

Levi Garrison: The Return of the God of War [The Protector] Chapter 1206

They turned around and saw a figure clad in a black hood that covered the face.

Levi chuckled at the sight of that.

He didn't expect that the person coming to his aid was his former enemy, Hades.

Hades was wounded once, and Levi had his men tend to his injuries. However, he disappeared after he was fully healed.

Bam! Bam! Bam!

Despite L Nation being a small country, Hades was still a formidable fighter and dispatched all of Lucas's men in less than a minute.

"Thank you so much..."

Zoey and the others thanked him profusely.

"I've always respected the strong, and the God of War is the one I respect the most! From now on, I will protect him with my life!" Hades said with a determined look on his face.

Levi simply stared at him in silence.

Sylas let out a sigh.

Man, that must really suck for Levi! I mean, having to rely on Hades to protect him? Talk about a huge blow to his ego!

There were a lot fewer troublemakers dropping by now that everyone knew Hades was dead set on protecting Levi, but things weren't that peaceful in the other countries.

Winsor had eliminated dozens of criminal organizations within just one week after being the new God of War.

He was doing so in order to establish his dominance overseas and instill fear in everyone's hearts.

Being a violent person in nature, he was determined to prove himself stronger than Levi.

His method was very effective, and even Tenichi found him to be quite a headache.

With Levi out of the picture, Winsor soon built up a solid reputation for himself in Erudia.

Those who used to support Levi had gravitated towards Winsor as they only recognized him as the current God of War.

Not only did they practically forget about Levi, but they were also criticizing him for his downfall.

"The previous God of War was simply too conservative! That's why he lost and fell!"

"Look at how powerful the new God of War is! He took the initiative, and now our enemies are cowering in fear!"

"That's right! If only Winsor had taken over the position sooner... Erudia would probably be several times more powerful than it is now!"

"I know right? It's all Levi's fault! Winsor is the best God of War ever!"

Levi simply smiled as he heard what they said.

It's hard to find people who would stay by your side unconditionally when you're down in the dumps. Right now, Hades and Benny are the only ones apart from my mother, wife, and daughter.

"While you were staking your life on the frontlines, those you protected were enjoying themselves in the back. They pretended to support you during your glory days, and left you the moment you fall from power! In fact, it is them who are most likely to stab you in the back now! Some people simply aren't worthy of your protection!" Zoey said with a wry smile.

Benny came over to give him a follow-up examination two weeks later, but the results were disappointing.

Levi's condition showed no signs of improvement, and his fate of being bedridden for life seemed to be sealed.

What an unfortunate guy...

Benny let out a sigh as he looked at Levi.

He was about to leave when Winsor's disciple, Zar, showed up at the door.

Levi chuckled.

It's never good news if Zar is here! Something big must've happened...

Levi Garrison: The Return of the God of War [The Protector] Chapter 1207

Zar glanced at Levi, and hesitated when he saw Zoey and the others.

"It's okay, they can hear whatever you have to say. What is it, Zar?" Levi said.

After everything that has happened, I'm sure Zoey should be able to handle anything that comes our way.

Zar had a stern look on his face as he spoke, "There are two reasons for my visit today, first being to retrieve the Paragon Seal of Honor which you should've handed over a long time ago."

Zar glared at Levi coldly.

Winsor may be the new God of War, but the Paragon Seal of Honor is still in Levi's possession. That seal is the symbol of the God of War, and only those who carry it are worthy of commanding the Iron Brigade!

Levi nodded. "No problem, I'll hand the seal over later. Now, what's the second reason?"

A huge wave of energy surged through Zar's body, filling the entire room with his murderous intent.

"Levi Garrison, do you admit to your crimes?" Zar shouted, frightening Zoey and the others with his sudden outburst.

What's going on here?

Levi narrowed his eyes and returned the cold stare. "And what crimes would I be admitting to?"

"Treason!" Zar yelled angrily.

"What? Treason?"

Zoey and Sylas were dumbfounded.

