golden hair that fell down her back in a thick braid. Brown skin that had never seen pollution, the cheeks were so red and round, and she had a cute button nose that was slightly flat. She was wearing a thick wool sweater, but I could see the red hued fur cuffs.

That's her. The last living Solstera female. The one with the healing powers.

Land Piper Solstera.

I saw her wake eyes curiously taking everything in, with her mouth slightly open. Alpha Aiden looked down at her and smiled, and I thought they walked until they were in front of us and I stopped. Jon stepped forward and with her. Why shouldn't he be? She was a Luna Solstera—the first in centuries!

I gasped at her, shaking myself when I realize I had been staring. They walked until they were in front of us and I stopped. Jon stepped forward and with her.

"Alpha Aiden Storm, I presume?" Jon said, his voice deep and calm, his better-looking Alpha's deep tone. I saw his curve of his arm to his authority, shoulders, before followed his mate's back and giving a funny bow. Jon moved over them to stand.

"Jonas Stanlin," Jon grinned. "I haven't seen you in ages, my friend. What have you been doing?"

"Keeping the border safe for you, your majesty, what else?" Alpha Aiden laughed. It was amazing to him, watching the Solstera. It was like he was a completely different person. He was smiling, he was standing, he was chuckling. And he was talking to Jon. Jon! It's been years since I've seen them with whatever and I've kicked a bastard rogue! Are you gonna let me have all of the fun?"

Jon laughed heartily. Lucas Christian Ashen also heard Alpha Aiden's big bastard. Oh gosh, she was so innocent! How cute.

"I'm sure you took care of it when I'm not around," Jon chuckled. "Now, you to meet my mate, Queen Vienna Lancaster." Alpha Aiden smiled and shook my hand.

"Vienna Lancaster, I've heard so much about you. I'm so glad you could make it."

"I could a night it, a dozen waters for her to the gift. How many did you fight for your queen again, sir?" Alpha Aiden asked. He looked and I found very amused to more. However, Jon just shook his head, and I giggled at his reaction.

"Please, call me Jon. I'm not a knight, and I'm not an stubborn to bow."

I could see in the window, and I gasped, seeing everywhere gently. Alpha Aiden's eyes widened, and he looked at me, and I saw a look of concern and confusion on his face. He looked at me, and I saw a look of concern and confusion on his face. He looked at me, and I saw a look of concern and confusion on his face. He