

Protected Ex-wife Chapter 23 - Chapter 23 An Unexpected Slap

Chapter 23: Chapter 23 An Unexpected Slap

While cursing under his breath, Mr. Guzman left with his two men. On the other hand, Charlie turned to look at the dishevelled Elsie and said expressionlessly, "Mr. Guzman has already let you off. What are you still doing here?"

Elsie didn't say anything. She tidied up her torn clothes awkwardly but it was futile. Finally, she gave up and merely wiped the blood off her lips before walking towards the exit. When she brushed past Charlie, he uttered coldly, "You should know your limits. I hope you can behave yourself next time."

Listening to the indifference in his voice, she suddenly felt a surge of anger rising from the bottom of her heart. The next second, her palm struck his face. As Charlie had never dreamed that she would hit him, he didn't manage to dodge.

The slap was so tight that Elsie could feel the numbness in her hand. After that, she turned around and wanted to leave. He grabbed hold of her hand and growled, "You want to leave just like that?"

"Let go!"

Charlie's cheek was burning with pain; he was so angry that his lips were trembling. He couldn't believe that she had repaid his kindness with revenge! How was she so sure that he wouldn't do anything to her?

Elsie must have really thought too highly of herself. He yanked her into his arms and reached out to pinch her chin. When their eyes met, her gaze was filled with hatred, which provoked him even further.

On what grounds was she entitled to hate him?

Charlie's grip was forceful, turning the skin on Elsie's chin purple. Nevertheless, she endured the pain and didn't make a sound. Meanwhile, her feet kept kicking at his legs heavily, but he didn't intend to let go of her despite the discomfort.

In the midst of their entanglement, his hand touched her chest. Elsie's body shrank in shock, yet his hand didn't stop as he reached deeper into her bra.