Knowing Levi, there's no way he'd do such a thing! He would rather die than betray his country!

"That's impossible..."

"Y-Yeah, that's definitely impossible..."

Everyone began to panic, but Levi shushed them and signaled them to calm down.

"And how have I committed treason?" Levi looked at him curiously.

"You've wiped out the Blood King Palace completely five years ago, right? No surviving minions?"

Levi nodded, as he had indeed killed off every single one of them back then.

"Then how would you explain the sudden revival of the Blood King Palace last year?"

Zar kept his sharp gaze fixated on Levi.

"I..."

Levi was unable to come up with an explanation as even he didn't know the answer to that question.

The Blood King Palace had mysteriously returned, and they were much stronger than before.

"Oh, you don't know? Well, we do! It's all because of you! You're in cahoots with the Blood King Palace, and you've been betraying Erudia this entire time! You didn't wipe out the Blood King Palace back then, did you? You made everyone think that they were gone, but they've actually been secretly growing in power! That's why they're so much stronger now! We have solid evidence of your conspiracy with the Blood King Palace, Levi!"

Levi let out a chuckle when he heard what Zar said.

I knew they are gonna bring up the Blood King Palace... It's the perfect crime to frame me for because I have no way of proving my innocence!

"I bet you wouldn't even attack them if it weren't for the Dragonites ordering the strike, huh?" Zar sneered. "Levi Garrison, your acts of treason by conspiring with the Blood King Palace have led to huge losses in many organizations. What do you have to say for yourself?"

Levi refused to say anything further as he knew it was a pointless struggle.

Someone had set him up, so accepting the punishment was his only option.

"What will my punishment be?" Levi asked with a smile.

"In view of your past contributions, you will be spared the death penalty. Instead, you are banished from Erudia from this moment on! You have three days to leave the country or you will be forcibly deported!" Zar said coldly.

Those words hit Zoey like a sledgehammer.

They framed Levi just so they could banish him from Erudia? How could they do such a cruel thing? This is simply unacceptable!

Levi Garrison: The Return of the God of War [The Protector] Chapter 1208

This is obviously a set-up! A conspiracy with the sole purpose of driving Levi out of Erudia so he would be vulnerable to assassinations!

Zoey smiled wryly at the thought of that.

"My husband is a magnanimous man who has dedicated his life to the protection of the country and its people, and yet this is how they repay his deeds? Destroying his reputation with a false accusation and banishing him from the very country he protected? What a joke! Hahahaha..."

Zoey burst out into a sad and bitter laughter.

So this is how it will end for the God of War, huh? How tragic...

Zar sneered. "How is it a false accusation if we have solid evidence to prove it? The Blood King Palace is the most powerful criminal organization in the world guilty of practically every heinous crime in history! Anyone caught working with them is to be executed, and Levi is no exception! You should be thankful that Winsor took pity in him and decided to only banish him instead!"

Winsor was actually aware of the dangers Levi would face if he left Erudia, but he didn't find Levi worthy of his concern.

"I'm not here to seek your opinion on the matter, Levi. I'm simply here to inform you of the decision that's been made! Now, where's the seal?" Zar asked coldly.

"Give him the seal, Zoey."

Zoey did as told and handed Zar the Paragon Seal of Honor.

"Remember, you only have three days to leave the country or I'll kick you out myself!"

Soon, all of Erudia heard about Levi's conspiracy with the Blood King Palace, and the entire nation was in an uproar.

Everyone hurled abuse at Levi for being the biggest traitor in the country's recorded history.

Some of the people took matters into their own hands and found where Levi was currently residing.

They gathered outside the house and shouted at him.

"Erudia has no room for traitors!"

"Get out of here, you b*stard!"

Zoey was on the verge of breaking down when she heard the angry mob outside.

"What do we do, Levi? Are we going to just let them have their way? Is leaving Erudia really our only option?" She asked.

Sylas shook her head. "There's nothing else we can do right now."

"Sylas is right. Given how determined they are to get rid of me, I'd say resistance is futile."

Levi was rather calm and collected.

“So we’re just gonna leave, then?”

But... This is unfair! It’s so unfair!

“Yes, for the time being.”

“In that case, we’re going together!” Zoey said.

“No, you guys stay here. I’ll bring you guys over once I’ve settled down. You’ll be a lot safer here with the protection of the Lehman family.”

“But isn’t it dangerous for you to be out there all by yourself?” Zoey was very worried.

“There’s a very safe island that I can go to lay low. Given my current physical condition, I doubt they’d even deem me a threat worth killing. Besides, I’ve got Hades to protect me!”

After a lot of coaxing, Levi was able to persuade Zoey into staying behind.

“We’ll leave tomorrow!”

Again, word got out really fast about the God of War being banished from Erudia the next day.

Levi Garrison: The Return of the God of War [The Protector] Chapter 1209

All his enemies from overseas took great pleasure in hearing that, especially those who were dying to get their revenge on him.

Tenichi and a group of men were gathered on an island.

“Levi Garrison... You’re finally being banished from Erudia, eh?” Tenichi smiled gleefully.

He was the one behind everything that had happened.

Levi remained a threat to all of his enemies overseas for as long as he was alive, and they wouldn't be able to rest until they got rid of him completely.

Winsor saw an opportunity when he discovered the "evidence" of Levi conspiring with the Blood King Palace, and he seized that opportunity immediately.

"Levi is going to leave Erudia tomorrow. We can make our move as soon as he steps out of the country's borders, and we wouldn't even have to be sneaky about it!" Tenichi sneered.

"You're right, sir! Mr. Finch will send us the route that Levi takes on his way out of the country soon!"

"Hahaha! He sure is great help in getting rid of Levi!"

Tenichi broke into a sinister grin.

"Make sure all preparations are complete! We must kill Levi as soon as he leaves Erudia!"

Ensuring that Levi was truly dead was the only way to ease their worries.

It was soon the next day.

"Don't worry, Levi! I've asked my godfather to have these elite fighters escort you to your destination! Just get us over there once you've settled down, okay?" Zoey said while pointing at the group of elite fighters from the Lehman family standing behind her.

She had really wanted to leave with him, but decided not to as she would only be a liability to him in the event of an attack.

"The Lehman family has also arranged for someone to receive you upon arrival, so everything will be fine!"

Zoey wiped her tears as she helped Levi into the car.

I'll head over there with Evie once he's settled down!

"Mom, Zoey... Don't worry, I'll be back soon! Take good care of Evie for me!" Levi said with a smile.

Zar had come over to supervise him. "You're never coming back here, Levi! Don't even dream about it!"

"If that's the case, we'll just spend the rest of our lives overseas. Either way works fine for us!"

Emma and Zoey broke down in tears.

"The God of War is innocent!" Sylas shouted.

Zar chuckled and pointed at Hades. "Funny how you say that when you have Hades of L Nation protecting Levi on this trip! It's obvious that Levi has been conspiring against Erudia with these foreigners!"

"You..."

Both Hades and Sylas were speechless with anger upon hearing that.

"That's enough, you guys!" Levi shouted.

Even Hades has become evidence of my treachery...

With that, Levi began heading North towards the borders of Erudia.

After a lengthy drive, they arrived at the border and were greeted by a cold and barren wasteland.

Zar had personally escorted them to the border. "This is as far as I'll go, Levi. You're on your own from here. Once you step past that border, you're no longer allowed to set foot in Erudia!"

Levi Garrison: The Return of the God of War [The Protector] Chapter 1210

It was a day of desolation and grief.

The time had finally come for Erudia's God of War to be exiled.

Levi smirked. "Tell Winsor Campbell to watch his back. He'd better work hard to fulfill his duties to Erudia. If he proves to be unworthy of that seal, I'll be back to pull him off his throne!"

Zar broke into laughter. "You? Of all people?"

"Look who's blabbering. Nothing more than a mere loser defeated in the hands of my Master, just like every other opponent... Just hurry up and get your ass out of here!"

Zar thought what he had just heard must have been the world's biggest joke ever.

You're barely even a worthy opponent for Master even in your prime.

How dare you even speak of bringing him down now that you're crippled?

That's just impossible!

Levi retained his smile. He signaled for the fleet to carry on.

"Hold it right there!"

A loud voice hollered from above. A few jets were descending from the sky in an enormous roar.

Those private jets were recognizable. Just as they landed in a piercing screech, all the airstairs were pulled out in a simultaneous beat. A handful of men descended onto the ground in swift but almost unison steps.

One of them was seated in a wheelchair pushed by another man.

It was none other than Tyrone Garrison.

A few men followed closely behind as he approached closer and stopped in front of the troop escorting Levi.

“Levi Garrison! To think that this day would befall you! Where’s all that glamorous air of authority you once had?”

Tyrone bellowed with laughter.

“I’ll soon be able to stand on my feet, but look at you – bedridden for the rest of your life! Or should I say... You probably won’t even have much time to lay crippled in bed like this! The moment you land a foot outside the border, there’ll be people coming for you right away!”

The rest of the Garrison clan laughed along. “It’s retribution indeed!”

Tyrone saw the Lehman family’s elite fighters behind Levi. He beckoned to them. “You guys over there!”

“Aren’t you all from the Lehman family? Here to accompany him on this trip? Forget it, just go home!” He chided.

“No. We shall obey the orders of Ms. Lopez.” They answered.

“Not a very obedient bunch, are you? How about this... If you go back as I say, every single one of you gets ten million from me! Otherwise, each of your precious little family will fall into my hands once I return.”

He threatened and lured at the same time.

There were over 10 men from the Lehman family. They glanced at each other with a hint of hesitation. One by one, they began to retreat.

"Hahaha..."

The Garrison clan burst into laughter.

The Lehman elites weren't as steadfast and loyal as expected. Levi was seemingly left all alone...

Save for Hades who remained unshaken by his side.

"One more over there! Aren't you going back with the rest? What's the point of sticking together with a cripple who's being banished from Erudia?" Tyrone looked at Hades in amusement.

"If you leave as well, I'll reward you a hundred million!" He tempted.

No man should be able to resist a tenfold of what he offered earlier to those guys from the Lehmans.

Hades remained silent.

"One billion!" He offered again.

"Three billion!"

"Five billion!"

Tyrone was willing to offer any price just to force Levi into a dead corner.

Hades was unmoved.

Vrooom!

Tyrone's offers were answered by nothing but a rumble of the car engine.

Hades sped past the Garrison troupe. In the blink of an eye, the car disappeared into the horizon as it crossed over the borders of Erudia.

He had already vowed to protect Levi even at the cost of his life. At this point, a monetary reward meant nothing.

“Hahaha... This is interesting!”

Tyrone laughed out loud.

The Garrison clan joined in his laughter as they watched Levi’s defeat.

With danger lurking all around, they could only imagine how disastrous his journey would be with only one guard by his side.

“Levi Garrison... What a pity! Even a stray dog lives a better life than you on this day!”

Tyrone felt a gush of euphoria from the bottom of his heart.

This was the best day ever. It felt so much better than killing Levi Garrison himself.

Zar shook his head helplessly as he observed.

What a downfall for a hero who was once hailed as the God of War.

Levi laid quietly in the car as he looked out the window. The Erudian borders shrank further into the distance.

Lost in thoughts, he continued to stare without a blink.

“The God of War shouldn’t be worrying so much! I understand that feeling of not being able to return home.”

Hades chuckled bitterly as he drove on.

“It’s not that bad, you know... At least your family will be coming along. It’ll eventually get better once we’ve settled down.” He added, seeing how sober Levi remained the whole time.

He didn’t know what else to say that could possibly make the exiled God of War feel better.

“Settled down, you say?” Levi let out a mocking laugh. “Danger is literally all around us from here on out.”

Just as he finished speaking, Hades’ expression changed.

He sensed a presence ahead of them.